The indications are, according to The Journal of the American Medical Association, that plague infection may persist in fleas for one or two months in cool weather, and subsequently give rise to an epidemic. In this connection it is not without interest to recall that animals have been infected by the bites of bugs which had previously been allowed to feed on animals that were dying of the plague. According to new observations by Bacot for a percentage of bugs and probably all newly hatched ones, a meal of septicaemic blood from a mouse dying of plague is fatal. Bugs which are not fatal are capable of reinfecting mice after a period of forty-eight days' starvation.

ROOSEVELT LAWYERS TO CONCLUDE TODAY

Barnes's Counsel to Begin Arguments in His $50,000 Suit for Alleged Libel.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 9.—Attorneys for William Barnes, who is suing Colonel Roosevelt for $50,000 for alleged libel, will begin their side of the case in the Syracuse court here tomorrow. John M. Bowers, counsel for Mr. Roosevelt, said tonight that the defense would finish its case by noon. The first witness of th eplaintiff will not be Mr. Barnes. It was decided by his lawyers today to reserve him for the last witness.

The lawyers have been busy all day marshalling the various points of the evidence bearing upon printing matter, and they are all ready to argue the question as to whether or not it should stay in the record. The Roosevelt forces are hopeful tonight that Justice Andrews will not throw the printing evidence out. They have searched the law library here and claim to have discovered several decisions bearing on the point, and they predict that after the Justice examines them he will let all the printing matter remain in.

It has not yet been decided who the first witness for the Barnes side is to be. Former Governor Benjamin B. Odell, who is under subpoena, arrived in the city tonight, and he may be called to the stand first. His knowledge of the relations of Colonel Roosevelt and former Senator Thomas C. Platt, covering a long period of time, is expected to make him a valuable witness for Mr. Barnes. Former Governors John A. Dix and Martin H. Glynn are also expected here tomorrow.

With their case practically completed, the Roosevelt attorneys say they are satisfied with what has been accomplished, and that they are confident the jury will not give Mr. Barnes a verdict. Even at the worst they expect nothing more than a disagreement, which, they contend, will be a victory for their client. The Barnes counsel, on the other hand, say they are equally satisfied that the defense has not established its case and that if Justice Andrews rules out the printing testimony tomorrow the jury will have to return a verdict for Mr. Barnes, under instructions from the Court.

NAMED A DOG FOR HIM.

That Was Sleuth's Reward for Recovering a Stolen Watch.

Captain A. G. Denniston, Chief of the detective force at the McAlpin, received a letter yesterday morning whereby hangs a tale. Also a dog is involved. The letter gave the information that a gentleman from Indiana had named his dog after the Captain, and yet the detective is unappreciative.

"Virtue," soliloquized the sleuth, "may be its own reward, but naming a dog after one may in some cases amount almost to an insult." Then the Captain opened his notebook and registered a pledge not to spend any money out of his own pocket in making good for the indiscretions of visitors to New York unless he obtained in advance a promise to pay.

Not long ago a husky and wealthy Hoosier came to New York and fell among thieves. In his pursuit of pleasure along the Great White Way, chance tempted him into a gilded palace where you bet so much on the red or the black, or on numbers ranging from zero to 36, and face a possibility of getting back a certain number of times your wager. The man from Indiana did not win. Indeed, when he got back to his hotel, he discovered, upon taking stock, that not only was missing the money he had in his pockets, but a handsome gold watch, said to be the gift of his employes, and therefore not to be replaced.

So, knowing Denniston, he hunted him up, and explained the situation. The money, he said, did not count, but the watch he must have back, at any cost.

The detective, knowing the financial standing of the visitor, succeeded in interesting other detectives who know Broadway and the territory adjacent. He spent considerable money, and felt justified in promising a liberal reward to the man who got the watch back. The quest was successful. How or where the watch was found does not appear, but it was in good shape, and was promptly sent to its owner.

The response was the letter the Captain received yesterday thanking him, and giving the information that the writer's pet dog would henceforth be called "Denniston," in this honor.

LONG WAIT FOR HIS TIMES.

At Tanana, Alaska, about 200 miles inland as the crow flies, from Valdez, and perhaps twice as far along the course of the telegraph line, R. A. Wood, a subscriber to THE NEW YORK TIMES, is expecting next month, when the Spring comes and navigation on the Yukon opens, a great batch of copies of the Sunday issue. Not since October, when the river was frozen up, has he received those particular numbers, although he gets his copies of the daily issue regularly.

Inquiries at the Railway Mail Office produced the reason of Mr. Wood's deprivation. He lives so far from ordinary civilization that the mail has to be sent in Winter from the sea coast by dog sleigh. The contractors are expected with teams of six dogs to convey bags of 700 pounds across the snow and ice, but they are never required to take more than these.

So, according to the postal regulations, the preference is given to first-class mail, and all second-class matter must take its chance. Sometimes even some of the letters have to wait over a trip before they are sent inland, and newspapers are delivered only according to certain rules. First those who are addressed to libraries or other public institutions, where many are likely to see them, are sent forward. After that those for individual subscribers get a chance, and in this case it seems that the line has been drawn against Mr. Wood's Sunday editions on account of their extra bulk and weight.

TELEPHONES IN CANADA.

One to Every 15 of Population, and Number is Increasing.

Next to the United States, Canada has the largest number of telephones in proportion to the population in the world, according to a report of J. L. Payne, the Controller of Statistics of the Railways and Canals Department of Canada, and this shows a steady increase over last year, while the telegraph business is on the decline.

The telephone business of Canada for the year ended June 30, 1914, showed an increase of more than $2,250,000 in gross earnings, while the telegraph companies reported a decrease of $112,000 as compared with 1913.

The gross earnings of the telephone companies last year totaled $17,297,268, with gross operating expenses of something over $12,000,000. The net earnings were $4,500,000. The gross earnings were equal to $33 per telephone in use, and the operating expenses averaged $24 per telephone. The total number of telephones is 521,144, or one for every fifteen of the population. This average is exceeded only by the United States.

The gross earnings of the Canadian telegraph companies last year totaled nearly $6,000,000, with operating expenses of more than $4,000,000. The net profits were $1,741,000, on a capital cost valuation of $9,235,000. There were 6,180 employes in the telegraph service in 1914, of whom 319 were females. The falling off of the use of the telegraph service is explained in the fact that long-distance telephones are being more and more developed and their use is much simpler.

SUNDAY ADDRESSES 30,000 IN ONE DAY

1,063 Persons "Hit the Trail" at Three Meetings in Paterson —$1,674 Collected.

CAMPAIGN'S TOTAL, $28,929

East Orange Society Woman Among Converts—Revivalist Forgives Elbert Hubbard.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, May 9.—Paterson was almost completely nosed out at the Sunday tabernacle service tonight. Of the audience of 11,000, barely 1,000 were residents of Paterson. When Choir Leader Rodeheaver asked those from out of town to raise their hands it seemed as though the entire audience responded. At the three services Mr. Sunday spoke to 30,000 persons. His afternoon audience of men only, who heard the sermon "How to be Less Than a Man," numbered about 11,000. A total of 1,063 "trailhitters" came forward during the day's services.

Only once did the Rev. Sunday refer to the sinking of the Lusitania, and that was when he was talking of famous "infidels," mentioning Elbert Hubbard along with Aaron Burr and others. His voice was more husky than usual, and he said "one man is gone who fought me hardest. Elbert Hubbard never had a good word to say for me. But I'm willing to forgive and forget. He was a bright man—one of the brightest men—and I take my hat off to his intellect."

Fruits of the several sermons at the homes of New Jersey's most fashionable people came this morning when, among the early "trailhitters," was Mrs. David Valentine of East Orange, N. J.

Tonight Mr. Sunday talked on "What Shall the end be?" "The end for the man who takes Christ," Sunday said, "is peace and heaven, and the end for the man who does not is hell."

Sunday said that he had been met with the argument that "Maybe there wasn't a hell. If there is it is no use sense," he asked, "to prepare for a hell and guard against it, and then you're ready for the maybe?"

"Every man should provide for his wife and children after he is dead," Sunday said. "At least he should provide enough for her until she can get another man," he added, laughingly.

He paid a tribute to Governor Martin Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania, saying that he was "one of the grandest characters that ever sat in the Governor's chair."

He called salvation an "insurance against hell."

Sunday and "Ma" Sunday and their two sons will be the guests of William D. Plumb, president of the Paterson Rotary Club and an active Sunday worker, tomorrow at Greenwood Lake.

A TEST OF VEGETARIANISM.

The vegetarian propaganda, heretofore based in many instances on moral, religious, or sentimental grounds, has of late turned to the science of nutrition for a justification of its claims. There has been a frank attempt on the part of the advocates to abandon sectarian and fanatical views and to seek recognition for a vegetarian diet both as a rational dietary and as a curative agency. The extremes of definition are being abandoned. In the words of a recent advocate, for all intents and purposes a vegetarian is one who does not habitually make use of flesh foods, in contradiction to the habitual user. Vegetarianism now frankly aims to emerge from a sentimental idea into a scientific truth.

"When advocates of a system of living are willing to submit their claims to the test of scientific experiment," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "a reasonable ground for discussion is afforded. The debate becomes one that involves facts and records—results that can be duplicated at will, rather than unmeasurable prejudices and counterclaims. It is frequently asserted that a vegetarian regimen may bring about exceptional endurance and capacity for work. It is doubtless true that the vegetarian custom leads to habits of abstemiousness in diet from which beneficial results may accrue to the individual. This is not equivalent, however, to saying that the vegetarian works at the expense of less energy or in a fashion that is mysteriously economical from the standpoint of the exchange of matter in the body.

"Using the resources of the nutrition laboratory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington and the Battle Creek Sanitarium, Benedict and Roth have made observations on both men and women who had subsisted on a vegetarian diet for a considerable period of time, extending, on the average, over several years. The results indicate that the nutritional process of vegetarians are essentially like those of non-vegetarians. Thus, in a comparison of the heat production per twenty-four hours showed that the men vegetarians produced 25.5 calories per kilogram and the non-vegetarian men of like height and weight 26.4 calories. On the basis of the heat per square meter of body surface per twenty-four hours, the vegetarians showed 793 calories, as compared with 828 calories for the non-vegetarians.

"With the women the corresponding values per kilogram of body weight were 24.6 calories for the vegetarians and 25.0 calories for the non-vegetarians, and per square meter of body surface 753 calories for the vegetarians, compared with 766 calories for the non-vegetarians."

RESULTS OF THE DRUG LAW.

Addicts Flock to Hospitals All Over the Country.

When the Harrison law became effective on March 1 it was predicted that the result would be that the hospitals would be beseiged by crazed drug addicts, a crime wave of national scope and a trail of suicide and death across the country. A month has passed, and the results have been apparent to physicians and to others who come in daily contact with the drug traffic.

From two cities besides New York come reports which are evidence of this fact. In the Philadelphia General Hospital—and this is true of practically every hospital in the country in which drug addictions are treated—the number of admissions has greatly increased. Without doubt the law has forced numerous habitues, who otherwise might have been satisfied to continue as such, to apply to physicians and institutions for treatment. Further, there is no doubt that the large majority of these unfortunates will be freed of their habit.

The increased admissions to these hospitals do not represent an increase in drug additions; they are simply an objective manifestation of the operation of the Harrison law.

The report from the Cook County Coroner's office presents the opposite side of the picture. It points to the suicide who anticipates his suffering as his supply of drugs ceases; it indicates the ever hopeful victims who seek surcease of pain in deadly nostrums, and it hints at the deaths from secondary causes in weakened and collapsed bodies.

"It should again be emphasized," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "that these reports are not evidence of the existence of enormous numbers of drug habitues, rather they represent the toll of a new law and the throwing of light on a hidden evil."

JEWISH FREEDOM MANIFESTO

Text of Document Signed by Many Russian Notables.

The full text of the manifesto recently issued by distinguished Russians protesting against persecution of the Jews of Russia during the war, is published in the Jewish Chronicle of London, which is the leading Anglo-Jewish newspaper. In publishing the manifesto, the paper comments on the absence of discussion of the Russian Jewish question in England:

"We publish in full this week the declaration of Russian Christians on behalf of the liberty of their Jewish co-religionists," it says. The document is one of the utmost importance. Its signatories are among the best known and most esteemed leaders of Russian public life today. They include members of the Duma, members of the Imperial Council, Princes, and distinguished professors and litterateurs. The declaration is, therefore, one which a deaf ear cannot be turned, and is a sign of no little moment of the awakening of the Russian conscience in regard to the painful wrongs of the Jewish population. Perhaps its outstanding feature, indeed, is not so much its impassioned plea for justice as its outspoken courage."

The manifesto reads:

Russia is fighting in the present great war by straining all her physical and intellectual forces in an extraordinary manner. All the peoples of Russia are taking part in it, sharing in an equal manner in all the efforts. We believe that the blood of the warriors is not being shed in vain. We believe that after having borne the horrors of the war, the population will return with increased energy to the work of arranging a better and brighter future. This we believe, and we hope that the relations between the different peoples that inhabit Russia will be built up in the future on the immovable foundations of wisdom and conscience.

But at this very period which is so important in history we realize with deep sorrow and consternation that to the sufferings of one of the nationalities inhabiting Russia fresh distress and new vexations are added. The limitation of the right of education is now felt with particular pain by the Jewish youth: As the western frontiers are closed, the usual exodus to the foreign schools is barred, while in Russia itself the percentage limitations against the Jews in the schools are maintained in force. The Jews of the destroyed towns have no right to leave the Pale of Settlement, a measure which often leads to a disintegration and a division of members of families, wives and children of wounded soldiers not being allowed to visit their husbands and fathers, and being at the same time exposed to all sorts of chicanery. The sorely tried Jewish nation, which has given to the world many sublime contributions in the spheres of religion, philosophy, and poetry, which has always shared all the labors and troubles of the general Russian life, which has had to meet so often with prejudice and insult, and has more than once proved its love for Russia, and its devotion to her cause, is now again submitted to trials and insulted by unjust charges.

The Russian Jews, who are industriously working with us in all spheres of labor and activity that are accessible to them, have given so many convincing proofs of their sincere desire to live with us, to render service to all general causes of an imperial or national character, that limiting their rights of citizenship appears not only a crying injustice but also a method which is injurious and damaging to the very interests of the State. The Russian Empire can, at present, draw its forces mainly from the union of all the nationalities that inhabit Russia, and only by making all the citizens equal in their rights will the power of Russia become indestructible.

Russians, let us bear in mind that the Russian law has on it our father-land than Russia, and that nothing is dearer to a man than the soil on which he is born. Let us understand that the welfare and the power of Russia are inseparably bound up with the welfare and liberties of all the nationalities that constitute the whole empire. Let us conceive this truth, and let us act in accordance with our intelligence and our conscience, and then we are sure that the disappearance of all kinds of persecution of the Jews and their complete emancipation, so as to put on equal in all rights of citizenship, will form one of the conditions of a really constructive imperial policy.

ILLNESS CHEAP IN PRAGUE.

Doctors and Nurses Get Small Fees, Our Consul Says.

According to a report from United States Consul Frank Deedmeyer, stationed at Prague, one may at least be ill in Austria and not dread the exorbitant doctor's bill that follows.

The City of Prague, with a population of about 600,000, has only about 800 physicians, or one for every 7,500 persons. A doctor charges for a daytime call in a middle-class family only 60 cents, or 10 cents more than if the patient calls on him in his office. For a night call the doctor receives from $1.20 to $2, according to the distance. Only professors at the clinics of the two local universities charge more, receiving $2 to $4 for a house call and $2 for an office visit. As in this country, the physicians give only prescriptions.

"At most of the hospitals under the control of the Roman Catholic Association," continues Mr. Deedmeyer, "treatment and care are entirely free. Nurses at the hospitals are paid 80 cents a day for the first year, with an annual increase of 20 cents a month; at sanitariums, from $6 to $8 a week; at private houses, from 80 cents to $1 a day, board being always included for all nurses.

"About 100 dentists practice in this city. The average charges are: Drawing one tooth, 40 cents; cement filling, 60 cents to $1; amalgam filling, 80 cents to $2, &c.

"The annual income of these professional men are estimated as follows: Head professor in charge of clinics, salary paid by the Government, $1,440 to $1,600, and $5,000 to $11,000 from private practice; other professors at clinics salary paid by the Government, $1,000, and from private practice, $4,000 to $10,000; general medical practitioner not attached to any clinic, $3,000 to $3,500; the average income of a dentist being $5,000."

HERO SURGEON'S DIARY OF DEVOTION

Mute Record of Bravery Amid Sarbian Pestilence Written by Dr. Donnelly.

HE DIED AT HIS POST

Buried in the American Flag—"Human Life Doesn't Amount to Much," His Comment.

Dr. James F. Donnelly of this city, the Red Cross surgeon who died in Ghevgheli, Serbia, on Feb. 24 of typhus fever, left a diary which told of his work in the Serbian town from the date of his arrival, on Dec. 18 last, until six days before his death. Its brief paragraphs comprise a record of heroic devotion to duty in the face of hardships and privation. It tells of restoring another surgeon stricken with typhus to health.

The misery and suffering of the wounded appalled Dr. Donnelly. He sympathized with them in their agonies and marveled at their endurance. A long and harsh experience in the most active kind of medical work in the Far East, in Africa, in Haiti, and at our own Quarantine Station in the Lower Bay had not dulled his sensibilities to the distress of others.

On the last day of the year Dr. Donnelly wrote: "Spent the whole day in the hospital trying to relieve the suffering—that is the best way I know to wind it up." He frequently mentions his thoughts of his wife and son.

On Feb. 18 he records the last entry. He was writing in a railroad station, where he was awaiting the arrival of Sir Thomas Lipton. Two days later he was stricken with typhus, and four days after that he died. He was buried in an American flag, the gift of Sir Thomas.

"GHEVGHELI, Serbia, Dec. 18.—Arrived here at noon and visited a silk factory that has been turned into a hospital, with 2,000 patients. Such a sight of suffering that it makes one's heart bleed! I hope to be able to make the best of things and do something to help.

"Dec. 19.—I have done my first operation here, and extracted a bullet from the neck of a Serbian soldier, and today have dressed the wounds of about 100 patients. The conditions are terrible.

"Dec. 20.—This little town in the southern part of Serbia has a beautiful climate, and we are not exposed to any danger, as the fighting goes on about 500 miles north, and the wounded are sent here by rail. The suffering of these poor people is piteous and their endurance marvelous; they let one operate, and not an outcry!

"Dec. 21.—We had five operations today, and took off the legs of three soldiers with gangrene of the feet. To make a round of the hospital, with its sounds and its suffering, is a terrible experience. I have just been ordered by Dr. Butler to make the rounds of all patients and have them ready in the morning for operation, so expect tomorrow will be a busy day. I have a small room with two other doctors, with no comforts whatever and many rats. Sherman spoke the truth when he said war was hell. I never want my little son to be a soldier.

"Dec. 23.—We are very busy here with 2,000 patients, and the horror of it makes my heart sick and cures me of wanting to talk about the war. We get little news here, only the French papers from Greece.

"Christmas Eve.—Another big day. It is 8 P. M., and I have just come back to my room and am writing this by candlelight. I will get to bed by 8:30, as I am dog tired and need the rest. The bed is hard and has not been made up since we got here.

"Christmas Morning.—My first thoughts this morning flew to my wife and little son. I hope from the bottom of my heart they will have a Merry Christmas. I wish I were nearer to them. It is half-past seven, and after a cup of tea and a slice of black bread we are to make the rounds and operate on twenty patients, and that will be our Christmas Day.

"Christmas Evening.—Was in the hospital all day until 8 P. M. For dinner we had a roast pig three weeks old, fruit, candy, and some red wine sent us from Saloniki.

"Dec. 31.—The last day of the year, and what a year! Spent the whole day in the hospital, trying to relieve the suffering—that is the best way I know to wind it up.

"Jan 4.—We are at last getting things into some shape. At the start, with all the suffering, we could get little food or milk; now things are looking better, and in another month we hope to have them in good shape.

"Jan. 5.—Received orders today to move to our new quarters, opposite the hospital. If we can get a few necessaries together I believe we shall be more comfortable. We have not had many comforts as yet. I am writing this by the light of a lamp, which is better than the candle.

"Jan. 6.—This is the day before Christmas for the Serbians, and this morning four little children came to our floor and sang Serbian national songs. We gave them each 10 cents, and they went away happy. The view from our window here is beautiful. We can see the snow mountains about five miles away. Today I worked on the grounds with Austrian prisoners, digging holes for waste. It is like a Spring day, much too warm for an overcoat, and with little wild flowers growing everywhere. The hospital has just received 100 pigs, so patients and soldiers will have pig for their Christmas dinner. They need a good meal, poor things.

Five Miles for Water.

"Jan. 12.—This afternoon I went about five miles from town for a few barrels of water. Five miles in a heavy rain, on a poor road, in a cart with two Austrian prisoners who could speak neither English nor German. I took a hot sulphur bath at an old Turkish bath, very primitive, and have just come back in a broken-down carriage, leaving the two soldiers and the driver to get back the way they came. I am writing this in a little Turkish café, and have ordered hot tea with lemon and sugar, to ward off a chill. A Turkish boy has sold me two hard-boiled eggs for 5 cents, so this is my supper.

"Jan. 13.—I am writing on the second floor of a barn, which we have turned into a surgical ward. Today I have gone back to my usual work of dressing patients. Yesterday was a bad day, and I must be pretty tough to stand it, in the wet all day long. But I don't grumble, for I brought in a ton of pure water from the mountains, and had a new experience. Tomorrow is the Serbian New Year. Everything is very quiet. No one comes through except the soldiers on the way to the front. It is sad to see them—young men for the most part; no overcoats, carrying only a gun, cartridges, and a big loaf of bread.

"Jan. 18.—Have been working in the operating room all day. We are getting some typhus and typhoid cases, but cannot do much for them. Our death rate is about six a day, which is fair considering that we have 2,000 patients.

"Jan. 19.—A relative of the King's came to the hospital. She was very charming, and questioned us about ourselves. Only two of the six doctors were married. When I told her I had a little boy she said, 'If your wife and boy come to Serbia be sure to let me know and you must be presented to the King.' Have just seen an English paper of Jan. 13, and it looks as if Italy and Rumania would come into the fight. They might as well come in and get it over with.

"It is now nearly 9 P. M. and we are about ready to get to bed. We get up at 6 o'clock, breakfast on bread and tea at 7, and by 7:30 are in the hospital making the rounds and operating. It has been raining hard for twenty-four hours; we can't complain of the

MINNESOTA HOMES BEING BEAUTIFIED

State Art Commission's Propaganda Proves Fruitful in Both Town and Country.

UGLY HOUSES DISAPPEARING

Prosperous Farmers Interested in Aesthetic as Well as the Practical Side of Living.

Because of the conviction that the State should render service to the people, the Director of the State Art Commission of Minnesota, Maurice Irwin Flagg, is ready to supply models for farm houses, small village homes, and landscape designs. The purpose is to beautify the dwelling places of the people and, consequently, the entire State, and develop at the same time ambition and the love of the beautiful in the minds of men with small incomes.

The general adoption of the designs, which are furnished "practically free," may eventually result in the wiping out of all of the ugly "shoe-box" designs that are so plentifully sprinkled over the landscape. Minnesota is a wealthy State, and it is growing more so because the farmers there are making three blades of alfalfa grow where one grew before, they are buying the latest farm machinery, they are bending every effort to conserve the natural resources of the country, and they are learning how to take from the soil the greatest possible return.

While all this has been going on the physical character of the homes has been neglected. Mr. Flagg says in The Survey:

"Practical farmers stated their needs, and it remained for the architects of the State to solve the problem of a $3,500 ten-room model farmhouse. The State Art Commission offered prizes. It brought together a jury composed of a practical farmer, Senator L. E. Potter of Springfield; Mrs. Margaret L. Blair, a specialist in the Department of Domestic Science and Home Management of the University of Minnesota; Dean A. F. Woods of the Agricultural College of that State, and George Chapman, an architect."

Thirty farmhouse designs resulted from the competition. So much success met this work that there followed a "Model Village House" competition. The houses were not to cost more than $3,000 each. Fifty plans were submitted. Then came competitions for a "Model Farm Yard." Any one in Minnesota can get these plans at a very small cost, and all others they may get by paying a good deal more for them. Mr. Flagg says:

"This program in Minnesota has stimulated other States to action. Massachusetts has just completed, through the Agricultural College of Amherst, a 'Model Farmhouse' program. California, Kentucky, Texas, Indiana, and many other States have appealed to Minnesota for assistance in formulating programs of the same character. The 'Model Farmhouse' plans have also gone to several foreign countries. Germany, Italy, France, and Canada have published the results of the Minnesota competition for the benefit of their agricultural people.

"This better housing program is supplementary to the other work of the commission. It sends to towns and cities throughout the State exhibitions of all kinds. It brings into the State each year a collection of the best American contemporary art. It circulates exhibits of industrial art, sculpture, home furnishings, home industries, and school art. It organizes home industries and handicraft classes and puts into the field specialists to teach such work. And it has been successful in finding a market for its product."

Woman's Congressional Union Is Sure It Would Win a Glorious Victory for Suffrage.

ONE SERVANT POINTS WAY

Refuses to Work in Families Opposing the Cause, but She Is Rather Busy Looking for New Jobs.

An absolutely sure method of converting the country to woman suffrage has been discovered by the Women's Congressional Union and quite by accident, as many great ideas are born into the world. For the past month a woman has been a daily visitor to the headquarters of the union, 13 East Forty-first Street, and each time she repeats the same story. She is a domestic servant, but she will not remain in any family in which the members are not suffragists. She changes families frequently, but she is loyal to the cause.

Behold the nucleus of a great idea!

The Congressional Union has believed in taking the votes-for-woman question into politics, or rather considering that it is a political question and playing politics with it. But here is something better.

Take the question from the field of politics to that of domestic service and the question is settled. Convert to suffrage all classes of domestic workers, but especially cooks. Let them refuse to work for any one who does not believe in, and will not strive for, votes for women, and there will be a bargain-day rush to the polls the 2d of next November. Every man will be there and will vote on woman suffrage, if he forgets everything else, and the women of the families will constitute themselves unofficial watchers at the polls to see that the men do their duty. Not an anti could stand up against the slogan, "No votes, no dinners." The after-effects would also be good. There would be a united country, and every one going home would find the kitchen fire lighted and dinner under way.

War is affecting suffrage. The importation of the bunting of which the suffrage banners are made is becoming exhausted, and dealers are asking 25 cents now for banners that previously cost 19 cents when bought in quantity. This makes a material difference in the cost of suffrage ammunition.

Against Heckling the President.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, National Suffrage President, disavows any connection or sympathy with two Philadelphia women who have endeavored to heckle President Wilson. Such cases, she says, are sporadic and do not represent the general suffrage sentiment. Dr. Shaw believes it is better to let the President take his own time and methods of seeing the light.

"Personally," she says, "I am very hopeful that we shall have the support of Mr. Wilson when the question of woman suffrage for New Jersey goes to the voters on Oct. 19."

"There will not be a moment's letup in the work of the suffragists in New York City during the Summer," says Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Chairman for the Borough of Manhattan of the Woman Suffrage Party. "Our campaign will be vigorous and picturesque, with flying squadrons, sorties in all directions, picnics, suppers and raids on Coney Island. We shall take advantage of everything, so that we shall not feel at the end of the campaign that we have allowed one opportunity to escape us."

Taking advantage of opportunities means being present at gatherings of all kinds, in which all kinds of people are interested—political meetings, picnics, religious festivities—any gathering of people where the suffragists can make themselves heard. They are already planning to have the workers familiar with the Italians take part in the big Italian celebration of "Our Lady of Mount Carmel" on July 19.

Plans are also under way for the general celebration of the Fourth of July, when there will be meetings everywhere, and a special woman's "Declaration of Independence" will be read.

The suffragists omitted a street parade this Spring, but they will put all their energies into an enormous one in October, just previous to Election Day, when the greatest number of women who ever "walked for suffrage" will be out to show how much they wish the vote.

Win Votes with Buttons.

An effective way in which the National American Woman's Suffrage Association is working at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in California is with a little button which has been turned out by millions and which bears the words: "I'm a Voter." Thousands of the Western women voters are seen daily on the exposition grounds wearing these buttons, and the association feels that as they are worn by quiet, womanly women they cannot fail to have good results. The idea originated with Miss Jeanette Rankin of Montana, a member of the National Congressional Committee, who at one time was a suffrage worker in New York.

"Miss Rankin can wear that button because the men of Montana have given her the right, but I can't wear one until the men of Pennsylvania have said that I may at the polls next November," says Dr. Shaw. "However, I am saving a button with great hope that I may wear it."

The Roving Shop (a converted lunch cart) of the Women's Political Union, which went into business at Second Street and Second Avenue, will leave the east side tomorrow to "hit the golden trail," the union women say, for it is to move to Broad Street and Exchange Place, in the financial district. It will reach its new destination at about 2:30 P. M., when there will be a meeting. The move will be made in state. The Roving Shop will be drawn by two white horses and preceded by a trumpeter on horseback. The speakers at the meeting will be Mrs. Nora Blatch de Forest, Miss Alberta Hill and Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain. The Roving Shop will remain at Broad Street and Exchange Place throughout the week, with speaking daily.

To Sell Cast-Off Clothes.

A new suffrage shop is to be opened tomorrow for the Women's Political Union by Mrs. Calvin Tomkins, Chairman of the Thirteenth Senatorial District of the union, at 560 Hudson Street. The feature of the first week will be a continuous rummage sale, the union members sending to the shop old clothes and trinkets. By giving their clothes instead of packing them away the women save trouble and moth balls, some one else gets bargains in clothes, and the union gets the money. There have been real bargains in many of the union's rummage sales. There will be speaking afternoon and evening at the shop.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, President of the union, will tour New York State this week, speaking at men's meetings. Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley will also make a tour of the State, holding classes for women watchers and speaking before men's organizations. The two women have dates for speaking before Odd Fellows, Moose organizations, Knights of Pythias, firemen's meetings, chambers of commerce, civic and university clubs, and patriotic societies, and there are even some "smokers" on their lists.

In its thorough organization the Woman Suffrage Party has a Church Work Committee, which arranges meetings in different churches and for church organizations. A suffrage mass meeting will be held Tuesday evening in the James Methodist Episcopal Church, at Monroe and Reid Streets, Brooklyn, with Miss Anna McGuire as speaker. The Men's Club of the Dutch Reformed Church, Seventh Avenue and President Street, Brooklyn, will listen to Miss Eva Potter Tuesday evening. In New York a public meeting will be held at the Friends' Seminary, 226 East Sixteenth Street, under the auspices of the Twelfth Assembly District workers, Tuesday evening.

On Wednesday there will be a meeting with the National W. C. T. U. at the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Hanson Place and St. Felix Place, Brooklyn, at 3 P. M., with Mrs. H. B. Bayles as speaker.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Alice Snitzer Burke and Bertha Papazian will speak before the Men's Club of the Church of the Advocate, Washington Avenue and 181st Street. On Thursday there will be a mass meeting in the Salem M. E. Church, colored, 133 Lenox Avenue, at 8 P. M., and a suffrage meeting at the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, 4,746 White Plains Avenue, at 3 P. M.

The women are working hard in the Bronx, and they do not confine themselves to churches. On Tuesday Miss Martha Klatschken will speak in a millinery shop at 1,614 Third Avenue at 8:15 P. M., and on Friday she will address a "Democratic Bachelor Girls' Club" at the home of Miss May Kennedy, 1,233 Washington Avenue, at 8 P. M. Peter Donovan, Miss Sarah McPike and Mrs. William Swan will also speak.

Anti-Suffragists Also Busy.

Work among different nationalities is going on continuously. There will be a suffrage hearing at 4 P. M. in Immanuel Church (Norwegian and Scandinavian,) 1,410 Vyse Avenue, next Sunday, and Mrs. Mary D. Fisk will speak. There is to be canvassing among the Italians this week. The German and French branches of the Woman Suffrage Party each have a day when they are "at home" at the headquarters of the party, 48 East Thirty-fourth Street, and some member of the branch is there to receive any one who may call. The French Committee meets Monday afternoon of this week at the headquarters, and Monday evening there will be a meeting of the German-American Committee.

At the Conference of the Baptist Ministers at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church Monday morning Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, will tell the ministers why the women she represents object to being enfranchised.

The anti-suffragists are turning their attention to New Jersey as the first State where the question of the women's vote will be submitted to the people, and anti-suffrage State headquarters are soon to be opened in Trenton or Newark. Miss Clare Vezin of 712 Grove Street has been appointed campaign manager, with temporary headquarters at her own home. Anti-suffrage meetings will be held this week at Haddonfield, Atlantic City, Newark, and the Oranges. Miss Minnie Bronson will speak to Jewish women in the Jersey City Synagogue on Tuesday.

The suffragists are also putting their strongest workers into New Jersey, and a New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage has been formed. Miss Eva Ward, a young Englishwoman, a relative of Mrs. Humphry Ward, is touring the State for the league in an auto. Mrs. Everett Colby has organized a committee of 100 in New Jersey for suffrage work. Everett Colby is working with her. William Fellowes Morgan is Treasurer.

WHEN A FELLOW THINKS.

"I'll tell you, a fellow begins to think when he is left alone in jail." Here is a text for an instructive sermon. The words were uttered by a young bank clerk who had confessed that he had embezzled $3,000 during a period of years when his salary was only $45 a month and he was spending $150 a month. He falsified his accounts so that they escaped the bank examiners, and for a time the young thief seemed to take a kind of pride in this. In the excitement attending his discovery and arrest he posed in the rôle of an expert defaulter, and seemed rather to enjoy the attention paid him. But a few days of this was enough, and then "when left alone in jail" he began to 'think.' Here came his real punishment. In the solitude of his cell, when the world had apparently deserted him, he had time to go over the situation and to realize his sin and its consequences.

If the young men, and older ones, too, who are tempted to go wrong would only stop to do their thinking while there is yet time to turn from evil, there would be very much less crime in the world. This bank clerk very naturally seeks to palliate his offense, on the ground that he received a salary of only $45 a month. That was little enough, it is true, for a young man charged with such responsibilities. But it neither excuses nor extenuates his acts of embezzlement. When he found that he could not live decently upon his salary allowed him he should have stated the situation clearly to his employers. Then, if they could not or would not pay him more, he should have tried to get a better position. It should not have been very difficult for him with his skill as a bookkeeper to have found a place that would pay more than $45 a month. A young man of his intelligence should have known that the moment he began stealing from the bank he set his foot on the path that leads to sure and inevitable ruin. But he did not think. He waited until after he was discovered and caught, and then a full realization of his folly came upon him. When he was left alone in jail he had plenty of time to go over the whole matter, but it was too late.

Oddly enough, in the little town where this young embezzler resided his extravagant manner of living apparently did not arouse any suspicion among his friends or among the directors of the bank where he was employed. Any fairly intelligent employer must know that a $45-a-month clerk who spends at the rate of $150 a month will bear watching. But the young man went his thoughtless way until it was too late. Then in the loneliness of his cell he had time to review his disgraceful conduct, and in the bitterness of his heart he moans: "I'll tell you, a fellow begins to think when he is left alone in jail." —Kansas City Journal.

KENTUCKY A QUEER STATE.

Her People a Free and Easy and Contented Lot.

Kentucky is a queer State. Some of us are rich because we just couldn't avoid it, a few others have acquired more or less wealth by amusing themselves one way or another, but most of us are poor and don't care.

Mr. Buckle has explained it. He says that the intellectual, moral, spiritual, and material development of a people is regulated by the soil, the heat, and the moisture peculiar to and prevalent in their respective localities.

And so in Kentucky we can blame it on the earth, the air, and the "moisture."

There is so much fun to be had in Kentucky, and living comes so easy, what's the use of tearing one's shirt, or losing a lot of sleep, or getting hot in the collar about a few millions of dollars more or less one way or the other?

Like the citizen of Bogota, who can step out into his unfenced backyard and in ten minutes pull enough bananas to keep his family in affluence for a week, so all we of Kentucky have to do is to merely tickle the old bluegrass pasture and she smiles back a mess of greens and a passel of lamb chops.

Likewise in a State where the leading and best-paying industry is politics, the mines and forests given to us by the Almighty must take their chances in the hands of the goths and vandals from the North and the East.—Lexington Leader.

FATHER VAUGHAN FOR WAR TO FINISH

Says Germany Must Be Beaten to Her Knees and Surrender Unconditionally.

HOPES FOR RECONCILIATION

Attributes Hatred of England to Spoiling of Kaiser's War Plans —Praises British Troops.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 24.—Father Bernard Vaughan, the noted Jesuit priest and author, in an interview with THE NEW YORK TIMES today, expressed the opinion that any efforts for peace between Germany and the Allies now were premature.

Father Vaughan, who is known throughout the United States, where he made an extensive visit eighteen months ago, during which he spoke at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, recently toured the battlefields of France and Belgium. Also he has come intimately in touch with the recruiting work in England through visits to the stations, where he has talked with the men. Father Vaughan says the time for peace is not ripe and that England does not want it until Germany has been beaten.

"Do you believe now is the time to make efforts for peace?" asked the interviewer.

"I will answer your question in the Socratic method by putting another," replied Father Vaughan. "Do you think that midnight is time to make efforts for the dawn? We all long for the dawn, but it will not come till darkness is done. So peace cannot come till the victory is won. The Allies, if in nothing else, are closely united in this, that they have to see the affair through. To make peace before that would mean that the Allies would be down and out.

"When do I think the war will end? Not being a prophet, my vision is not clear enough to see the way of this end. But of this I am sure, that this life-and-death struggle cannot close till the enemy has been brought to his knees with unconditional surrender. Our plighted troth demands the return of Belgium to its owners, while the Allies cannot fold their flags or scabbard their swords till peace abiding and righteous is secured for Europe.

"What do we expect to get out of this war? What Britons want is to hold their own on land and sea. Britain wants for nothing more. She will be content with nothing less. To grip her own and to maintain justice, peace and security for the sons of the empire she is pouring forth her treasure of men and money. Nor can she ever cry 'Halt! Enough!' till the fight is done and victory hers.

"Do I think England wanted war, I am asked. If she did, she prepared for it like a blithering idiot by reducing her 'contemptible little army' by scores of thousands. If she wanted war, the 'White Paper' read in its integrity shows that Sir Edward Grey was in his wrong place as War Minister. If he had a war card up his sleeve he would have waved it in the face of the enemy long before the voice of the country called upon him to do so."

"Do you think from your wide experience throughout the United Kingdom that England is bitter in her hate of the Germans?" was asked.

"Truth to tell, my countrymen are not much given to hate. They are proud, slow, not easily moved to anger or jealousy, and I don't find talk against the Germans as a race. In fact, we are so much interwoven with them in every department of life that it seems to me it is almost difficult for our people to take up a warlike attitude toward them. But they do hate, with all the vehemence of their being, their militarism, their Nietzschean philosophy, their superman and supernation policy, and their extraordinary sense of superiority which would put them on top of this planet with a mission to Prussianize it. Whether rightly or wrongly, England is taking her part to free Europe from what is regarded as this yoke of slavery."

Asked regarding the hatred of the Germans for the English, Father Vaughan went on:

"I expect it is to be accounted for in the fact that we have spoiled Germany's war game, have upset her plans, and put back the clock. And we are resolved to push on doggedly in growing energy and enterprise right through the dark night of distress till we meet the dawn of the day of peace. Our 'little army' has helped to reverse the great war machine. That's what's the matter."

Father Vaughan spoke in glowing phrase of the British soldiery as he had seen them.

"I am satisfied that neither Napoleon nor Wellington ever had such fine fighting stuff under their command. They are drawn from every rung of the social ladder, many of our leading families having sons in the ranks. From what I have seen of the new army I can tell you they are keen, quick, and alert, picking up in from four to six months what formerly took men two years. Well clothed, well lodged, well fed, well trained, these men are going to give good accounts of themselves. They are the sort that knows not danger, that is cheerful under privation, and longing to be 'up and at them.' One of the most characteristic traits in our Tommies is that their cheeriness is in measure of their discomfiture. In the very trenches up to their waists in water, they are like snipe in the fens—all right."

Asked if he thought the war would tend to make people more religious, Father Vaughan replied, as carefully he weighed his words:

"Be sure of this, that no one can come out of this war quite as he went into it, and I feel confident that those who ever had religion will gladly come back to it. But how about those who have had none? For them there is nothing to come back to. I also think that those who 350 years ago borrowed their religion from Germany and have been drawing their so-called religious views from German professors and higher critics ever since, will find that their souls have been deceived and cheated and starved almost to death by processes which robbed them of vital Christianity, nay of Christ himself, without whom Christianity is no better than deceptive philosophy.

"Practically these followers of the German school have been evicted from their old home, Catholicity, and left to wander in the desert, without an oasis or even a shelter. On the other hand, in no boasting spirit, I am proud to say that there is no one in the know but recognizes that this war has been a magnificent mission field for the Catholic Church. How can I shut my eyes or close my ears to sights and sounds that fill my soul with comfort and consolation during the agonies and atrocities of this scientific massacre called warfare? Everywhere around the danger zone my brother priests have been splendidly ministering to the wounded and giving the dying a glorious 'send-off' to the land of victory."

Asked if he thought that after the war there would be a return to friendship between England and Germany, Father Vaughan replied:

"Blood is thicker than water, love more natural than hate; so no matter what may be the present shout of prophecy, you may be sure that time, which softens all things, will heal our wounds and knit our scars, and, what is more, unite our hands with our hearts. We feel it our duty to resist with vehemence but not with hatred.

"In the land where for nearly eighteen months I was an enchanted guest and where North and South seemed to vie with each other in making me feel at home, I often paused, almost wondering if the civil war in America was a fact of history and not the fiction of romance. Why, North and South are today after that war as closely united and folded together as my own two hands when kneeling in prayer! I hope and pray that in the not distant future the clouds will lift between England and Germany and that in the light of heaven we may not only worship the same God, but live as children of His household in the plenitude of peace with our Father's smile to comfort us and His hand to wipe away the tears that shall be no more."

GOOD THING IN A WAY.

The Back-Door Beggar Was Not Altogether a Nuisance.

eeeeeeeeeeee stotao taoi taoi taoin tao

"You have noticed," said Dr. Oldfish, and doubtless with regret, as I have done, the passing of that ancient acquaintance, the begar at the back door. We see him again in fancy, thinly dressed, trying hard to suppress a shiver his purplish fingers drawn up within the ragged sleeves of his coat, as he makes his plea, perhaps for a small piece of money, perhaps for a bit breakfast to expel the winter's flaw.

"Ah, old fellow, we were too lazy, too wrapped up in our own comfort to appreciate at its worth, not to you but to ourselves, the precious value of your unworthiness! So, without a thought of after consequences to ourselves, we have turned you away to the cold, methodical charity of a committee or an organization.

"Little did we take into account the inquisition to which we delivered our friend, this poor wayfaring man of grief—experts to investigate him with quite the painstaking care that accompanies an application of life insurance. You have got rid of him, and yet you turn up your slippered toes to the glowing grate the shadow of his old self haunts you and there is an uncomfortable feeling that perhaps after all this indirect benefaction is not in accord with the les son that was taught you in earlier time: For I was ahungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in.

"Ah, no, this was not to be done by proxy! The giving was to be with your own heart behind the giving. You were not afraid that you might be imposed upon, that the beggar was unworthy. Unworthy! All the better, all the more of a pull on your charity. It precented your heart, that hollow muscular organ placed within the cavity of the pericardium, from becoming atrophied. If a pitiful little confidence game on the part of the beggar at the back door could do him any good, help him on with it. Poor fellow, if in the battle of life he could have his small successes his little triumphs, it were well with us to 'glid them with the happiest terms we have.

"In the place of the beggar at the back door we find some one at the front door summoning us with an imperious ring that will admit of no delay. It is some-one with soap, or stationery, or picture cards, comic or sentimental, or lead pencils hard as tempered steel, or tickets to a social you most unsocially would never attend. You wonder if the seller is not your ancient acquaintance and not a whit improved by the disguise. You can never become interested in these commercial persons and you sigh for your old friend at the back door.

"Understand, I have not quite made up my mind to oppose organized charity duly equipped and in perfect running order, except in that it enables some of us who give little to its aid to make this small giving an excuse for giving nothing at all to modest poverty, whether it appear on the front porch or at the door of the kitchen.

"My complaint is that in systematized giving we miss the personal touch, the beggar's touch, and our own fat and flabby response. What matter if the beggar asks for real coin? A man's a man for a that. Why stand and fumble in the lowest depth of your pocket while you hand him the dime admonish him not to spend it in riotous living?

"Some of us can remember that earlier perhaps bette, time in this city, when the contribution of a basket of supplies to the poor neighbor was not delayed until Christmas to imperil the whole family, unaccustomed to such abundance, with indigestion throug over feeding. In that day when every fairly well-to-do family kept a shoat or two, the poor neighbor was remembered. He was permitted access to the well-stocked woodpile, and at pig-killing time there was always a substantial donation of sausage, sidemeat, and spareribs.

"The other morning, while thinking of these things, a chime of bells came through the clear, crystalline air, a harbinger of the approach of the greatest festival of the year, the blessed Christmas time. Seated with the small of my back in the easiest chair, the flame in the fireplace picturing the ceiling with rapidly moving forms quaint and curious, I was much too comfortable to wish to be disturbed. It was then the kitchenmaid entered. 'Doctor,' said the maid, 'there's a man at the back door wants—'

"'Wants!' I exclaimed. 'What should he want here? Tell him to go to the benevolent society, to the committee, to—'

"The maid clapped her hands to her ears and fled from the room. 'A man at the back door,' I said, more gently. 'I—I'll go see. Perhaps it is—perhaps.'

"Yes, it was my long-lose brother. The beggar at the back door. It was a bitterly cold morning. I opened the door not too wide, but wide enough. He slid past the portals somewhat timorously, and was soon put at ease. Certainly; set the table, Susie. Coffee, two fried eggs; no, give him three; don't forget the bater cakes and maple molasses.

"I confess that I felt much better than if I had sent him away to be investigated as to his deserving. Deserving! It was worth dollars to see him eat. And it did me so much good that I haven't had a touch of sour stomach since."—Indianapolis News.

MILLIONS OF RABBITS.

In his day and time when the high price of meat has added so materially to the high cost of living, there has developed a new source of meat supply in the adjoining State of New Mexico that is no doubt causing the big packing concerns of this country considerable worry.

The rabbit crop of Eastern New Mexico this year is one of the best on record and the rabbit harvest is now in full swing all over that portion of the State. At Fort Sumner, in Guadalupe County, the rabbit market is brisk, and while the animals are only bringing the hunters 5 cents each, yet the crop is so easily gathered that rabbit hunting is becoming a most lucrative industry. A total of 500 rabits per day is being brought into Fort Sumner alone, and it is estimated that by the time the season closes next March thousands of the animals will have been marketed and a considerable sum added to the circulating medium.

Shipments from Fort Sumner are only a drop in the bucket, figuratively speaking, for every little town and hamlet in Eastern New Mexico is now engaged in a stupendous rabbit harvest; Melrose estimates that fully 1,000,000 rabbits will be marketed from Curry County alone.

Cottontail rabbits minus the trimmings weigh a litle more than one pound each. This means twenty-five carloads of rabbits—averaging 40,000 pounds to the car and an average of two cars per week during the shipping season. The sale of the 1,000,000 rabbits will turn loose the sum of $50,000 in Curry County, and shows that the New Mexico rabbit crop is something not to be sneezed at. In commenting on the prodigious crop of rabbits now being harvested and marketed in Curry County, the Fort Sumner Review says:

"If the million rabibts were all shot, a rabbit for each cartridge, the cartridge weighing about two ounces, or say ten rabbits to each pound of ammunition, to get a million rabbits would require 100,000 pounds of cartridges, making a nice little item of retail business for the local dealers, which affords another chance to use the mathematics we learned in the days of Dayball's arithmetic. Assuming that each rabbit secured by a dog required a chase of a quarter of a mile, the dog making the run every time without stopping for any reason, a dog to catch a million rabbits would have to run 250,000 miles, a distance equal to six trips around the earth."—El Paso Times.

WORK OF BRITISH ARMY SERVICE MEN

HAD TO BE A "TRAGEDIAN"

The following, says The London Daily Chronicle, is an extract from a letter received from an Army Service Corps officer giving some details of the work which that branch of the service performs:

"At last I've a chance of sending you a decent letter. The reason is that I'm a soldier without a voice, for I lost it a few days ago as the result of a cold, and I've been sent to hospital. It's coming back, and I hope to be at work as soon as possible. One wants a voice out here more than anything, especially at my job, which is that of a kind of land Captain. I command a train which plies between base and railhead, i. e., as near the firing line as we can venture safely. I have an escort of six men (A. S. C.), and the guard, engine driver, &c., are French and so require a lot of talking to. I'd never had any business dealings with Frenchmen before, and I've discovered that they are incapable of taking you seriously unless you are a tragedian of the first order.

"My train is loaded with supplies, i. e., food and fodder. If I don't get there our men go without food for twenty-four hours, though I've no doubt they'd find something. Still, it's a responsibility, though my irresponsible French friends don't seem to take it as seriously as I do. Sometimes they uncouple a truck or two and would leave it behind if I were not a blend of Sarah Bernhardt and the late M. Coquelin.

"A goods train is, of course, quite different from a passenger train, being halted and shunted and generally messed about at sidings. No station platforms or buffets for us. I live in a passenger coach attached to the train, and as all the main bridges and culverts have been destroyed, we crawl about by devious routes, and after two days and nights arrive at railhead. There we are met by more A. S. C., who come rushing up in trolleys—dozens and dozens of trolleys, many of which have been commandeered from prominent business firms at home and wear familiar names. My train is unloaded at top speed, and the trolleys make off down the muddy roads—I've never seen such mud. Behold me in the mud as well, with rubber knee boots and all the stockings I can lay my hands on packed inside.

French Officer's Admiration.

"The trolleys go to their rendezvous and dump the stuff down by the roadside. Here the regimental horse transport takes a turn. It's all beautifully arranged, and we of the A. S. C. are proud of ourselves in proportion. Our Major exhibited the system to a French transport officer the other day, and our ally kept saying: 'Mon Dieu, mon Dieu!' He could find nothing stronger wherewith to express his admiration.

"As I am responsible for every box of biscuits or bale of hay, I see my train unloaded, and think and trouble about little else till I get my receipt saying all is well, and that what I am supposed to have brought I have brought. Meanwhile, if it is a fine day, the aeroplanes are up overhead, spying for concealed batteries, and occasionally fighting a duel with a Taube.

"Incredible as it may seem to you at home, one is far more taken up with one's job than in watching fights in the air. Far away you hear the thunder of the guns, and last time there was a thing near at hand which went 'rat-tat-tat.' My business, however, is to deliver the goods and take no heed of military diversions. But occasionally I get a moment when I can stretch my legs, and I ramble off down the miry road outside. Odd things one meets there: for instance, a single London Scot, shaving by the roadside, a woman and two little girls who have refuged from Belgium, a patrol of British cavalry, their scabbards and lance-heads rusted, their mounts splashed in mud, or an anti-aircraft gun out on its own and painted futuristically in three bright colors so as to look like anything in the world but what it is when seen by Herr von Taube.

"And everywhere are the British: the natives seem merely a by-product, always excepting Monsieur le Curé, whose thin legs show beneath his cassock as he goes about his business in the mud. M. le Curé is our very good friend, and knows us all.

Sometimes Takes Prisoners Back.

"By evening I am through, and ready to take my empty train back to my base. The rail-head people give me odds and ends to take down with me, and, if there has been hard fighting, I take back part of my stores—the part that is no longer needed. The odds and ends are anything, from broken rifles, which will be repaired, to German prisoners. The latter have their own guard, and are only my concern in so far as regards their delivery to the right address. The men are invariably glad to be out of the business; the officers ask for first-lass carriages and accommodation apart from their men, whom they seem to regard as mere cattle. Of course, we give them such accommodation as we have.

"By dark I leave the low country, with its frosted mornings and its miry noons, with its willows that stand reflected in transparent waters against a sky of pearl. Dawn and sunrise inevitably draw me out of doors, in this pale country, whose beauty came as a surprise and wonderment on my first visit. It is the abode of death, but, viewed as landscape, it is a new artist, tender as Corot, more versatile than Walter Bayes.

"Two more days in my railway coach and I am back at base. Four days and nights now I have lived and slept in my clothes, for there is no changing and no real sleeping, as at any of our halting places I may be called out to check my train, to add to it, to pick up packages, or a draft of troops, or even a stray officer who is returning to his unit by my way. One of these stray officers amused me. He was a gunner promoted from the ranks for valor. He had done things that win crosses and are mentioned in dispatches. Yet when we ran over two bullocks and a truck or two went off the rails he got in a deuce of a funk, and said he didn't mind shells, but he did mind a railway accident. He was greatly relieved when our journey ended.

"This is a more interesting letter than my last, but the truth is, one could go on for a week if one had the time. Since starting it I saw the Major who is doctoring me. I go back to work tomorrow after what in reality has been nothing worse than a three days' rest. Some of the patients are very queer. The man in the next bed to mine was telephoning all night in his sleep, yelling out: 'Hello,' &c. He's down with 'flu.' Another is a man doing my job, who fell out of his carriage and broke an arm.

"Hang it, if the A. S. C. here haven't started a magazine, and I've been asked to contribute. I feel I must, out of sheer esprit de Army Service Corps."

SAFETY FIRST SOUND SPARTON

ONE BLAST OF THE SPARTON

And the Road is Clear. In the city you are forced to drive beneath noisy elevated trains, past the racket of nerve-straining trip-hammers at work on buildings—a thousand other noises. A bulb horn is absolutely inadequate. You need a safety signal that can be heard above all the racket—A SPARTON SAFETY SIGNAL—one blast is enough.

IT WAS DREAM-DIRT.

Sonny's Amazing Reply to His Papa's Inquiry.

"It happened like this," acknowledged a very close friend of ours. "Monday morning is wash day, so the girl is occupied in the basement, long before the sun rises. (Eastern time.) So on Monday morning, my wife has to get breakfast. And so on Monday morning, I myself have to dress the kid. The kid is 4 years old.

"This is what is called rotation of labor, I believe. Or some such economic phrase. But we won't go into any such discussion. Suffice it to say that I dressed the kid Monday, and then led him to the bathroom for his ablutions.

"Then it was that I noted the complexion of his hands. It was so remarkably brunet that my belief was staggered. That this innocent, rosy, fragrant infant should arise to greet the dawn with such dirty paws was absolutely incredible. Who had put him to bed the night before without removing a modicum of that grime? I said, in part:

"'Why, sonny! Look at those hands! Did you wash 'em before you went to bed last night?'

"'Yes, dad,' asserted the kid, being scared into lying by my severity.

"'Honest, now?' I persisted. 'Then how does it come that your hands are so dirty this morning?'

"'Well, papa,' said he, 'I'll tell you. I dreamed I was diggin' in th' sanpile.'

"Can you beat 'em."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PRACTICAL POLITICS.

When Cliff Berryman, the distinguished cartoonist, was here from Washington a few days ago to visit his brothers, he told the following story:

Many years ago, when Cliff had been in Washington a short time, and had the natural propensity of a "kid" for asking leading questions, he said to the late Senator Quay of Pennsylvania:

"Senator, how is it that you have kept your seat in the Senate so long, when there are so many other able and brilliant men from your State who must covet it?"

"Young man," said Quay, "I do not know that myself. But I do know one factor in the problem, and it is something which it may be useful for you to remember. I have never kicked a friend to please an enemy."

Some very prominent politicians might have fared better if they had kept this story pasted in their hates.—Versailles (Ky.) Sun.

UPLIFT IN ARKANSAS.

A Little Rock Literary Club Makes a New Departure.

Purely local movements and enterprises sometimes gain such strength that they become State-wide, and in very rare instances nation-wide, and then the philosopher-historian of a later day has another opportunity to remark upon how great oaks from little acorns grow. Something in the nature of this steady development of a great enterprise is now in progress in Arkansas, which you will call Arkansaw if you care to be correct. The Authors and Composers' Society of Little Rock has decided to open its doors to the talent of the whole State. The Society of Amalgamated Authors of Best Sellers of Indiana had better look to its laurels. The Authors and Composers' of Arkansaw are evidently out for a place, and it is not impossible that the newly extended society of Little Rock will become the nucleus of a National Academy of Arts and Letters.

"Literary" clubs in this country are various and sundry. Sometimes, as may be ascertained by following up the State charter of such an organization to its practical application, a literary club is little more than a veiled device for keeping a stock of ales, wines and liquors for the benefit, or to the detriment, of its members. Usually, however, a literary club is a provincial or parochial instrument for absorbing second-hand culture. The members "meet around" once a week or once a fortnight and read papers on subjects of literary, artistic, historical or scientific interest which they have painstakingly copied out of the encyclopedia. After the papers are read the listeners promptly wake up and resume a lively interest in mundane affairs, and refreshments are served and a pleasant time is had by all present.

Thurogh such humble but aspiring efforts a vast amount of uplift has been conferred upon hundreds of thousands of self-sustaining persons in the progressive country, who might otherwise have known far less about literature and art. Incidentally they might have suffered far less impairment of their digestive powers through the eating of flossy food at late hours, but the acquirement of culture is worth some material sacrifice, and the literary and artistic enlightenment thus gained may be considered worth all it costs.

But the Authors and Composers' Society of Little Rock does not depend upon second-hand culture. Its passion is creative as well as plastic, and the members are their own producers as well as consumers. A recent evening's program of the society began with a piano solo, "played by the composer." There followed vocal solos, composed by one member and sung by another, and then came readings by authors from their own works, which included a poem entitled "A Possum Hunt in Arkansas," written by a 14-year-old boy, who is evidently already adjusting his footsteps to the gallant pace set by Colonel Roosevelt.

One author gave a talk on "How I Came to Write the Arkatta." No one outside Little Rock, perhaps, knows whether "The Arkatta" is a drama, a sonnet, an ode or a pastel in prose, but probably every member of the Authors and Composers' Society of Little Rock knew and was thrilled with the account of how the author came to write it. Very likely it was a home-grown poem and was treasured by every read of The Polkville Clarion.

In any event, this meet of the Authors and Composers' Society of Little Rock was full of inspiration, and the literary and dramatic critic of The Arkansas Gazette declared that "each member on the program showed originality of thought and beauty of conception." Perhaps the most advanced Authors and Composers' Society in Indiana could not produce a better batting average than that.—Providence Journal.

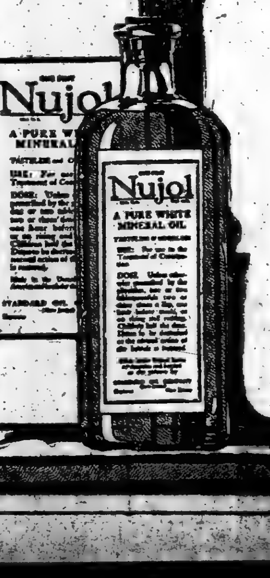
IF YOU REALLY WANT TO CURE YOURSELF OF CONSTIPATION—

YOU must stop depending upon laxatives and cathartics. They afford only temporary relief and are dangerously habit-forming.

As a result of recent discoveries, leading physicians are gradually discarding the use of drugs in the treatment of constipation. Instead, they prescribe regular habits, sensible food, and mineral oil used as an internal lubricant.



Nujol

A PURE WHITE MINERAL OIL

is odorless and tasteless, absolutely neutral and is not absorbed by the system, acting merely as an effective mechanical lubricant.

Nujol is not a drug. It will not relieve constipation over night. In most cases it is from two days to a week before regular bowel movements are restored. But Nujol is a genuine remedy in that the longer it is used the more it tends to become unnecessary.

Our booklet "The Rational Treatment of Constipation" is an informative treatise on constipation and the mineral oil treatment. It will be sent free on request.

Ask for Nujol at your druggist's or send 75c. in money or stamps for a trial pint bottle. Address Dept. E.

STAND BY THE PRESIDENT.

We still hear the admonition, "don't rock the boat"—chiefly from those who would excuse Germany and hold her blameless. It is too late for that parrot-cry. The boat has been rocked, not in thoughtlessness, but by the deadly and devilish enginery of VON TIRPITZ. Somewhere near the Irish coast she lies at the bottom of the deep, and the sea above her is strewn with the corpses of men and women of our Nation and of our kin who perished when the German torpedoes sent her to destruction. Nobody here is rocking the boat unless it be men like Dr. DERNBURG and other apologists for the German assassins. Some of them, unhappily, are Americans by birth and lineage, disgracing their citizenship by their vain groping after extenuations of the crime. They do, in truth, stir up resentment, they may kindle passion, for they affront all loyal men and women of the country at a time when the shock and the sorrow of the great calamity have deeply moved the hearts of the whole people. The people are moved, but not to passionate or hasty action. There was greater visible excitement when the Maine was destroyed, but the public emotion now is far more profound and pervading. That was a deed of irresponsible and impotent spite, this is a demonstration of power and purpose that will put the Nation in peril if the root of the giant evil be not utterly destroyed. The very seriousness of the matter begets calm. Men are taking thought of what may and must be done to compel atonement for the wrong, but for the most part they are turning to the President. They await from him the right word, the just action, and from him they know that they may expect wisdom with firmness.

There have been, there will be, impatience and criticism. We counsel full confidence in President WILSON. We have often had at the head of the Nation men competent for great occasions. We have one now, a wise, firm, self-reliant President who knows the minds and hearts of the American people and whose decisions will respond to their hope and to the country's need. We have a duty now—as a united people to stand by the President.

That his powers of statesmanship and direction will be put to a great test is evident, for the lapse of hours since the destruction of the Lusitania has deepened, not dissipated, the public feeling that a wrong has been done to us for which no common expiation will atone. It is for that reason that the people resent the miserable justifications attempted by Dr. DERNBURG and by a few false-hearted Americans who, in ignorance or in hardihood, put forward as a warrant in law for the slaughter of fourteen hundred men, women, and children on the Lusitania the war zone proclamation, the warning, and the carrying of munitions. Dr. DERNBURG knows perfectly well that the deed was done in defiance of all law. He never could have held his high office in the Imperial Government and remain ignorant of that. We must advise him that this is no time for continuing his propaganda, no time for his volunteer work of assisting the American people to form their opinions. When, as we are told, children in German schools get a half-holiday for jubilation over an exploit of German arms that sent American children and American mothers with them to the bottom of the sea we know what to think; we ask no aid in making up our minds either from Dr. DERNBURG or from any other apologist for barbarism. The American people feel and know that no English commander would have sent, without word of warning, a torpedo against the hull of a vessel having on board two thousand men, women, and children, many of them of a neutral nation. No Frenchman, no Russian, would have stained his soul with all that innocent blood. Who was the German com-

STRENGTHEN OUR DEFENSES.

The visit of the Atlantic Fleet to this port falls at the right time. The splendid naval display on the North River will be viewed by millions with admiration and will justly arouse patriotic enthusiasm. A fine lot of modern ships, well equipped, well officered and manned, their presence here at any time would appreciably stir the public spirit. But just at this time the effect of their coming will be to set the multitude to thinking about our navy as a means of national defense. This is the time to think and to think deeply and sanely about that important matter. The thought will inspire study and consideration of the recent testimony of experienced naval officers as to the defects of the navy, as to its lack of submarines and aeroplanes and of the newer types of battleship cruisers. We have many good ships, but for the defense of this country against the onslaughts of a first-class power we need many more, and ships cannot be built over night or in a few weeks. In an hour of great peril we have been adhering to the ordinary program of naval development. The situation demands a change. The people are now aware of the gravity of the situation.

Nobody is thinking of war, but nobody except a fool can say at this time that we shall never have another war. We need the means to defend our coasts and our outlying possessions from foreign invasion. We need to maintain in the immediate future a stronger regular army to serve as a nucleus for our land forces in case of invasion. The President has the power to carry out the plans proposed to the last Congress by Secretary GARRISON for the enlargement of our mobile forces to the extent already authorized by law and for the strengthening of our various harbor defenses. An Executive order will serve now as well as a special act of Congress. This question of the national defense is now uppermost in the public mind, and the Administration can scarcely afford to ignore it. It was the dominating thought, undoubtedly, in the minds of thousands of the people who thronged Riverside Park yesterday.

RESTRAINING KING COTTON.

Those who have so long and earnestly advocated a greater diversification of agriculture in the South, and who saw in the startling emergency created by the war a kind of heroic compensation, which was the lesson it should teach a "one crop" country, are greatly heartened by the present conditions. There has been a decrease in acreage planted to cotton of 15 to 20 per cent. All of that curtailment cannot be ascribed to experience, for the Spring has been late and planting has been delayed by excessive rains. In the meantime, the price of cotton has been rising in a way to encourage additional planting. Therefore, considerable acreage not intended for cotton may be tardily planted to that crop, so that no final comparison of this year's acreage with last year's is yet possible. But in the notable decrease in the purchase of fertilizer there is conclusive evidence of an intention to produce less cotton and more of other things.

Pressure has been applied by the bankers, who in many parts of the South have insisted upon a lower ratio of cotton acreage to that devoted to the production of foodstuffs for man

COURAGE FOR OTHERS.

Stories of heroism will come to us in numbers from this latest tragedy of the war, the sinking of the Lusitania. No one will be tempted to understate the acts of bravery, coolness, and humanity that emerge for the honor of the race from the confused reports of such events, but it is worth while to consider also the stay-at-home courage of those who have to bear in imagination all the possibilities conjured up by the news of the dreadful day.

On the Transylvania, which sailed Friday afternoon after word of the Lusitania's loss had been received, were a number of nurses from the Royal Victoria Hospital at Montreal, going over to nurse the wounded Canadian soldiers. Four of these nurses called up their parents on the long distance telephone and told them of the disaster, asking if they should still sail. All were told to put their trust in Providence and do their duty. It is this sort of incident even more than the courage of persons confronted by actual danger that testifies to a martial spirit among peace-loving citizens. It is a foretaste of what would happen in ordinary homes if mothers and fathers, too old to fight, were called upon to send their children to the aid of the nation. Whatever the outcome of the present serious situation, it is a satisfaction to reflect that here in our own country as in Canada the moral temper is not likely to fail to respond to any real need.

A BAD PRACTICE ANYHOW.

Major SYDNEY GRANT of the National Guard is probably inclined to take too seriously the effect on school children of the words of the songs they sing. "I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier" means no more to a child than "Tipperary" or "Rosie, You Are My Posie." Still it is not encouraging to learn that the children in one of our public schools are trained to bleat the doggerel of the vaudevilles. That practice can scarcely be in accord with a sound view of elementary education. By and large, the children will get quite enough of the blessed vaudevilles away from school. There is much better music and poetry for them to memorize in school hours, when there is time to spare from the study of reading, writing, and arithmetic, in all of which so many of the public school children are found defective when they are put to work.

The principal of the school to whom Major GRANT complained has a good heart and is full of sympathy for human afflictions, but he might better devote all his energies to teaching his pupils the essential rudiments than to try to "breed in them a wholesome horror of war." Boys will not profit much by that kind of moral training. Moreover, the schools are supported by taxation which is borne by all the people, and a large [illegible] of them have a natural and [illegible] objection

BIG GAME HUNTERS.

Mayor MITCHEL is looking for grizzlies in Wyoming. It is a pardonable ambition to kill the biggest and fiercest beast that roams the forest. Meanwhile the hunting is good in New York for those who prefer that sort. President MCANENY is hot foot after the tiger in Manhattan, and even hotter after the elephant at Albany.

When the Mayor comes back with a pelt for the President of the Board of Aldermen it will be a pretty return of the compliment for the President to hand the Mayor the hide of either the beast of the city or the bigger beast of the State. The President fights with his trusty fountain pen and finds it mightier than the Winchester for his purpose. If he gets the veto he is after he will not envy the Mayor his grizzly. Nor will the Mayor grudge Mr. MCANENY his veto. The Mayor will have his share of the glory of the chase of the tiger and the elephant, with his hunt for the grizzly as an added attraction.

Nobody will grudge the Mayor his hunt, but it will be felt that it is better that he should fall than that Mr. MCANENY should be disappointed in his not very still hunt. Good luck to both sportsmen will be the general wish, but with perhaps just a shade more fervor in the wish that the President of the Board of Aldermen shall succeed. When he bags his game it will be for the good of all.

AN UNSOLVED MYSTERY.

The Freeport murder is still an unsolved mystery. Circumstantial evidence which is not strong enough to convict, testimony which has been twice rejected by normal jurymen, are unavailing. The charge of the trial Judge on Saturday was exactly right, in the circumstances, and the verdict was in accordance with the charge. In the second trial of Mrs. CARMAN the prosecution did not clarify its case, but hopelessly muddled it. From the beginning a possible motive for the crime has been apparent, and after the second trial only that motive remains. Conjecture is inevitable, but unimportant.

Mrs. CARMAN cannot be tried again; she has proclaimed her innocence from the first and she has borne herself throughout the ordeal in the manner of an unjustly accused person filled with righteous indignation. The case promised last July to become another of the impenetrable mysteries in the criminal annals. Credit should not be withheld from Nassau County for the expeditious manner in which this Freeport case has been dealt with. The accused was tried twice within a few months, which would be considered an amazing record in some other counties we could name.

In view of the sacrifice of the lives of more than 100 of our fellow citizens in the destruction of the Lusitania, it would be seemly and befitting to lower the American flag, displayed on so many buildings in honor of the fleet, to half-mast, for one day at least.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Disaster Without Humiliation.

Though the Lusitania was free from the structural faults to which the rapid sinking of the Titanic was ascribed, she went down even more quickly, and with a loss of life almost as great. These facts do not show, of course, that precautionary measures in the building of a ship are useless, but simply that any ship, if sufficiently injured, will go down in spite of all that can be done to increase her factor of safety. In spite, that is, of all that can be done without depriving her of utility for the purposes for which ships are made.

And the damage suffered by the Lusitania from the two torpedoes heavily charged with high explosives by which she was hit was far more extensive than that inflicted on the Titanic by a glancing blow from submerged ice. This is shown not only by the swiftness of her listing and sinking, but even more conclusively by the many passengers and members of the crew who were killed or wounded by the direct effects of the two explosions. There was nothing like that in the other disaster, for then, though the ice opened a huge hole in the ship's side, the injury was strictly localized, and what might be called superficial. It let in water, and that was all.

Great as was the destruction wrought in the Lusitania, its extent seems not to have been promptly realized by the first-cabin passengers. Unfortunately for themselves, they thought she would float much longer than she did, and the result was that the number of them saved was not proportioned to those who escaped from the other cabins.

It is gratifying, but not surprising, to learn that there were no signs of panic, or even of excitement, among the crew, and that every officer did his full duty to the last. Without knowledge of the circumstances, there might—indeed, would—have been critical comment on the survival of the Captain and the first and second officers. But the Captain, according to convincing testimony, obeyed the stern law of his rank and was rescued from the water after going down with his ship, and presumably his subordinates, unless ordered by him to take charge of boats, showed like devotion to duty.

An Obvious Duty Is Neglected.

An amendment of the Boylan drug law, made at the legislative session just closed, simplified the regulation of the traffic in narcotics by making it unnecessary for physicians to record their prescriptions of these substances on blanks furnished by the State authorities as well as on those the filling out of which is required by the new Federal statute dealing with the same subject. That was commendable, as it diminished the clerical work so irksome to professional men, and a duplication of these records did nothing toward facilitating the enforcement of the law.

It is unfortunate, however, that while the legislators were engaged in amending the Boylan law they did not remedy at least the most important of its other defects. That is its failure to recognize the need of making provision for saving those in whom a drug habit has been firmly established from the agonies and dangers of a sudden and complete deprivation. Those who do not understand that drug habituation is a disease, requiring, like another, treatment and, if possible, cure—who insist on viewing it purely as a vice—may hold that the sufferings of the victims are deserved and therefore unworthy of much sympathy. But even they who make this contention, which is as unscientific as it is uncharitable, should remember that the dangers of deprivation to the habitues not only involve their very lives in many cases, but not infrequently put others in peril.

There is to be considered, too, the fact that when a law is unnecessarily and unjustly severe efforts to violate or get around it are always determined and usually successful. Almost invariably such a law becomes in time more or less what is called a dead letter. Illicit dealing in narcotics, and everything that tends to increase their use for other than strictly medical purposes, cannot be too rigorously suppressed, and hardly can be too harshly punished. But it is a condition that confronts us now, and for one necessity arising out of that condition, that of taking care of the existing victims, the lawmakers have made no provision.

Really Is Going Too Far.

Encouraged, presumably, by the surprising ease with which the operators of several surface car lines have accomplished the impossibility of supplying seats for two-thirds of their passengers, the desperate and implacable innovators who constitute our Board of Health have ordered the performance of the same dread task on the Subway trains.

Of course they know as well as the rest of us, having been told at least as often, that the command to let only half as many people stand as sit in the Subway cars is a preposterous one—that any attempt to carry it out will inevitably lead to riots, mornings and evening, sanguinary enough to appall even the present rulers of Belgium. But the Health Board has issued its ukase or irade—one seeks for the decree a name associated with the exercise of irresponsible and despotic powers—just the same.

And the most terrible feature of the situation is that as likely as not the Subway managers, too, will go ahead and do what they have been told to do! Needs must when the—that is, when a Board of Health drives, and then, though we may feel a certain satisfaction at being relieved from further giving in Subway cars of our justly celebrated imitation of sardines in a box, we shall none the less suffer from that dangerous disturbance of mind which always follows the destruction of a firm belief.

When one knows that a thing is impossible, it is more than confusing, it shakes down pillars and bulwarks, to have that thing done. One no longer is sure of anything, and drifts along with a young-man-the-cataract-is-below-you feeling.

ETHICS.

Strange Outgivings from Its Professor in Union Seminary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is certainly interesting, if not edifying, to have a professor of ethics in a theological seminary, defend the atrocious act of sending innocent women and children to a watery grave as justifiable. It would seem that torpedoing merchant vessels on the high seas and without warning, and producing professors with keen and discriminating powers of ethical perception are the twin product of German Kultur. We were solemnly and impressively informed last August, that Kultur did not mean culture, and as we look back over the last few months and remember Belgium, Louvain, Rheims, Falaba, Gulflight, Lusitania, and chlorine gas, we at last have a vague inkling that the terms are not synonomous. The average American—not the hyphenated variety, Irish or otherwise—prefers culture to Kultur, and if professional ethics demand otherwise, then we will follow "the man on the street."

This professor of ethics, whose official duty is to teach ethics according to his statement in The Globe on Saturday, justifies the murdering of noncombatants, a large number of whom are women and children and many of them citizens of neutral countries, on the following basis. They were aboard a British merchant vessel, and this country "has permitted the exportation of arms and munitions of war to one party of belligerents"; therefore the United States should not complain and this deed was a heroic act of war. This may be professional casuistry but it is not honesty. As a matter of fact, the United States has not denied any of the belligerents the right to purchase arms and ammunition. They all have that right, Germany among the rest; what we want is not Kultur ethics but truth.

Professor Hall makes the statement that England introduced dumdum bullets and leaves the reader with the impression that her armies today use such, as a matter of course. We must ask the professor of ethics for proof of the assertion.

His further assertion that 25,000 Boer women were murdered in the concentration camps of the Transvaal is absolutely false. The writer visited such camps and the women were treated with respect and fed as well, if not better than, at least, the Canadian soldiers were. When President Kruger fled from South Africa, he left Mrs. Kruger behind; he knew that she would be safe in the hands of the British and courteously treated, and she was, as were other Boer women.

Would Professor Hall, as a source of enlightenment, inform us what German noncombatant vessels in neutral waters at anchor were sunk by the British, and at the same time, tell us how many women and children were sent to the bottom of the deep with the ships? According to my dictionary the definition of ethics is "the science which treats of the principles of human morality"; but this dictionary is rather antiquated now, being published away back in the primeval year of 1913.

Union Seminary Undenominational.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A news article in THE TIMES of May 3 refers to the Union Theological Seminary as a Presbyterian institution. As a matter of fact, there has been no ecclesiastical supervision or control since 1892. Since 1905 no doctrinal subscription of any kind has been given by professors, and the Faculty has contained members of five denominations. The students are drawn from more than a score of denominations, to all of which they return, becoming ministers in good and regular standing.

THE IMPERIAL MIRTH.

I notice in your Picture Section on a recent Sunday a reproduction of a photograph representing the German Emperor enjoying a laugh with General von Einem in the market place of Vouziers, France. The picture gives every evidence of having been specially posed. It is said that Wellington wept as he rode over the field of Waterloo after the battle. Waterloo was only a skirmish compared with the hundreds of battles that have been fought during the past eight months, and yet there are no tears flowing from the Kaiser's eyes; instead he laughs!

None of the leaders among the Allies—Kitchener, Joffre, Earl Grey, or French—could be guilty of such lack of taste. It has been charged that the Kaiser's appearance had undergone a great change since the war broke out, that he had grown older, and looked wearied and worried. If to counteract that impression he yielded to solicitation and posed for this picture to deceive, it throws a new light on his character and shows him a weak, empty, theatrical figurehead instead of the stern and inflexible King which he is generally believed to be.

It is a well-known fact that the Kaiser is small of stature, and yet in all his pictures he appears as tall as most of his Generals. How different was Oliver Cromwell! When he sat for a picture he told the artist: "Paint me as I am. If you leave out a scar or a wrinkle I will not pay you a penny."

CLERGYMEN AS WARRIORS.

Some Historic Instances Recalled by a Virginia Correspondent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There are several instances of ordained clergymen having left their charges to go to war which may be of interest to some of your readers. The Rev. Peter Muhlenberg was rector of a parish at Woodstock, the county seat of a county in the northern part of the Valley of Virginia that had been named Dunmore, in honor of the Colonial Governor. This Governor made himself so obnoxious to the people of Virginia that the name of the county was changed to Shenandoah, a name that it still retains. In June, 1774, Mr. Muhlenberg was elected a member of the House of Burgesses, and in that capacity he became personally intimate with Washington, Jefferson and Henry, and was an enthusiastic advocate of colonial rights. At a meeting of the freeholders of the county, he was elected Chairman, or "Moderator," and his influence made that county one of the first to take a firm stand against British aggression. In 1775 he was elected Colonel of the Eighth Virginia Regiment, and when the crucial moment arrived he preached his last sermon from Ecclesiastes iii: 1: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven." He described in glowing terms the lamentable condition of the colonies, and said: "There is a time for everything, and now is the time to fight." With these closing words he threw aside the black gown, in which it was then the custom to preach, and appeared in the full uniform of a Continental Colonel. He ordered the drums to be sounded at the door of the church, organized his command from his parishioners, and marched off with them to join the army. He became quite a noted officer and rose to the rank of a Brigadier General.

Another well known instance was that of the Right Rev. Leonidas K. Polk, who was Bishop of Tennessee at the outbreak of the civil war. He had received a military education prior to entering the ministry, and when Tennessee seceded from the Union he left his bishopric and became an officer in the Confederate service. He ultimately rose to be a Brigadier General.

A third instance is that of the late Bishop of Alabama, the Right Rev. Richard H. Wilmer. He graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1839, and by the time that the civil war broke out his fame as a clergyman and a preacher had spread far beyond the limits of Virginia. So ardently did Mr. Wilmer sympathize with the Southern cause that he raised a company from the men in the neighborhood of his church and became its Captain, but as soon as the Confederacy was organized, "The Protestant Episcopal Church in the Confederate States of America" was organized as well. Alabama having lost its Bishop by death, Wilmer was elected to the post in November, 1861, and after great urging by his brother clergymen he left the army and accepted the position, being the only Bishop of the Anglican communion who was consecrated during the existence of the Confederacy.

Without going back to the Middle Ages, when Bishops and Priors rode at the head of their troops, we can see that there are instances of militant clergymen in recent days, and so it will not be any novel sight to see them in their national ranks.

MANDATORY LEGISLATION.

A Critic Complains of Its Use to Grow Party Plums.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Mayor and some other city officials are complaining about the share of the direct tax which taxpayers here will bear. They say the State should not embark in new construction or unnecessary expense at this time. What do they do? Within the past week the Board of Estimate, among other things, has authorized special revenue bonds for salaries and expenses of the Public Service Commission, $1,038,000; for the longest piers in the world, $1,800,000, and for a new Court House, $9,000,000. The sum of these items nearly equals the city's share of the direct tax. While they complain that it costs $64,000,000 to run the State for a year, they spend $200,000,000 to run the city for the same year.

But, they say, "mandatory legislation compels us to spend money." Let us see where mandatory legislation originates. The first bill out of Assembly Cities Committee in 1914 was a bill to create the office of Third Deputy Controller. It was introduced at the request of the city, and created a wholly unnecessary office, in view of the law which permits the Controller to designate any clerk in his office to perform any of the duties which could be performed by a Deputy Controller. This year one of the first city bills reported in the Legislature was also introduced at the request of the city, that creating the job of Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner. This office was probably unnecessary, in view of the fact that for some months the office of one of the Deputy Commissioners had been vacant. Instances might be multiplied. This "mandatory legislation" excuse has been much overworked.

Far Rockaway complains because it gets slight benefit from the taxes it pays the City Government, and its complaint is characterized as vicious and ridiculous. The city complains because it claims not to receive proportionate benefit from the taxes for the support of the State Government, and the same oracles solemnly pronounce its complaint righteous and justified.

Not Notified "Personally."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read an article "Ends British Prestige" on Page 4 of today's TIMES, in which Dr. Eugene Kuhnemann is reported in quotation marks as saying: "Every passenger on board that ship was notified personally that the Lusitania was to be sunk." If a correct report, the word personally is a lie. X. Y. Z.

HOW GORGAS CLEANED UP THE ISTHMUS.

His Work of Sanitation Defended Against the Criticisms Passed Upon It by Miss Gertrude Beeks.

By J. G. HOLCOMBE.

New York, May 7, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Miss Gertrude Beeks, under date of May 1, 1915, rushes to a defense of Colonel Goethals and ends her communication with the following, referring to Colonel Gorgas:

"With due regard for his scientific knowledge, which undoubtedly has been of great humanitarian value, it has often occurred to those who were familiar with the shortcomings of the Sanitary Department before Colonel Goethals took charge of this work that undue credit has been given a very ineffective administrative officer."

Perhaps the best way to reply to this lady is by stating facts as they existed previous to the time that Colonel Goethals, whom she designates the autocrat, took charge, with those thereafter and the cost incurred in each case. W. Leon Pepperman, in his book "Who Built the Panama Canal?" quotes from a speech of John F. Stevens as to the conditions existing in July, 1905, as follows:

> And—worse than all—over and above, in the diseased imagination of the disjointed force of white employes, hovered the angel of death in the shape of yellow fever, a number of cases of which were then prevailing and from which several deaths had occurred.

Colonel Gorgas, as Chief Sanitary Officer under Mr. Shonts, and with his aid and assistance, both in men and money, was given a free hand to clean up and make the Isthmus a healthy place to live and work in. This free hand he had until the end of the fiscal year 1908. During these four years the cost of hospital management was at the rate of $888,748 per year. During the next six years, with Colonel Goethals as the autocrat, hospital expenses increased to an average of $1,025,989 per year, or 15 per cent. During the first four years, with Colonel Gorgas in charge and having full sway of sanitation, the average annual cost therefor was $842,730 per year. During the next six years, under Colonel Goethals's autocratic sway, the cost of sanitation was $999,799 per year, or 15 per cent. less. Thus, the average total annual expenses chargeable to the Health Department for the first four years, when real work was accomplished for hospital and sanitation, is only about $6,000 per year greater than during the last six years under the autocrat, who had but to maintain existing conditions.

During these four years, and before Miss Beeks visited the Isthmus in June, 1907, yellow fever had been banished. There she found contented people to the extent of upward of 28,000 on the Government payrolls and nearly 2,000 members of families residing on the Isthmus; she found that Colonel Gorgas had not only rid the Isthmus of yellow fever, but he had reduced the malaria from 727, per thousand to 287 per thousand, and that he had put heart and confidence in the working force; that he had made it possible for men to have their families with them and made the Isthmus the place that Colonel Goethals found it, with contented men, wives, and children—the work in full sway under as nearly perfect a working machine as man had ever assembled. None of the men then there, or since, have doubted or questioned Colonel Gorgas's ability and what he accomplished. The free hand that he had in the campaign of making the Isthmus healthy was by direction, and with the full support of the Chairman of the commission, Mr. Shonts, and he (Gorgas) has publicly stated that it was the able support given him by Mr. Shonts and Mr. Shonts's ability to think in millions, where the Government officials thought in thousands, that made the work on the Isthmus possible.

Colonel Gorgas needs no defense by any one, but when Miss Beeks tries to intimate that his administration cannot compare with Colonel Goethals's, it is only necessary to refer to the public reports of the Isthmian Canal Commission to find out what the relative cost has been. Colonel Goethals saved $6,000 in the average annual expenditures over that of Colonel Gorgas; he did not improve health conditions; he did not meet with or have any of the trying situations that faced Colonel Gorgas in his control of health affairs from 1904 to 1907. To Colonel Gorgas and to Mr. Shonts's backing of his campaign the country is indebted for the canal. Government officials from them learned at least to think and act in big affairs in a way that no other Government work had taught them; so that today all the world wonders at the miracle wrought even without an Aladdin's lamp.

THE COLLEGE MAN.

An Abundance of Knowledge Causes Some of His Mistakes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The business man who signed himself "W. De S. T." complains most bitterly about the present status of the college man. He complains about his spelling and penmanship. To make his complaint valid he says: "During the past fifteen years I have employed 200 or 300 young men, (prospective college graduates or post-graduates,)" &c. And from this experience of three-quarters of a score he draws the conclusion that the college man is inexperienced in business. As a student myself, I first want to say a word in regard to spelling. The average student is a good speller. His vocabulary is well chosen and his general manner of expressing himself, both in writing and in speaking, is, on the average, most satisfactory. A student, in the ordinary sense, is a man who takes wide interest in all affairs; he reads newspapers, magazines, books, &c. Besides reading in his own tongue, he reads foreign literature. This last fact makes it very easy for him to fall into most "uncontrollable" mistakes. For example, in reading French he meets such words as "litterature," "adresse," "adulte," "individuel," and "industriel," or if he reads German, he cannot help falling over such words as "Cabinett," "Kultur," and "Copie." The average student is sometimes so overtaxed when it comes to spelling that he becomes confused about the correct spelling. Surely no one will deny that there is a slight slip of the pen when one writes the French word "adresse" for the English word "address," or when one writes the German word "Cabinett" for our word "Cabinet." These little mistakes are justifiable, and even the wisest and most keen can easily trip on them. Referring to penmanship, little remains to be said. From the day that shorthand came into existence longhand sank into insignificance; from the day that the typewriter came into being the handwriting, so long reverenced in days gone by, likewise fell beneath the level. If I were a scientist specialized in the writing profession I could easily prove how those two mentioned innovations depreciated the style in writing. And I may say with full authority that writing, after all, is of little import. I am ready to wager my last cent to any one who would attempt to read Lincoln's own handwriting, or Dickens's, or Washington's.

It is time to stop censuring institutions and young men who are just about ready to enter upon their career. More courage and less fault finding are the best assets both for the city and world at large.

MR. REDFIELD'S OPTIMISM.

False Tooting on the Horn of Plenty, Says Mr. Dean.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is useless for Secretary Redfield to say that "prosperity has already been restored." Prosperity cannot be established by the false tooting of Redfield's horn of plenty. Those who tell the truth are denounced by him as "purveyors of poverty for personal purposes."

The bank clearings for the first seventeen weeks of this year show a decline of nearly 8 per cent. compared with last year. This is conclusive proof of a decline in business. Comparing building permits of this year in 140 cities with those of 1914, we find that there was a falling off of $5,000,000 in January, $6,000,000 in February, and $7,000,000 in March. This year has so far been the most disastrous in twenty years when measured by the number of commercial failures and the total amount of money involved. Last year was very bad. In the first three months of 1914 there were 4,826 commercial failures, involving $88,000,000; but this year the failures for the first quarter rose to 7,219, involving $106,000,000. Here is an increase of $23,000,000.

The condition of the railroads has not improved. On the contrary, their gross earnings have fallen off $47,000,000 from July, 1914, to March 1, 1915, and there are now 193,000 more idle cars than there were a year ago. On April 1 the United States Steel orders were 400,000 tons less than a year ago. Pig iron and steel production has declined. The barometrics of business prove that there has been no practical progress toward the restoration of industrial prosperity. JOHN CANDEE DEAN.

The Elderly Incapable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been deeply interested in the correspondence in your columns regarding the "elderly woman," and the reason why she cannot procure employment, and have been inclined to think our experience pertinent to the matter. For nine weeks we have been advertising for a capable woman of middle age to look after the household of two business women, and the replies would have been comical were not the matter so grave. No competent person has been found as yet. The only one whose reply seemed promising was of violent temper, alienating an old and trusted employe the first day, complaining of everything in the house, wasting and throwing away good food in a manner which appalled us, and leaving us after a reign of terror lasting four days, very thankful to do our own housework.

Is it not that the average American woman has been brought up as "an expensive household pet," and is fit for nothing else?

ENGLAND'S REAL ENEMY.

Dr. Chalmers Says It Is Drink and Not Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Lloyd George says "We are fighting against Germany and Austria and Drink, and so far as I can see the greatest of these three deadly foes is Drink," some people think he exaggerates the danger. But in regard to a man who drinks we often say, "He is his own worst enemy." Is it any different with a nation?

If Britons "put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains"; if they refuse to give up their whisky and gin and bitter beer, they may find themselves laid out on a bier much more bitter than their national drink. Every Englishman would fight to the death to prevent the Germans from getting a foothold on their shores, but, if the reports we hear are correct, they will permit a deadlier foe to get a strangle hold on the nation.

If England cannot control herself and put down the liquor danger, the day will surely come when she will lose her place as one of the leading powers. The drink that has drawn many of our best and brightest brothers down to destruction can make a nation bite the dust. If Great Britain allows the enemy inside its sea-girt walls to work her woes, she need not blame the Germans and Austrians for her undoing. As Hosea, the prophet said of his own people, "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself," so may some prophet in England say in the years to come.

It is because England has stood so strongly in the past for things good and true, it is because we owe to her so much that goes to make for the best and highest here, that we hope and pray she may open her eyes and see the danger that threatens her peace and power in her own land.

To Improve Park Concerts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the season for open air concerts is approaching, it may not be out of place to voice some complaints and to suggest methods of improvement. No one who is qualified to judge or who cares for his reputation will say that the average of the concerts given in the parks last year was good. The city pays a conductor, leader, bandmaster, call him what you will, for his band, at too much per musician. Does any one inquire how many of those posing as "the band" are musicians and how many are dummies who do nothing but pose, holding an instrument, as an excuse for drawing pay? Why should concerts be passably good in Central Park, where the well-to-do assemble, and beneath criticism in Tompkins Square, Abingdon Square, and the smaller parks where the poorer people abide?

A change in method is necessary. A committee on music should be appointed by the city to select competent leaders who will supervise the make-up of all bands giving public concerts.

NOCTURNE.

And, even as long lines of homing birds,
So do the evening shadows climb the sedge,
Painting in violet mist the weary herds,
That shambling silently along to rest,
Shake from their bells faint, silvered sounds along the poplared crest.

A breeze, as soft as sobbing Dryad's note,
Is born and clears away the vaposed air.
Thus do the stars twink forth, as ships afloat
Upon a sapphire sea; and pearly fair,
Clad in amber vestments, rides serene
My Lady Moon, demanding homage as the Planet's Queen.

Thus does it grow apace, the cooling night,
That harbinger of peace, which smoothes away
From off the brow of day the enfestered blight
Of borrowed cares and self's disputed sway.
Now the imagination leaves the case
Of flesh and seeks to join the stars in changing, endless race.

Waft upward toward those tangled, diamond mists
Of starry silence, tremulous and gold,
And toward that soundless canopy that wists
Not of the earth, but waxes ageless old—
Upsoar, and shake away all clinging stress,
To faint and float e'en for a space in calm forgetfulness.

AMERICANS SEND AID TO ZION ORANGERIES

Jacob H. Schiff and Other Noted Jews Contribute to Loan for Palestine Growers.

TURKEY CUTS OFF EXPORTS

An international loan, to which leading American Jews have contributed heavily, saved the large orange-raising industry of the Jewish colonies in Palestine, according to advices just received by the Provisional Executive Committee for General Zionist Affairs in this city. The orange industry in Palestine represents an investment of $3,000,000, and the labor of twenty years of cultivation which has brought the groves to a high state of perfection.

The entry of Turkey into the war closed the big Liverpool market, as well as the important market at Port Said, to the Palestinian orange growers. The isolation of Austria likewise shut the market at Trieste. This left oranges worth $400,000 to rot in Palestine, threatening many orange growers there with ruin. An attempt was made to create a market for these oranges in the United States, and 5,000 cases were sold in New York by a committee headed by Maurice Wertheim, a son-in-law of Henry Morgenthau, American Ambassador at Constantinople. Subsequently, however, the Turkish Government prohibited the export of oranges, on the ground that they might supply the countries at war with Turkey with foodstuffs.

The loss of their crop deprived the colonists of funds for working their groves next year. To raise these necessary funds, estimated at $120,000, a committee was formed in this country, headed by Judge Julian W. Mack, and consisting also of Dr. Julius Goldman as Treasurer, Maurice Wertheim as Secretary, and Louis D. Brandeis and E. W. Lewin-Epstein. The committee succeeded in raising the sum required, $40,000 being subscribed in this country and $40,000 each from English and from French sources.

The subscribers in the United States were: Jacob H. Schiff, $20,000; Julius Rosenwald, $10,000; Samuel Fels of Philadelphia, $5,000; Daniel Guggenheim, $2,500, and Adolph Lewisohn, $2,500. To secure this loan the colonists in Palestine jointly and severally pledged their lands, guaranteeing repayment within five years. The papers securing the loan are now being inspected by Ambassador Morgenthau in Constantinople.

All the landholders in the Zionist colonies have become Ottoman subjects, according to communications received by the Zionist organization here, and are carrying on their work in spite of the inconveniences of martial law.

LIVELY AT WHITE SULPHUR.

Many Riding and Driving Parties Visit Points of Interest.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 9.—Society at White Sulphur spent Sunday out of doors, except during the church services in the morning. This was the liveliest Sunday of the season, and many riding and driving parties were formed for trips to places of interest in the mountains. In the morning several young women from Lewisburg Seminary arrived at the Greenbrier by motor, and took luncheon and dinner here. They spent the afternoon viewing the hotels, and in the evening they stayed for the concert.

The regular church services were held in St. Thomas's Church, and the Rev. Dr. Roller of Charleston, W. Va., was the preacher. There was a large attendance, and the church was attractively decorated with lilac boughs.

Mme. Diaz Albertini of Paris and Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds D. Albertini of London drove over the summit of Kanes Mountain and took tea at the Log Cabin. Mrs. D. B. Iverson entertained several friends on a drive to Alleghany, Va.

Mrs. Thornton Lewis was the hostess at a tea given at her home, the Meadows, to about twenty of her friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wick motored to the Virginia Hot Springs, and had luncheon there. They returned late in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Jordan and Mrs. H. N. Slater of Boston and Robert Batcheller of Washington arrived in an automobile from Hot Springs at the Greenbrier this afternoon, and took luncheon here, spending the afternoon with friends.

The arrivals at the Greenbrier today included Mrs. Frederick Pearson, Miss Lesly Pearson, Mrs. W. A. Merriman, Miss Mildred Merriman, J. V. Wade, and R. H. Trumbull of New York, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lane of Dallas, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Crumbacher of Independence, Iowa, and H. P. Dawler of Clearfield, Penn.

HOUSE PARTIES AT TUXEDO.

Sir Arthur and Lady Herbert Among Guests—Outdoor Sports.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., May 9.—A beautiful day attracted many motoring parties here today for luncheon, and many of the colonists had week-end house parties. Outdoor sports are now all the rage. The golf links and tennis courts were crowded, and the Yacht Club had its usual week-end races.

Many notable visitors spent the week end here. Sir Arthur Herbert and Lady Herbert were guests of Leo Everett at the club, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Pooler gave a week-end party with a dinner and luncheon for ex-Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, at which many of the colonists attended.

Mrs. William Post, who is stopping at the club, entertained Mrs. Charles B. Alexander at luncheon today.

Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley, who came out for Sunday to their Tuxedo house, also entertained many guests. Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Pearson Hobson will arrive here tomorrow at the Hull cottage to pass the Summer. Mr. and Mrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis opened their Tuxedo house today.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Tilford, who have just returned from the West, entertained at luncheon today. Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Morris, who will soon open their Tuxedo house, were also host and hostess at luncheon at the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker spent Sunday at their Tuxedo villa.

Among other arrivals today were Mr. and Mrs. Newell W. Tilton, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Weld, Dr. and Mrs. Preston Satterwhite, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, A. Mueller Ury, John G. Neeser, Lloyd Warren, H. C. Drayton, A. E. Gallatin, Miss Frances Breese, Philip O. Mills, Frederick J. Dieter, J. F. Pierson, Jr., J. R. Bloomer, and R. B. Lanier.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward L. Keyes have opened their Tuxedo house. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harris have arrived from the West. Mrs. Amory S. Carhart is at Villa Blanca, and Mr. and Mrs. John Shillito Rogers are in their villa on East Lake Road.

Returning from Europe to Lenox.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., May 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Fairfax and Mrs. William H. Bradford are sailing from Liverpool tomorrow for New York. They have been in Europe since December, 1913, when they went to the South of France. After the war began they went to England. On arriving they will go to Wayside in Lenox.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Crowninshield, who passed the Winter in Sicily, have also sailed. They will go to Stockbridge on arrival.

At Curtis Hotel are Mrs. Joseph P. Ord, Miss Jennings, George Pollock of New York, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Shaw and Miss Frances Curtis of Boston.

BUY BIG VIRGINIA TRACT.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McLean Are Building a Race Track in Leesburg.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 9.—Word reached Newport today that Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington, whose lease of Reginald Norman's farm in Portsmouth expires next month, had bought a tract of land in Leesburg, Va., covering 1,200 acres which they are improving, building a large stable for show horses, jumpers, and a race track. Mr. and Mrs. McLean plan to return to Newport late in July, to remain for the Newport Horse Show in September, where Mr. McLean will show his horses.

Miss Grace Elliston of New York is planning to bring here about the middle of July the poetic play, "The Blot on the Scutcheon." Miss Elliston will be assisted by a cast of notable actors and actresses and present the play in one of the local theatres.

It is reported that Alexander S. Cochran, the yachtsman, has purchased the estate of Commodore and Mrs. Edwin D. Morgan on Brenton's Cove and Harrison Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown and her son are expected home from California on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Rives, Miss Mildred Rives, and F. Bayard Rives arrive for the Summer next Thursday.

Paul A. Andrews and Stuart Duncan returned to New York tonight after spending the week-end with their families.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. John C. Watson of Washington, D. C., are planning to visit their son and daughter-in-law here, Commander and Mrs. Edward H. Watson.

Mrs. J. R. Busk and Miss Margaret H. Buck will arrive at Indian Spring for the Summer next Wednesday.

COTTAGERS INSPECT VILLAS.

Mrs. John H. Hanan and Others Prepare for Opening of Season.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., May 9.—A number of the cottagers visited the Pier during the last week to inspect their villas before the opening of the Summer season.

Among recent visitors here were Mrs. John Henry Hanan of New York and Mrs. L. J. B. Somerville of Brooklyn, N. Y., the latter a guest of Mrs. Hanan at Shore Acres last season. Mrs. Hanan plans to open Shore Acres early this season, and Mrs. Talbot Hanan will arrive here during the first week of June. The yacht Surf has sailed from England and Mr. Hanan will place her in commission for service along the coast upon her arrival.

Cottage rentals are reported favorably, and advance bookings indicate a lively season for the Pier. J. Maus Schermerhorn of New York has rented Chetolah Cottage on Gibson Avenue for the Summer. Finisterre Cottage on Ocean Road has been leased to Isaac H. Clothier of Philadelphia. Mr. Clothier spent last season at the Pier.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lieber of Bryn Mawr, Penn., have rented a cottage on Kingston Road for the season. They were here for the polo matches a year ago, and doubtless Mr. Lieber will play in the polo games this Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin White of Providence have rented a cottage at Kentara Green.

Plans are under way for the opening up of the Casino, which will be directed by a new management this Summer.

ARRIVALS AT HOT SPRINGS.

Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman and Mr. and Mrs. Cluett Among Others.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cluett of Troy and H. E. Havemeyer of Chicago arrived at Hot Springs today. More than 100 members of the Electrical Manufacturers' Association, who have been at the Homestead since Wednesday, left on the Bankers' Special tonight.

Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman joined Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island today at the Homestead. Governor and Mrs. Beeckman probably will be here for a week.

Judge W. W. Douglas of Providence left Hot Springs tonight for his home.

Arrivals at the Homestead today are Mr. and Mrs. T. D. McChesney, Mrs. Harry S. Harkness, William A. Hamann, Miss Henriette Hamann, Harold Nathan, Mrs. C. H. Brooks and Miss Brooks of New York, H. E. Havemeyer and Dr. and Mrs. William H. Wilder of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cluett of Troy, N. Y., and Floyd W. Mundy of Montclair.

STAGE SOCIETY'S ACTIVITIES

Fostering of Barker's Engagement Its Chief Work This Season.

The annual report of the Executive Committee of the Stage Society of New York, of which Mrs. William Astor Chanler is President, reviews the activities of the organization for the past season. The principal activity of the society was the fostering of Granville Barker's répertoire season in Wallack's Theatre, for which it advanced $5,000 to help guarantee the expenses. A performance of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in her original rôle, from which $1,453 was realized for charity, and an exhibition of stage art were other undertakings of the organization.

Next season the society will return to its original work of giving special performances of unusual plays.

West-Usher Wedding Plans.

The marriage of Miss Hazel Lansing Usher and William Robertson West will take place on Wednesday, June 2, at the home of the bride, 165 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, and the Rev. Dr. John Maynard of the Embury Memorial M. E. Church will perform the ceremony. Miss Usher will have Mrs. Harry Austin Usher, her sister-in-law, as matron of honor and the other attendants will be Mrs. Howard Pickford Clarke and Miss Winifred C. Langdon. Mr. West will have his brother, David West, Jr., as his best man, and the ushers are to be Harry Austin Usher and George Holte Usher, brothers of the bride.

Enos-Sutphin Wedding on June 5.

Miss Dorothy Hurlburt Sutphine, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Halsey Sutphin, and Alanson Trask Enos, Jr., a son of Mrs. Alanson Trak Enos of Englewood, N. J., will be married on Saturday, June 5, at 4:30 P. M., in Christ Church, at Clinton and Harrison Streets, Brooklyn, and the reception will be held at the bride's home, 50 Prospect Park West. Mr. Enos is a grandson of the late Dr. De Witt Clinton Enos and Mrs. Enos, and is a member of Squadron A. He was graduated from Harvard in 1910.

Plans for Four Selwyn Attractions.

Selwyn & Co. have announced their plans for their four attractions current in theatres in the Times Square neighborhood. "Under Cover" in the Cort and "Twin Beds" in the Fulton will continue their engagements, both begun early in the Fall, indefinitely. James Forbes's comedy, "The Show Shop," will end its stay in the Hudson Theatre the coming Saturday night. Margaret Illington's engagement in "The Lie" in the Harris Theatre will end May 29, to give the star a short vacation before she begins a fifty weeks' tour in the Henry Arthur Jones drama.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

In the Candler Theatre this afternoon the Drama Committee of the Gamut Club will give a special performance of three playlets, one of them Maeterlinck's "The Death of Tintagiles," in which Sarah Bernhardt will be seen here in the Fall. Incidentally the program will celebrate the second anniversary of the founding of the club.

Gertrude Hoffman, who will appear in the Palace this week in her dance revue, is said to have made a profit of $55,000 on the stock market during the recent activity in stocks.

A trial performance of "Ethel Hesitates," a comedy in one act, by Alice E. Ives, will be given on Thursday night in the Neighborhood Play House, Grand Street. The cast will include Clara Blandick, who will appear in the title role of the play; George B. Hubbard, John D. Winninger, and Douglas Hope.

BISHOP C. H. COLTON OF BUFFALO IS DEAD

Prelate Expected to Consecrate His New $1,000,000 Cathedral on May 31.

FORMERLY OF ST. STEPHEN'S

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 9.—Bishop Charles Henry Colton of the Roman Catholic Church died tonight.

Bishop Colton was born in this city in October, 1848. He was graduated from St. Xavier's College in the class of 1573, and was ordained a priest at St. Joseph's Seminary in Troy in 1876. His first pastorate was at St. Stephen's, in East Ttwenty-eighth Street, as assistant to the late Dr. McGlynn, and he remained there until 1886, when he received a charge at Port Chester, N. Y. After the excommunication of Dr. McGlynn, Father Colton was brought back from Port Chester, and his presence as pastor of St. Stephen's restored harmony there. The result of a few years of his work was that the parish was united, the debt cleared from the church and St. Stephen's School was established as one of the strongest of its kind in New York.

In 1896 Archbishop Corrigan made Father Colton the Chancellor of the Diocese of New York, and in 1903 the Pope appointed him to the vacancy in the Bishopric of Buffalo, as successor to Bishop Quigley, who had been raised to the Archbishopric of Chicago. Before he left for Buffalo his parishioners presented him with a crozier and a set of vestments.

Father Colton was the author of "Seedlings," "My Trip to Rome," "The Holy Land" and "Birds and Blossoms." He is survived by one sister, Miss Josephine Colton. He expected on the last day of this month to consecrate his new $1,000,000 marble Cathedral in Buffalo.

NEW BURLESQUE CIRCUIT.

At its monthly meeting Saturday the Directors of the Columbia Amusement Company, the corporation owning the two large burlesque circuits of the United States and Canada, arranged to transfer the direction and control of its No. 2 circuit to a new corporation known as the American Burlesque Association. The circuit consists of forty theatres and thirty-four traveling companies, all of which are either owned or leased by the Columbia Amusement Company.

Application has been made to the Secretary of State for incorporation papers for the new organization with a capitalization of $150,000. The officers who will assume charge upon the receipt of the charter are Gus Hill, President; George E. Lothrop, Vice President; Charles Franklin, Secretary; Rud K. Hynicka, Treasurer, and Charles E. Barton, General Manager. The incorporators are: George E. Lothrop of Boston, Samuel Levy of Detroit, Charles Waldron of Boston, Rud K. Hynicka of Cincinnati, and Charles Franklin, Charles E. Barton, and Gus Hill of New York.

The result of the new arrangement will be that the burlesque business of the country will be controlled by two companies instead of one, as has been the case since the Columbia Amusement Company absorbed the lesser circuit several years ago. The consideration for the transfer is given at $200,000, certain agreements regulating the scale of prices to be maintained by both circuits and restrictions as to the employment of performers having been adopted. The general offices of the new company will be in the Strand Theatre Building.

MINEOLA'S RECORD ENTRY.

Ladies' Kennel Association's Dog Show Will Have Over 959 Classes.

The annual dog show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America will be held at Mineola, L. I., on June 3 and 4, the entries closing with James Mortimer at Mineola on Thursday, May 13. It will be the thirteenth annual revival of the fixture, and this year's entry will be larger than ever before.

There will be 959 classes judged, which is even more than at the last Westminster Kennel Club Show, besides over 1,000 classified and unclassified special prizes to be awarded. Numerous cash prizes are to be awarded this year in fifteen of the variety classes. The judges this year will include William Faversham in the bull terrier classes.

Two judges are to come from England. They are Holland Buckley, an authority on terriers, who will make his American début with nearly all these varieties, and L. P. C. Astley of London, who was here last in 1905, who will pass on the merits of old English sheepdogs, bulldogs, poodles, fox terriers, Pomeranians, Pekingese, and some other breeds.

Dr. Henry Jarrett of Philadelphia will judge the heaviest line of breeds and the other judges include George R. Wakefield, for pointers; Dr. L. G. Knox, G. F. Eggert, John Sinnott, Theodore W. Crane, and J. E. Meade, for Boston terriers; Mrs. C. M. Lunt, in collies and Shetland sheepdogs, and Mrs. Mary Winthrop Turner for French bulldogs.

The officers of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America are Miss Anna Sands, President; Mrs. H. M. Harriman, Vice President; Mrs. Perry Belmont, Treasurer, and Miss M. L. Wickes, Secretary. Miss Sands, Miss L. Alger and Miss Bird from the Bench Show Committee.

DOG SHOW NETS $2,000.

Four Organizations Benefit by Charity Show Held at 71st Regt. Armory

The final adjustment of the accounts of Charity Dog Show which was held in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory on March 19 and 20 showed a profit of $2,000. The committee instructed its Treasurer to send an equal share of the profits, $500, to each of the four beneficiaries, the Mayor's Committee on Unemployment, the State Charities Aid Association of New York, and the New York and Brooklyn branches of the Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor.

The committee also passed a vote of thanks to all the dog owners, clubs and exhibitors who aided in making the show a success. Also to the newspapers and kennel press for their share in the undertaking. The show was held under the superintendency of Wilbur H. Purcell, and more than 1,000 dogs were benched. The officers were: President, Theodore Offerman; Vice Presidents, W. Ross Proctor, John F. Collins, Dr. J. E. De Mund and Albert E. Maclave; Secretary, Dr. E. H. Berendsohn, and Treasurer, John G. Bates. These officers, with M. E. Harby and James Waterhouse, formed the Bench Show Committee.

FRANKLIN GUITERMAN DEAD.

Prominent Metallurgist and Official of American Smelting Company.

Franklin Guiterman, General Manager of the Colorado department of the American Smelting and Refining Company, and one of the leading metallurgists of the country, died of pneumonia at the age of 52 years at his residence, Eighty-second Street and West End Avenue, yesterday morning.

He was educated in this country and studied mining engineering at the University of Freiburg, Germany, which has honored him for his discoveries of improvements in the processes of extracting gold, silver, copper, and lead.

Mr. Guiterman was President of the Chesapeake Coal and Coke Company and of the New River Collieries Company. He left a widow and son.

ADELAIDE HAMILTON DIES.

Last Surviving Granddaughter of Gen. Alexander Hamilton Was 85.

Miss Adelaide Hamilton, last surviving granddaughter of General Alexander Hamilton, died last Saturday at her residence, 17 West Twentieth Street, at the age of 85. She was for many years a member of the Colonial Dames of America. She was the only daughter of John C. Hamilton, a Lieutenant in the War of 1812 and the biographer of Alexander Hamilton.

Miss Hamilton was born in Beach Street, St. John's Park, at the time when that part of the city was considered far uptown.

Obituary Notes.

C. WHARTON CLIFTON, a retired real estate dealer, died at the age of 77 years on Saturday at his residence, 849 West End Avenue. He was a charter member of the Republic Lodge of Masons.

HORACE WYMANN of Worcester, Mass., inventor of various improvements in the textiles industries, died on Saturday at his Summer home at Princeton, Mass.

MAURICE WEIL, manager for twenty years of the Cudahy Packing Company in this city, died on Friday at his home, 1,854 Seventh Avenue. He was born in Germany fifty-nine years ago.

PATRICK J. McARDLE, one of the most extensive waste and metal dealers in the East, died at his home in Albany yesterday. He became widely known by reason of a lawsuit against his brother-in-law, which extended over twenty years, and during the progress of which there were several shooting affrays, one in a New York City court several years ago. Mr. McArdle was born in Ireland, June 8, 1848.

Mrs. EMMA MURCHISON GWATHMEY, wife of Archibald B. Gwathmey, died yesterday at the home of her sister in Fayetteville, N. C. Mrs. Gwathmey was in her fiftieth year, and had been suffering from heart disease for many years. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Daughters of the Confederacy. About two months ago she was taken South for her health.

Mrs. ISADORA HAZARD CURTIS, wife of Henry R. Curtis, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gardner Colby, 132 Harrison Street, East Orange, N. J., yesterday. Mr. Colby is Secretary and Chief Examiner for the State Civil Service Commission. Born in Suffield, Conn., seventy-five years ago, Mrs. Curtis moved to Orange soon after her marriage and had made her home there for half a century. She was one of the oldest members of the North Orange Baptist Church.

CORNELL CREW UNSETTLED.

Courtney Has Trouble in Finding Proper Combination in 'Varsity.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 8.—When the Cornell 'Varsity crew leaves for Princeton some time during the end of next week to row Yale and the Tigers on Carnegie Lake there will be none of that confidence which usually characterizes Cornell crews in preliminary races. For the first time in years the followers of rowing at Cornell face the first contest of the season in a condition of uncertainty and doubt.

Following a very late start this Spring, due to cold weather, six weeks of rowing has not permitted Coach Courtney to make a satisfactory choice of a 'Varsity eight. He is still experimenting, and while the rival crews that will meet Cornell here are well known at the Ithaca boathouse, the situation is pretty much mixed.

Courtney is now at work on a 'Varsity crew that averages 174 pounds, about the usual Cornell standard. This crew contains the three veterans who were left over from last year's Poughkeepsie eight, two men from last year's freshman crew, two men from last year's junior crew and two new candidates. In other words, the majority of the oarsmen are inexperienced in 'Varsity races and as only three members of the crew have ever rowed together before, Courtney is having a hard time getting them into racing shape. Moreover, while this crew has proved superior to the other eights, it is by no means of the typical Cornell standard. It is slow. In spite of shifts and time trials Courtney has so far been unable to turn out a crew that can row two miles in the time made by the last year's eight. There is no doubt here that by the time of the Poughkeepsie race a standard eight will be developed, but there is grave doubt over the outlook of the early season's events.

If further shifts are not made Cornell will battle with the Tigers and Yale with the following eight: Ellms, O'Brien and Welles, of last year's 'Varsity eight; Cushing and Stahl, of last year's freshman eight; Andrus, stroke oar of last year's junior eight, and Terriberry and Moir, who are new men. This combination is boated as follows:

Bow, Terriberry; 2, Cushing; 3, Welles; 4, Andrus; 5, Moir; 6, Stahl; 7 O'Brien; stroke, Ellms; coxswain, McCandless. The latter, who steered the eight at Poughkeepsie, has replaced Rand, the 'Varsity coxswain, in the last shake up. The junior eight contains the following, from bow to coxswain: Kingsland, Fernow, Bird, Worn, Calder, Lund, Brookes and Rand.

WANT TO RACE IN FRANCE.

One Argument Is That There Is No Place to Show New Styles.

Practically a universal demand has recently been started in French sporting circles for the re-opening [illegible] Spring of all the leading French racecourses. Longchamps, Auteuil, Chantilly, Maisons-Laffitte, and Deauville, it is insisted, should, at least, be re-opened and the leading events, such as the Grand Prix, the Derby, the Diane and the Grand Critérium should be run.

Those behind the movement say that not only would the re-opening of the race courses fail to represent any inharmonious contrast with the great struggle in which France is engaged, but that the struggle itself has made the advisability of re-opening the courses more imperative. Countless thousands of the best horses in France have already been killed in the war, they point out. Thousands more must yet die, and it is imperative that France should not allow to lapse for a single instant her efforts at improving the breed of horses. With the close of the war France will have greater need than ever before for rearing the best horses possible.

The track element argues that, as racing has not been abandoned in England on account of the war, there is no reason why it should be dropped in France. They also say that the French racetracks constitute an essential element in the industrial life of France, as it is at the meets that the great millinery establishments of the Rue de la Paix show to the world their new creations.

Fast Stallion Dies of Fright.

The trotting stallion Peter Clay, by the great sire of trotters, Peter the Great, died of fright recently in Toronto during a terrific electric strm. He was stabled at Hillcrest Park, where he was one of the string Nat Ray is training. Peter Clay was trained by Fred Westbrook, a Canadian turfman, and took a record of 2:19¼ as a three-year-old. Charles Dean of Palatine, Ill., the man who handled The Broncho (2:00¾) and Minor Heir, (1:58½,) raced him for a season, but only with indifferent success. Last Fall he was a winner for Ray, who considered him equal to taking a record of 2:12 on a half-mile track this season. Peter Clay was 7 years old.

MEXICO CITY RESTS AFTER TURMOILS

Much Illness and Disease, and the People Are Ignorant of Military Events.

ZAPATISTAS TALK MUCH

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 24.—This city has been remarkably quiet since the Conventionists re-entered it on March 11 last, and the consequent tranquillity has been a great relief to its inhabitants after they had been kept on the rack for more than a month by Obregon's "incredible demands" and the license he gave to the criminal class.

The food situation is still bad, but not half so bad as it was under Obregon, proving the truth of the charge made in the American note "that a deplorable situation was willfully brought about by Constitutionalist leaders." It is true that the state of semi-siege maintained by the Zapatistas hampered the introduction of food and charcoal from certain quarters, but, on the other hand, means were used "to prevent the city from being supplied with food" that was available in other quarters, and to thwart the efforts of the International Relief Committee, which, now, under the more liberal policy of General Gonzalez Garza, is doing excellent work.

The people of the capital are in the dark as to the military situation. Official declarations, which alone are published by the local press, are invariably to the effect that fighting continues and that "full confidence is felt in the ultimate triumph of the Conventionist arms," but in private conversations it is whispered that Obregon has been everywhere victorious in the Bajio and would find no serious obstacles in his way if he wanted to reoccupy the City of Mexico. The admission is made reluctantly, for nothing is less desired than the return of Obregon. When his forces evacuated the capital, relations between them and the poorer class of the city's population had reached the snapping point, though that was the very class Obregon made special efforts to conciliate. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent witnessed every night collisions between men of the common class and Obregon's Yaquis.

The city has been so quiet and contented for a month past that, were it not for hard times and bad business, it might seem that the days of the long Porfirian peace had returned. Even the poor are bearing their privations cheerfully.

Without entering into matters of the past, and the broader questions connected with revolution in general, people here have a good word for Gonzalez Garza. It is known that he has been playing a lone hand with considerable courage and determination. There have been no political murders in this city so far as known, since his return last March, though he has needed great firmness to protect some persons from the vengeance of their political enemies. Not only that; familiar faces are emerging from places of hiding and a greater sense of security prevails.

Gonzalez Garza has also done what could be done for the reorganization of public services and the rehabilitation of administrative functions, though progress in this direction is necessarily slow.

But, from time to time, the question forces itself on one: "Can any of the revolutionary factions establish at this city a Government that shall be respected and obeyed throughout the country?"

Carranza has over Villa the advantage which the educated man has over the illiterate, and it is suggested here at times that Carranza may win, and become President of Mexico, by mere force of inertia, wearing down all his adversaries. It is known that he himself expresses full confidence in his ultimate success. When the priests who were taken as prisoners to Vera Cruz were about to return to this city by Carranza's permission, the First Chief asked them why they were so bent on making a journey amid so many discomforts and dangers, when, by waiting a few days, they might return to the capital in his company with every convenience. But whether Carranza or any one else becomes President, the doubt involved in the question above formulated subsists.

Typhus and Smallpox.

Typhus and smallpox are already epidemic in this city and are likely to become more so, with the lowering of vitality among the poorer classes due to the scarcity and dearness of provisions. The food situation is bound to become worse as the year advances. Corn, the staple article of diet of the poor, is being sold at almost prohibitive prices already. It commands prices of from 40 to 50 centavos the cuartillo, (about 1.9 litres, and though Mexican money is depreciated in its exchange relations with foreign currencies, it is locally harder to come by than ever. The normal corn crop is harvested in October or November, but in some haciendas, where there is irrigation, two crops can be raised. In present circumstances, however, when the haciendas have been laid waste, their implements destroyed or stolen, their owners banished or driven into hiding, and their laborers scattered, the agricultural yield is an uncertain factor. The misery of the proletariat and other classes in Mexico during the present year, at least, and probably during the coming year as well, is likely to be appalling.

Duval West, who is investigating conditions here for President Wilson, has been a model of discretion and courtesy since his arrival, but that did not prevent some simple words of his at the banquet given him by members of the Convention at San Angel Inn from being twisted into a disparaging reflection on the administration of General Porfirio Diaz.

Answering the toast in his honor, Mr. West (through Consul Shanklin) expressed the hope "that the inestimable blessing of peace may come, and that the ambitions of your patriots, soldiers, and statesmen may be realized in the rebirth of a new Mexico, greater than it has ever been in the past." This was little more than one of the amiable and safe commonplaces customary on such occasions. Yet supposing, or affecting to suppose, that these words were meant as a slur on past régimes, the Licentiate Antonio Diaz Soto y Gama, the Socialist and representative of Zapata in the convention, jumped to his feet and commended Mr. West's wish "for a reborn Mexico, not for the ignominious past of Porfirio Diaz."

> The definitive triumph of the Sovereign Revolutionary Convention forces itself on the world. The words of the representative of the august President Wilson, the schoolmaster who is the enemy of the plutocracy and the friend of the working class, pronounced the day before yesterday, with the panorama of Mexico's Valley spread out before him, in the presence of the President and several members of the convention, when he toasted the New Mexico, are a striking proof of that triumph.
> Mr. West's toast for a New Mexico is a tribute of homage to the revolution which is producing the New Mexico. It is a condemnation of the Porfirian peace, &c.

It is the way with all the Mexican factions—you give them an inch, and you may think yourself lucky if they take no more than an ell.

The Brazilian Minister was invited to this banquet, but on the morning of the day set for the affair the newspapers announced that Senhor Cardoso de Oliveira was troubled "with a recurrence of an old liver and stomach affection." It was generally understood, however, that the affection was largely diplomatic; the Minister was too wary to be caught.

West Wins Friends.

Americans here incline to be favorably impressed by the way in which Mr. West has gone to work, but taught by their past experience of confidential investigators in Mexico will await results before expressing themselves.

They would be glad to have Mr. West's stay prolonged. When a confidential agent from the United States comes here on a brief visit, it is thought that things are more or less staged for his benefit; officials are on their best behavior; efforts are made to avoid whatever might impress him unfavorably. But this artificial condition cannot be kept up indefinitely; tired of acting a part, men slip back into their natural selves. And then an investigator has a better chance, given natural qualifications and an unprejudiced mind on his part, to find out the truth.

Two of the men who, "disguised as Zapatista soldiers," (according to the euphemism adopted,) assaulted and seriously wounded Ludwig Boettcher, a German subject, with intent to rob, were shot, though Mr. Boettcher is now practically well again.

On the other hand, the Zapatistas who murdered John B. McManus, an American citizen, because he had defended his property, have not even been brought to trial. For several days past THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has inquired at the War Department about the status of the investigation, and has been informed that the expediente (docket) has been mislaid.

Apparently, the idea prevails that the case has been settled by the payment of 160,000 pesos as indemnity, a sum equivalent to about $20,000 when it was paid, but, owing to the constant demoralization of the exchange rate, to less than $16,000 now. When this sum was paid to McManus's widow, Mr. Bryan congratulated Gonzalez Garza on his "promptness and liberality" in offering compensation for the life and property of an American citizen.

Americans here, while not at all bloodthirsty, would not have been sorry to see exemplary punishment meted out to McManus's murderers, feeling that the lives and properties of Americans in this city would have been far safer for some time to come.

A rumor has been circulating that Villa and Obregon have come to an understanding, the latter's main condition being that the States of Sonora, of which he is a native, and Sinaloa be left to him.

Gonzalez Garza, when asked about this, said he knew nothing of it. He has more than once intimated on such occasions that it is, indeed, time that the warring factions should get together and sink their differences for the country's good.

Little attention has been paid to the rumor, as the bitterness of the personal animosity between Villa and Obregon is well known. In published statements Obregon has denounced Villa in terms which the latter is not likely to forget.

The sessions of the convention, which have been resumed, are a pitiful exhibition. Hours every day are wasted in academical discussions, wearisome platitudes and bitter personalities, while the country is sinking each moment into deeper perdition. One practical point, the debates have brought out, and that is the radical division between the northern, or Villista, and southern, or Zapatista, elements. The union was always a hybrid one, and cannot last. At least that is the general opinion.

Major Peter F. Rogers.

Major Peter F. Rogers, sole survivor of the charter members of the Lincoln Post of the G. A. R., died on Saturday night of heart disease at his home, 15 Seeley Avenue, Arlington, N. J. Major Rogers was born in 1836 in Glasgow, Scotland. He served in the civil war, being wounded at the first battle of Bull Run. At the close of the war he was appointed Superintendent of the New Jersey Home for Disabled Soldiers at Kearney, a post which he filled for thirty-two years. He held other public offices, among them being Street Commissioner of Newark and Chief of Police of that city. Major Rogers is survived by his widow, a son, and two daughters. The interment will be in Hanover, N. H.

BAKER READY TO SIGN WITH MACK

Will Rejoin Athletics if Management Will Destroy His Three-Year Contract.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9. — Frank Baker, the Athletics hard-hitting third baseman, has agreed to play with the American League champions again this year under certain conditions. He had a brief conference with Manager Connie Mack on Saturday night as the team left for the West, and agreed to help pull the Athletics out of the ruck, providing his present contract, which is for three years, is destroyed. Before an agreement could be reached the train pulled out.

According to Baker's account of the matter Mack did not accept his proposition with any great display of enthusiasm. On the contrary, he said that he (Baker) had not lived up to his contract. At this point the train started, and for the present, at least, Baker will remain with the Upland team.

President Weeks of the Delaware County League accompanied Baker to the station, and lent him his moral and verbal support. Mr. Weeks explained that Baker's contract with the Upland team did not prevent him fulfilling his contract with the Athletics at any time that Baker and Mack came to an agreement.

Baseball enthusiasts will not be surprised at the refusal of Connie Mack to accept Baker's services under the conditions. Should he release Baker from his three-year contract, the slugger would be a free agent next season and in a position to demand whatever salary he desired.

Baker explains why he signed the three-year contract as follows: He says he desired to retire from big league baseball at the close of last season, and told Mack so in January, 1914. He said that Mr. Mack was satisfied with the arrangement, and in order to satisfy Connie that he would not play with the Federal League, he signed the contract. Baker adds that Mack knew that he was not going to play this year.

Baker desires to bring out this point so that he may not be accused of breaking his contract, and to protect the Delaware County League against the charge of harboring a contract jumper. Baker further says that Connie Mack gave his consent to his playing ball, but not in Philadelphia, and, therefore, feels justified in playing with the Upland team.

Baker said last night that the only reason he offered to join the Athletics this year and play out the season is to straighten out matters. There has been so much talk and criticism of him that he is willing to play this year if Mr. Mack will destroy the old contract, that there will not be a chance of a recurrence of the present mix-up. He added:

"It is not a case of money. The salary that my contract calls for is satisfactory to me. I do desire to get away from big baseball, as I do not care to remain away from home, as I have to do in the big leagues. I have no desire to play with any other team than the Athletics, and only consent to play one more year so that the whole matter may be straightened out. Mr. Mack may have my services whenever he desires them under the conditions I named to him tonight. I will not play this year so long as the contract exists which holds me for next season, and which may place me in the same position as at the present time. I do not want to play this year, but am willing to go in and work my head off one more year just to put things straight."

Newark Makes it Three Straight Games Against Chicago.

The Newark Peps for the third straight time proved a Jonah to Chicago yesterday by defeating them in a Federal League game at Harrison by a score of 4 to 3.

Cy Falkenburg, the former Clevelander, and Claude Hendrix, ex-Pirate, had a pitchers' battle, with the former coming out victorious. Wickland and Campbell had a race for batting honors. Wickland had three hits, including the first home run of the season on the grounds, out of three times at bat, while Campbell came through with four hits out of five times up and had the honor of driving in the winning run in the ninth. The score:

YANKEES BAT BALL HARD.

Special to The New York Times.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., May 9.—The score of 15 to 10 might indicate there was a football game here today between the Yankees and the Perth Amboy Club of the Atlantic League, but in reality a wild attempt to play baseball in a high wind. The Yankees won, but received a good scare when the local club nicked Cy Pieh for eight runs in the second inning. Good pitching was impossible, neither Pieh or Randolph, who started as opposing pitchers, being able to break the ball across the plate. Frank Ruddy, a former member of the Yankees, played a fine game for the local club. The score:

HOLDS WASHINGTON TO A SINGLE HIT

Dubuc Pitches in Championship Form and Detroit Wins by Score of 1 to 0.

DETROIT, May 9.—John Dubuc, pitching one of the greatest games of his career, held Washington to a single hit today and Detroit won from Walter Johnson, 1 to 0. In the fifth inning Baker walked, took third on Dubuc's single to right, and scored on Vitt's sacrifice fly to Shanks. Johnson was wild and in trouble in nearly every inning. In the ninth Umpire Nallin called Moeller out after Jacobson had momentarily juggled a long throw from Bush. Manager Griffith, disputing the decision, caught the umpire by the arm and was ordered off the coaching line. Score:

Morton's Fifth Straight Victory.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 9.—Cleveland defeated Philadelphia today 3 to 0. It was Morton's fifth victory in succession, and his third shut-out of the season. Bush was effective, except in the sixth, when Cleveland scored its three runs on three hits and three passes, two runs being forced in. It was Lajoie's first appearance here in anything except a Cleveland uniform in fourteen years. Score:

Sailors to Visit Polo Grounds Today.

The sailors of the North Atlantic fleet now lying at anchor in the Hudson River are going to lay aside their duties this afternoon and will wend their way to the Polo Grounds to watch the Yankees and Boston fight it out for honors on the baseball diamond. The tars have been invited to the game as the guests of Captain Huston and Jacob Ruppert, owners of the New York Americans, and will be admitted to the park free, their uniforms being sufficient to pass them through the gates. Arrangements have been made to accommodate between 7,000 and 8,000 of the sailors.

No-Hit Game for Mertz.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 9.—Harry Mertz, pitcher for the Stamford semi-professional team, pitched a no-hit game here this afternoon, beating Highwood A. C. of New Haven, 11 to 0. Thirty batsmen faced Mertz, two got bases on balls and one reached first on a wild throw. Mertz is a left-handed pitcher and is 18 years old.

Bell Again Wins Etna Run.

The final practice for the novice run of the Etna Club of Brooklyn, to be decided next week, was held yesterday over the club's three-and-a half-mile course in Cypress Hills and a big field took part. Johnny Bell of the Brooklyn Evening High School, who triumphed last week, again led the field, winning without much difficulty from his clubmate, W. Shanahan, who was the first novice home. Frank Schultz of the Long Island A. C., was third. The winner's time was 21 minutes 29 seconds. Summary of fifteen leaders: Johnny Bell, Brooklyn Evening High School, 21:29; W. Shanahan, Brooklyn Evening High School, 22:38; F. Schultz, Long Island A. C., 23:04; L. Major, unattached, 23:05; L. J. McGowan, Holy Cross Lyceum, 23:07; R. P. Inman Defeats Gray at Billiards.

Melbourne Inman just managed to beat George Gray, the Australian champion, in a match of 18,000 up, level, for $2,500 a side, by the narrow margin of 459 points. It was Inman's second game since he returned to London after his extended tour of the United States and Canada, and the champion finding his real form, gave a fine display against his formidable opponent.

Daly to Play Amateur Cueists.

Maurice Daly, the veteran cueist, will play a series of 18.2 balkline matches at his Forty-ninth Street Academy with four of the leading amateurs of this country, starting tonight with Hal Coleman, the national Class B champion. On succeeding nights will oppose William Gershel, Jacob Klinger of Austria, and Ferdinand Poggenburg, a former Class A national title holder.

MIDDLEWEIGHTS AT RINK.

Clabby and Chip Head the List of Boxing Bouts This Week.

Patrons of boxing are interested in the middleweight contest scheduled between Jimmy Clabby, the best middleweight turned out in the West since the days of the late Stanley Ketchel, and the hard-hitting George Chip on Wednesday night at St. Nicholas Rink. With the closing of Madison Square Garden as a boxing centre during the Summer, Manager Jimmy Johnston will stage a number of big bouts at the rink. Chip has been anxious to meet Mike Gibbons for the past year, but the latter will have none of this hard-hitting miner until he thinks that he can get the largest end of the purse, but that does not stop Chip from trying to coax Gibbons into the ring.

Jimmy Dime, Chip's manager, says: "George will stop Clabby this time. George made the mistake at San Francisco of trying to box him. This time he will wade right into this clever boxer, and I think that Clabby will be on the floor taking the count long before the end of the ten rounds."

Clabby, on the other hand, laughs at the idea of a man like Chip knocking him out. "Why, I will stop Chip as soon as McCoy did. If not, I'll never box again in New York."

The American Sporting Club, formerly Sulzer's Harlem River Park, has spent $5,000 renovating the building, which is now one of the largest boxing clubs in the country. It is now ready to stage high-class matches. Paddy Donnelly, who will be manager and matchmaker of the club, says that he has got two or three good matches in view which he will stage in the near future at popular prices. There will be 5,000 chairs in the club, and the club is one of the coolest in the State.

The Broadway Sporting Club will stage its seventeenth matinee boxing show this afternoon, and the devotees of the sport will have an opportunity to enjoy an interesting contest when Sailor Robinson, the United States Navy welterweight, who is being brought to the front by Willie Lewis, faces Charley Moody of St. John's Parish. Battling Ward of the St. John's College Gymnasium and Young Gorman of Maspeth will figure in the other six-round session. Ten three-round, semi-professional, tryout bouts will precede the main event.

Heavyweights will have the call at the Olympic A. C. tonight, where Manager Donnelly has matched "Battling" Joe Woods of Brooklyn and Willie Grupp's champion, Whitey Allan of Oklahoma. Woods has been winning consistently of late in and around Brooklyn, and should give the Oklahoma giant considerable trouble to win. Allan has not been seen in action around here since he knocked out Jim Elliott in two rounds at the Harlem Club. In the other ten-round session Gardener Brooks of Lawrence, who has made himself a favorite with the New York boxing fans by his good work in the ring, will tackle Sammy Diamond, one of Jersey's best featherweights. Three four-round events precede the main.

Johnny Kilbane, the world's featherweight champion, arrived in Crum Lynne, Penn., yesterday to finish training for his ring engagement with Mel Coogan of Flatbush, at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn tomorrow night. Kilbane realizes that he is facing a clever boxer in Coogan, and he intends to be as near fit as conscientious work can make him. Coogan has boxed both Frankie Callahan and Eddie Wallace, who recently gave Kilbane a tough argument, and having height, weight and reach in his favor is conceded to have an excellent chance to win. The men have agreed to weigh in at 129 pounds, ringside.

Three ten-round bouts between good boxers are scheduled for the 135th Club tomorrow night. Jack Dorman of the Bronx will take on Artie Walsh of Harlem, Johnny Bart of Washington Heights will face Jack Goldie of Harlem, and Young Jack Johnson and Jerry Peterson will engage in the third bout.

REVERSALS AT TENNIS.

Hall and Johnston Lose Matches for Bronx Championship.

Reversals and long drawn out contests were the order in the Bronx Tennis Championship Tournament yesterday on the courts of the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club. Walter Merrill Hall, one of the playing through champions, and C. L. Johnston, Jr., Amherst's former intercollegiate champion, were eliminated from competition. Hall, in the first round, fell a victim to the chop strokes of Broderick C. Boggs, West Side Tennis Club, 2-6, 6-4, 10-8, after enjoying a comparatively safe lead in the first set. Boggs put up a remarkably effective game, especially in the third and deciding set, which went to deuce for a decision.

Louis Graves showed a return to his last year's form when he took the measure of Johnson in the second round at 5-7, 6-2, 7-5. Johnson had previously beaten F. Fall 6-4, 6-2. The match was an interesting one, but once the runner up of the New Jersey State championship got his stroke he played a brilliant game.

S. Howard Voshell, playing-through champion of 1914, won two easy matches. In the third round Voshell beat G. Walker, 6—4, 6—4, and in the next round gained a bracket before the semifinals by beating W. Halsey Wood, Columbia veteran, 6—4, 6—2.

Wylie C. Grant, former national indoor champion, barely scraped through against a little known player in the third round, as Embry Henderson forced Grant to the limit of three sets before the famous player won at 6—3, 8—10, 6—4. The important matches of the second round were:

Allan Behr, cousin of Karl Behr, beat George King, 10—8, 8—6; Vanderbilt B. Ward, formerly of Yale, beat E. H. Pfeiffer, formerly of Columbia, 6—2, 6—2; Abraham BassFord, Jr., former Cornell star, beat G. L. Robinson, 6—1, 6—3.

In the third round Behr nearly met his waterloo. He was opposed by W. M. Fisher, who won the first set at love and held the second 5—2, when Behr rallied. Fisher was within a point of winning the match six times, but failed to obtain it, although twice he had comparatively easy shots. In the same round Ward beat G. G. Grenz, 6—1, 6—1, and E. H. Whitney, former Harvard captain, beat R. L. James, the old Longwood expert, 6—0, 6—4. Altogether thirty-one matches were scored on the board as the result of the day's play. The summary:

Bronx County Championship Tennis Singles. —First Round—Frederick C. Baggs defeated Walter Merrall Hall, 2—6, 6—4, 10—8; Ralph L. Baggs defeated Roland Raymond, 6—2, 6—1; F. Bellows, Jr., defeated F. Whitney defeated R. L. Jones, 6—0, 6—4; Allen Behr defeated W. M. Fisher, 0—6, 7—5, 6—2.

Women Play for Tennis Title.

The women's metropolitan lawn tennis championships in singles and doubles will start today on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club, at Forest Hills, L. I. Miss Molla Bjurstedt, who won the national indoor championship at singles, will play. Besides there will be nearly forty other contestants, Mrs. Frederic Schmitz, the Englishwoman who held the indoor championship, will act as referee. Mrs. Marshall McLean is the Chairman of the Tournament Committee, and this event stands as the most important meeting for women to be held in this city this season.

COLLEGE SWIMMERS NOT TO DECIDE TIE

Examinations Would Interfere with Another Series of Races for Championship.

There will be no swim off of the triple tie for the intercollegiate championship between Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Yale this year, according to a decision reached by the Intercollegiate Swimming Association at a meeting held yesterday at the Hotel McAlpin. It had been practically arranged to hold another series of contests to decide this tie, but at yesterday's meeting the delegates were almost unanimous in the decision. There has already been one. On a motion made by Miller of Princeton and seconded by H. M. Osgood of Pennsylvania the following resolution pertaining to this decision was adopted:

"The Intercollegiate Swimming Association deems it inadvisable to suspend the Constitution in order to swim off the tie that exists between Yale, Columbia, and Pennsylvania for the intercollegiate championship, owing to the approach of the examinations and the difficulty of making the necessary arrangements. It is therefore decided that in the event of another tie as existed this year that college scoring the greatest number of points in the individual intercollegiate championships shall be declared the winner."

Championship plaques will be awarded the three colleges which tied for first place in this season's title competition.

J. W. Allison was elected President for the ensuing year, succeeding Mr. Marcy of the University of Pennsylvania. J. J. Schulman of the City College of New York was chosen Vice President, and the duties of Secretary and Treasurer were intrusted to O. Osgood of Pennsylvania.

There was a strong report current that Harvard will join the association before the end of this year. There was no representative of Harvard present, but the delegates were interested in the talk that the Crimson would put a water polo team in the field, and become eligible for entrance into the intercollegiate association. It is necessary to have an active water polo team for a college to join the organization.

Steps will be taken to frame a standard list of events, so that no difficulty will arise in case any of the Eastern colleges decide to arrange dual meets with Western institution. At present there is no fancy dive on the swimming program of the Western Swimming Association, while they stage a 150-yard back-stroke race and 200-yard breast-stroke competition, which are foreign to Eastern watermen.

The idea of deciding dual meets by two out of three series of races was discussed at length, and the plan was adopted by several colleges. This arrangement will give swimmers more competition in their own natatoriums than in the past.

A motion was made that the timer in the plunge for distance fire a gun instead of calling or whistling to the contestants at the end of one minute, but it was laid over until the next meeting. The same action was taken when it was moved that the different colleges arrange to mark off the six-foot limit in the water for the jackknife dive in the fancy diving event.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were Allison and Coope of Columbia, Mayer and Von Holt of Yale, Miller of Princeton, Marcy, Osgood, and Shyrock of Pennsylvania, and Schulman of the City College of New York.

Long Cabin Cruiser Race.

Thomas Fleming Day is busy booming the long-distance racing game. He has arranged a race for cabin power cruisers from Poughkeepsie on the Hudson to Brightwaters on Great South Bay, a distance of 125 miles. Captain Day and Charles F. Ackerson visited Poughkeepsie recently and laid the matter of the race before Commodore W. H. Frank and the officers and members of the club. The proposal met with favor, and it was decided at the meeting to have the race Saturday, July 31, if the Hudson River Racing Association would consent to the club fixing that date. The race will take the place of the club's annual regatta.

Commodore Frank agreed to enter his 60-footer Clara and six other members promised to start their boats. The race will be for power cabin cruisers between 20 and 60 feet over all, with a maximum of speed of less than fourteen miles. This clause is inserted to bar out freak racing machines and sure winners.

The festivities will consist of a shore dinner, rowing and swimming races, blue and weak fishing trips, and an automobile voyage about the South Shore towns. The Bayshore Motor Boat Club and Point o' Woods Club will join in entertaining the visitors.

The course is down the Hudson to New York, a distance of 75 miles; then 10 miles to Norton Point and 35 miles outside along the beach to a finish off Fire Island Inlet.

Pleasant Trip for Walkers' Clubmen

Novices and veterans of the Walkers' Club of America yesterday enjoyed one of the best journeys of the season. For thirty-five miles the veterans walked through Westchester County, starting at 8:30 A. M. from the Bronx Park Subway station. The novice squad journeyed over the Pelham Parkway to Travers Island and return, about twelve miles. The old-timers, who are preparing for the long trip from Philadelphia to New York on May 29, continued on through Pelham Manor, New Rochelle, on the Boston Post Road to Larchmont, Mamaroneck, Harrison, and Rye, then returning over the same route. Next Sunday's walk starts from the 130th Street ferry. The following men completed the round trip yesterday: Pacemaker Hocking, Gage, G. H. Swartz, Goldberger, Karazo, Goldenberg, Heffernan, Lang, Farrell, Meyer, and Senfert.

Amateur Riders in Match Race.

Trotting Races for Newark.

Newark for three days during the Summer of 1916 will be the mecca for amateur light harness racing, according to the announcement of Theodore S. Miller, Vice President of the Road Horse Association of New Jersey, which conducts Saturday matinees at Weequahic Park. The sum of $5,000 has been donated for the meet by the committee of one hundred of the 250th anniversary celebration of Newark, which occurs next Summer.

MULES RACE ON SPEEDWAY.

Billy Sunday Beats John L. Sullivan at Road Drivers' Matinee.

The first Spring matinee of the Road Drivers' Association of New York was held yesterday over the Harlem River Speedway, half mile course. The program consisted of ten brushes, six for trotters and four for pacers, and a mule race. The latter was won by Billy Sunday, this being the name of the entrant, not the owner, in straight heats. John L. Sullivan was second. There were a number of other starters, but none of them lasted more than one heat, two of them being disqualified.

After losing the first heat of the 1:05 pace to W. J. O'Neill's Hertha, C. V. Hunt's bay mare, Clover Patch, came back, and took the next two heats and the race. The last heat was particularly exciting. Hertha assumed the lead at the start, and carried her opponent along at a fast clip for the first quarter. After passing the pole, Hertha slowed down, and Hunt's mare went to the front, but she was never more than a few feet ahead, and they came down to the judge's stand like a team. A few yards from the finish Clover Patch again went in front, to win by half a length. The first heat was the fastest of the race, the time being 1:05½.

I. V. Hunt scored another victory in the 1:09 trotting division, which was a split-heat affair. Emily H. took the first heat, but she was beaten by Courier Boy in the second, only to come back in the third to win the heat and race. The other events were all won in straight heats. The summary:

BURMAN TO FIGHT PROTEST.

Bob Burman, the world's speed king, is up in arms over the announcement that Ray Harroun intends to court disqualification for his Harroun special in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, on the ground that it is really a Maxwell, and, therefore, ineligible under the rule that "no more than three cars of any one make may start in any race."

Burman sees in Harroun's move a deliberate attempt to disqualify his own Burman special, a rebuilt Peugeot, three new cars of which make are already entered for the contest, the same as Maxwell, and says he will fight the proposition to a finish. Bob has refiled his entry under the name of Burman-Peugeot. It is his contention that the motor of the car, save the crank case, is entirely new, having been constructed in Los Angeles under his own supervision. The car is, therefore, no longer a Peugeot, and cannot be barred under the three-car rule.

Burman is not fighting this battle for himself, as his car is probably fast enough to beat out two of the regular Peugeots under any title, but is championing Alphonse Kaufmann, the Peugeot entrant, a warm friend of his. Dario Resta, the Peugeot crack, and Burman have taken permanent residence at the Indianapolis motor speedway for the race, and are now busily engaged grooming their cars for that event.

Activities in Power Boat Clubs.

The main activity of the Hudson River boat clubs this week is in holding open house for members and friends so that they may have every opportunity of seeing the fleet.

Hudson River Power Squadron has arranged a lecture for tomorrow night on "Our Navy and What It Means," by Dr. Edward Breck of Washington, D. C., Field Secretary of the Navy League.

Hudson River Yacht Club at Ninety-second Street is combining its open week with its own fortieth anniversary. The officers for the year are: E. E. Barry, Commodore; Gustave Fischer, Vice Commodore; G. W. Hoertel, Rear Commodore; Harry Inman, Chairman of the House Committee. They have been in commission since May 1.

Colonial Yacht Club went into commission Saturday. They have leased the 150-foot frontage north of their present quarters and are extending over that, in connection with other improvements upon the house, grounds, and floats.

Many water enthusiasts about the city have noted an added interest in that line of recreation this year. Canoeing and rowing have both shown it. Colonial Yacht Club has followed this movement more than any other club recently, having taken in fifty new members in the last month. Most of these had boats, so the total of Colonial is now 200.

Lock Wins Ten-Mile Bicycle Race.

William Lock, starting from scratch, won the ten-mile handicap race held over the Brighton Beach track yesterday by the New York State Division of the Century Road Club of America, in 27:36. The track was in good condition, and every one of the races which took place was hotly contested without a spill occurring in any of them. The results of the races follow:

Ten-Mile Handicap—Won by William Lock, (scratch;) William Muller, (200 yards,) second; J. H. Eisenberg, (125 yards,) third; J. G. Schmidt, (25 yards,) fourth; Charles Kudrie, (250 yards,) fifth. Time—27:36.

One-Mile, (scratch)—Won by William Lock; J. G. Schmidt, second; Ted Heisig, third; J. H. Eisenberg, fourth. Time—2:34 4-5.

Three-Mile, (unpaced)—Won by J. G. Schmidt; Ted Heisig, second; William Lock, third; L. A. Fraysee, fourth; J. H. Eisenberg, fifth. Time—7:32 3-5.

CYCLING CHAMPION BEATS AUSTRALIAN

Frank L. Kramer Wins Sprint Race from Robert Spears at Newark Velodrome.

Frank L. Kramer decisively defeated the latest aspirant for the cycling championship, Robert Spears, an Australian youth, in two straight heats of a two-thirds of a mile match race yesterday at the Newark Velodrome. Kramer won just about as he pleased, jumping Spears in each heat and showing superior speed in the chase for the tape. It was Kramer's first important race in several weeks.

Oscar Egg, the Swiss rider, and Reggie McNamara, the Australian, fought out an interesting unlimited pursuit race, the former winning after traveling five and a half miles to catch his rival.

In another match, Jackie Clark was rather humiliated by Marcel Dupuy, the Frenchman, who again successfully defended his right to hold the Brassard in a one-mile match race. Dupuy made Clark ride out in front, and he snatched the lead away from him when the little Australian least expected it.

Spears recovered from his defeat by Kramer and won the one-mile open in fine style, while in the amateur class, the honors went to John Dreher, a Newark boy, who won the two-mile open after a close duel with Eddie Kane at the finish.

Gordon Walker won the first race contested in the Class B professionals, the one-mile event, in which he beat out Willie Hanley, recently turned professional, and Frank Corry, the Australian. The summaries:

One-Mile Novice (Amateur)—Won by William Grenhold, Newark; second, Joseph Marti, Newark. Time—2:21 2-5.

Two-Thirds Mile Match Race, (Professional) Between Frank L. Kramer, East Orange, and Robert Spears, Australia.—Won by Kramer in straight heats. First heat—time of last eighth mile, 0:12. Second heat—last eighth mile, 0:12 1-5.

One-Mile Class B, (Professional)—Won by Gordon Walker, Australia; second, Walter Hanley, San Francisco; third, Frank Corry, Australia. Time—2:40 2-5.

Brassard Race—One-mile challenge sprint between Marcel Dupuy, France, (holder) and A. Jackie Clark, Australia, (challenger)—Won by Dupuy. Time—4:32 2-5; last one-eighth mile, 0:12 2-5.

One-Third Mile Handicap, (Amateur.)—Won by William Murray, Harrison, (70 yards); second, Arthur Geokfert, Newark, (60 yards); third, Charles Rimmele, Newark, (60 yards.) Time—0:36 3-5.

One-Mile Open (Professional)—Won by Robert Spears, Australia; second, Alfred Grenda, Australia; third, Reggie McNamara, Australia. Time—2:40 1-5.

Miss and Out Invitation (Professional)—Won by Ray Eaton, Elizabeth; second, Norman Anderson, Denmark; third, Willie Coburn, Newark. Time—6:06. Distance—2 miles 4 laps.

Unlimited Pursuit Race (Professional)—Between Oscar Egg, Switzerland, and Reggie McNamara, Australia. Won by Egg. Distance—5 miles 2¾ laps. Time—11:40 1-5.

Fifty-Mile Cycle Road Race.

The Century Road Club of America will hold its annual 50-mile handicap bicycle road race on Sunday, June 20, starting from Floral Park, L. I., the scene of most of the road races held in the metropolitan district. According to present indications the list of prizes will be a large one, as the committee in charge of the race has already received many donations from the manufacturers of bicycles and accessories. The list of competitors also promises to be large, as there is more interest displayed in cycling just now than there has been in a good many years. The roads are in fine condition throughout the entire distance and the establishing of a new American road record is likely. Some of the fastest riders from east of the Mississippi will compete in this event. For particulars apply to William Gold, 228 East Twenty-first Street, New York City.

Foreign Cyclists Arrive Today.

The French liner Rochambeau, which is due to arrive today, will bring the first aggregation of bicycle cracks from different points in Europe, who are booked to appear at the Sheepshead Bay Velodrome, the new track to be opened on May 22. Among those who will arrive today are Caesar Moretti, the Italian sprinter; Thorwald Ellegaard, Denmark's fastest rider; George Seres and M. Pastiur of France, and pace followers of class, Marius Mazo and M. Nazo, the latter Europe's best pacemaker. The International Derby of twenty-five miles will be the feature of the opening day. The American picked to start in this event will be selected from Jimmy Moran, Bobby Walthour, George Wiley, Percy Lawrence, and Menus Bedell.

Acme Handicap Won by Spillane.

The Acme Wheelmen held the third of their series of quarter-mile sprint races yesterday afternoon. Fifteen riders competed, and the best time was made by Fred Woisin and Frank Small, each one of whom finished in 0:32 4-5. Joe Schaffer covered the distance in 33 seconds. The handicap event was over a 7½-mile course, and the limit men again took the leading places. E. O. Spillane finished first from the four-minute mark and Fred Hust was second, his handicap being the same. The order of finish of the others was Erwin Spillane, John Herson, and Frank Ferri, with the scratch men, Woisin and Schaffer, in seventh and eighth positions. The time was 21:55.

Ten-Mile Cycling Race.

The Century Road Club Association, New York Division, will hold a ten-mile handicap road race next Sunday at Grant City, Staten Island. The race is open to all amateur riders registered with the National Cycling Association. The event will start at 9:30 A. M. so that all riders who wish to compete at the Newark Velodrome in the afternoon will have ample time to make the trip. The start will be from the Boulevard Hotel.

Brooklyn Celtics Back in Form.

After tasting defeat in three cup ties in a few the Brooklyn Celtics took a brace yesterday afternoon and defeated the Camerons 4 goals to 2 at Marquette Oval, Brooklyn.

MORE CREWS FOR REGATTA.

Cascadilla Wants to Row in Schoolboy Race on Memorial Day.

New York's reviving interest in rowing is having its effect upon outside clubs. In addition to Cascadilla's request for permission to enter the high school race Secretary Lauer now has a letter from Philadelphia asking if an intermediate quadruple sculls race can be added for the Memorial Day regatta. Two of the well-known clubs there—Malta and Fairmount—have crews for that event and wish to come here to compete. Both requests will probably be settled tonight at the Stewards' meeting.

Captain Hart of the Metropolitans will have to row preliminaries in order to choose the club entries. Farnam and Patton will row off in the junior singles, and Indekofer and F. Bagge will meet to represent the "Mets" in the intermediate singles. Indekofer and Bagge will also row in the intermediate doubles. The champion senior four has been broken up, and Emery and Jauss will row senior doubles instead. The junior quadruple seating has been changed so that the crew now rows: Martin, stroke; Froelich, 1; Wenger, 2; Zillie, 3.

Besides the De Witt Clinton High School eight and the Hiawatha Canoe Club, the Rosedale Rowing Club of Hoboken is now rowing from the Metropolitan boat house. They will enter the senior four barge.

It was stated that the date of the Hudson River regatta, originally set for July 31, may be made two weeks later, because of conflicts with races at Philadelphia, Boston and Springfield, as well as with a date chosen by the Rosedale Club. It is understood that Philadelphia has formally protested against the local date.

The Nonpareil double crew of 1912—Crowley and Schwartz—have decided to row again this year. Crowley will continue at bow. Livingstone, who will also go to Philadelphia May 22, will row a senior single shell for Nonpareil on Memorial Day, while Captain Pearse will compete in association senior singles. Lieutenant Purgold will row intermediate singles. Nonpareil has granted the use of its club house to the Hudson crews in preparation for the big regatta.

The New Rochelle Club has added five new shells since last season, four single gigs and one double. All are of the skin-botton type, and were made in the house during the Winter by the club builder. Steddiford Pitt gives his New Rochelle High School lads a long drill every afternoon.

With J. W. Atkinson coaching the Flushing High School boys in match races daily with the senior four, he should put out a crew that will make trouble for some entries. De Witt Clinton is now at the Metropolitan house, with Morrison coaching. The Fordham Preps, under Coach Mulcahy, have had good daily competition in rowing against the freshmen eight are ready for a race almost any time.

Coach Cramer will give the Commerce High School candidates their first real tryout next Sunday afternoon, when he pits them against the Lone Star senior four in an exhibition race. The occasion is the Lone Star Dutch dinner and dance, with races in the afternoon. Aside from the feature race above, there will be a barge eight-oared race, with women accompanying the oarsmen.

Scottish Soccer Players Join Colors.

The annual report of the Scottish Football Association, just issued, shows a loss on the year of $12,350, included in which is $6,250 contributed to the War Fund. Over $25,000 has been given as special donations by the Scottish League clubs to the War Fund, and collections at the league games have realized another $5,000. Scottish soccer players have made a splendid response to join the colors, just over 1,500 active professionals having enlisted, while well over 2,000 old players have also gone on active service.

New England Wheelmen in Races.

Sixteen members started in the weekly point race of the New England Wheelmen of New York over the Eastern Boulevard in the Bronx yesterday, and as the course was in fine shape, fast time was made. The limit men went the entire distance and the first four to finish, with their handicaps, follow: George Polacsy, (one minute;) E. Aickelir, (scratch;) Louis Zeoli, (two minutes;) C. H. J. Jonjes, (one minute.) Following the point race, the monthly unpaced race over a three-mile course was held and the riders finished as follows: A. Echrich, (0:25 2-5;) George Poiacsy, (0:27;) E. Aickelir, (0:29;) B. Baker, (0:29 1-5;) L. Zeoli, (0:30;) C. H. J. Tonjes, (0:30 2-5;) B. Boyes, (0:30 3-5.)

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

Last week's stock market was divided into two clearly distinct periods. During the first the market may be said to have moved under ordinary influences, but during the second period, the last two days of the week, it was swayed by considerations which were intensified by the extraordinary nature of the news whose essential feature was that it opened up before the country the gravest sort of possibilities in connection with our own relations to the situation created by the war in Europe. In retrospect relatively little interest attaches to the earlier of last week's two market periods. It was marked by a succession of declines and recoveries which, though attributed in part to adverse war news, was properly recognized as amounting in effect to nothing more than a normal correction of over-extended accounts which grew out of the prolonged advance in prices. During the course of that rise optimism in respect to the stock market allowed itself a little too free play, as always happens under similar conditions, and the result was a too thinly supported advance which yielded to the effect of unfavorable war news. But this movement was called for by the position of the market without reference to external influences, and they were only the secondary cause of the declines which occurred on Monday and on Wednesday with an intervening recovery. It was a movement which was accompanied by no impairment of the basic business situation which supplied the foundation for the forward movement which had been under way for six or eight weeks. The news which came to hand early in the week, and this remained true of the business news of the latter part of the week as well, showed no change for the worse in either the business or the financial structure. The monthly iron trade statistics showed noteworthy progress in that basic industry, and the conditions governing a still more basic thing, agriculture, were shown in the Government's monthly report to be decidedly favorable.

Clearly the reaction in the stock market during this early period was of internal rather than of external origin. Not so with the violent break in prices which on Friday opened the new period into which the market passed. That directly and unmistakably was due to the news of the sinking of the Lusitania with many American passengers aboard, and, as was later shown, with the loss of many of those and of many other passengers and members of the crew. From the moment this news was received it was seen that it opened up possibilities of serious complications in our foreign relations. The financial community undertook to weigh the significance of this happening in the light of the note which this Government addressed to Germany when the war zone around Great Britain was declared, and it was felt that the thing had now happened for which this Government had said it would feel constrained to hold the German Government to strict accountability. After the convulsion caused by the receipt of the news of the sinking of this ship the market showed decided recovery, and again on Saturday developed strength after a sharp opening decline. This made it clear that the financial community which came to the support of the stock market was resolved to deal calmly with the situation. Nevertheless it recognized the graveness of it, and market sentiment naturally reflected the reserve to which so serious an incident necessarily gave rise.

The week came to an end without this incident having been closed, for news had not yet come of the stand which Washington would take, and beyond that lay the questions to which Germany's reply might give rise. The action of the market, however, late on Friday and again on Saturday was in no small measure due to the belief which prevailed in important banking circles that the matter would be handled in a way which would avoid the most serious of the consequences which the Stock Exchange had feared at the height of its unsettlement on Friday. Confidence was felt that no hasty action would be taken by this Government, and yet it was clearly realized that urgent representations would have to be made to Germany. It speaks well for the underlying strength of the financial and business situation generally that after a prolonged rise news such as that, which has so shocked the country, should have caused no more unsettlement than it did, and that recovery from that unsettlement should have ensued so quickly.

The further course of the market is necessarily bound up pretty closely with the events which are to grow out of the killing of many Americans on board the Lusitania, and for a time those events and the inferences which may be drawn from them may obliterate the effect upon the market of the commoner things in the situation. But those are almost uniformly favorable, and in due time they will be bound to exert their influence unless they are distorted from their present course by events which are conceived of as possible, but from which most people expect us to escape. The remarkably favorable crop outlook, the steady progress which is being made in trade, the continued stimulus of easy credit, and the cumulative influence of the very favorable position which we occupy in international trade—all hold the promise of an increasingly favorable business development. These are all facts which bear very directly upon the intrinsic value of securities, but as a mere matter of prudence it must be recognized that at present they are all subject to the hazards of war influences. That is one of the things which was made plain last week in an all too striking manner. The market had come to consider itself to a large extent immune to the influence of war news. It thought of the effect of war orders much more than of the possible effect of the outcome of battles, or of happenings such as that which took it so greatly by surprise on Friday, many as had been the warnings of that very thing. It is probable that most of those trading in stocks will not soon forget the truth in this respect, which was so forcibly borne in on them last week. That alone will by no means prevent the exercise of normal influence by the many favorable elements in the situation in this country, but it may well cause that influence to be exerted with more moderation than was shown during the April rise in prices. It must be expected, at least, that what has happened will for a time lead to a more sedate market, even though the hope be freely entertained that ways will be found by which we can steer clear of the possible complications which have been recognized from the beginning of this war, but which until last week were never brought home very forcibly to the stock market.

It is natural to consider the course of prices last week, particularly its later movements, solely in the light of the news which accompanied or gave rise to them, but with a view to obtaining a proper market perspective it is necessary to consider the price movement in reference not only to the news of the week, but also with reference to the previous course of prices. The effect of last week's decline is intensified by reason of the fact that it was concentrated in the space of three or four days. In that period half of the advance recorded in twice as many weeks was wiped out. Yet that was not an excessive reaction after a prolonged and pronounced rise, during the course of which free rein had been given to market imagination. The settling-down process following a long advance might account for a reaction as great as that. That much has happened on this occasion, and has happened in the past, without any impairment of the material factors which provided the foundation for the long rise in prices. The question with which the market feels it is now confronted is whether or not the further course of war events will alter for the worse those material factors. If it is found that it does not such shock as has been given to confidence will be made good. We should move forward hopefully but not boastfully.

So far as the stock market is concerned it now has practical reason enough for recognizing the value of the suggestion with which it had little patience when prices were rising steadily and rapidly that it should bear in mind that a large part of the world is at war and that the ordinary uncertainty of human events is thereby greatly increased. The progress which we have so happily made in business in recent months will in no wise be impaired, indeed, it may be rather helped than harmed, by a quieter stock market than that which lately ruled on the Stock Exchange. Of the breadth of the actual investment demand for securities very striking proof was offered last week in the noteworthy response made to the public offering of the $65,000,000 issue of Pennsylvania 4½ per cent. bonds. It was on Friday that that offering was made and, despite the check which the news of the Lusitania inevitably put upon public subscriptions, the issue was very largely covered on that day, and the indications at the week's close were that it would be fully subscribed by today. The fact that subscriptions were coming in at a rate which made this likely showed pretty clearly that the existing demand for investment issues rests on a solid foundation.

FRANCE PLANS GREAT LOAN.

Will Pledge Bills for 42,000,000 Pounds Sterling in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 9.—Activity on the Bourse has already lessened to such an extent that there is talk of closing the Exchange on Saturdays, beginning next month. French 3 per cents. have been uncertain and a quarter point lower. All the European funds have been neglected. Copper stocks, after a rally in sympathy with their strength in New York, closed yesterday below the preceding week's level.

The whole tone of the markets has been undecided despite the excellent reception given Minister of Finance Ribot's declarations intended to prepare the public mind for the creation of £42,000,000 of French Treasury bills. These are to be pledged with the British Exchequer, and are to be renewable until one year after the signing of peace. The interest is to be the same as on British Treasury bills. The arrangement contemplates a shipment by France to England of £12,000,000 bullion as part security.

The Bank of France's authorized advances to the Government have been increased by 9,000,000,000 francs. More than three-twelfths of the direct taxation has now been called for.

Talk on the Bourse yesterday was all based on the sinking of the Lusitania. Great sympathy for England has been aroused, accompanied by expectations of a sharp change in the attitude of the United States consequent upon the flagrant trampling upon all laws of humanity in submarine warfare.

LONDON TRADING QUIET.

Stock Market Transactions Sag—Many New Issues.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 9.—The markets have been apathetic, owing to the uncertainty which is only natural in a period of such great military activity, but there is no pessimism evident. News of the loss of the Lusitania came Friday after the close of the Exchange, and the state of the public's feeling yesterday was more bitter than at any time since the outbreak of the war. So keenly has the tragedy struck home that naturalized Germans who are members of the Stock Exchange are expected not to enter the house henceforth.

London's trading in American issues has been light, but the Exchange is extremely sensitive to the present mood of the United States. We understand here that J. P. Morgan is returning to New York without having established a British credit. The French shipments of gold to the United States are welcomed. France must shortly obtain credits here to pay her debts to Great Britain, but no public security issue is looked for. The Lake Shore's repayment to be made here on May 15 of £3,200,000 of one-year notes maturing on that date has created a good impression and will help the British exchange position.

The Argentine loan of £5,000,000 on the terms described last week is to be offered at once. The Buenos Aires Western is also to be allowed to offer £1,000,000 of ten-year 5 per cent. bonds at 98 to stockholders. These offerings have confirmed the impression that the authorities approve efforts for the maintenance of Great Britain's commercial position in South America. The East Indian Railway yesterday offered £3,500,000 of 4½ per cent. forty-year bonds at 99. They are guaranteed by the Indian Government, which explains the high price received. The South African Government's offering of £3,000,000 of 4½ per cent. ten-year bonds at 98½ was only taken to the extent of 72 per cent., and constitutes the first failure of a new issue since the beginning of war. However, the loan met with better success than that Government's last pre-war issue.

The City regards the Chinese-Japanese situation hopefully. China is buying silver today. Brewery stocks were helped by the failure of "dry" legislation. Cunard shares were steady and insurance issues dull.

Western Pacific Railway Company

To the Holders of the First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Bonds of said Company, Maturing September 1, 1933:

In view of the appointment of receivers of Western Pacific Railway Company, the undersigned, holding or representing severally a large amount of said bonds, and believing it of great importance that the bondholders shall be in a position to take prompt and concerted action with respect to the enforcement of their mortgage lien upon the property of said Company, the protection of their rights otherwise in the pending foreclosure suit and realizing, as far as possible, their claim against The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company (both under the guaranty of interest endorsed or agreed to be endorsed upon their bonds and the contract obligation with respect to the payment of such interest assumed by The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company and pledged under said First Mortgage), as well as with respect to other matters, have consented to act as a Committee for the protection of the interests of the bondholders.

Holders of said bonds are requested to deposit their bonds, with the March 1, 1915, coupons attached, under an agreement of deposit now on file in the office of The Equitable Trust Company of New York, 37 Wall Street, New York City, the Depositary under said agreement, on or before June 1, 1915. Said Depositary will issue therefor its transferable certificates of deposit.

Deposits may be made also with the First Federal Trust Company, No. 1 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, California; Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, La Salle and Jackson Streets, Chicago, Illinois, and the Old Colony Trust Company, 17 Court Street, Boston, Massachusetts, agents of the Depositary.

Copies of the agreement of deposit and of an explanatory circular letter may be obtained upon application to any of the above-mentioned Trust Companies.

Dated New York, May 8, 1915.

Shall I buy now?
Shall I sell now?
What shall I buy?
How safe are my investments?

THESE, and many other questions, must be decided frequently by investors. Generally they must depend wholly for advice upon others. The Babson Instruction Course for Investors, evolved by Roger W. Babson, the well-known financial expert and writer, teaches you to competently judge investment opportunities yourself. It gives thoroughly practical instruction in time-tested rules by which you can determine the safety of all investments, the time to buy, the time to sell, etc. This course is considered an authority by banks and financial institutions. Write for our booklet, "Suggestions to Investors," and full information. We have no stocks or bonds for sale.

New Orleans, April 28th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 28th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional bers, denominations and maturities of the amendment ratifying same, and of the numthorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6451 to 6500, inclusive, of the denomination of $1000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.
A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

Sinking Fund Purchase of International Agricultural Corporation First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Gold Bonds.

Notice is hereby given that Bankers Trust Company, corporate Trustee under the First Mortgage of International Agricultural Corporation, dated May 1, 1912, to Bankers Trust Company and Frank N. B. Close, as Trustees, securing the First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Five Per Cent. Twenty-Year Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of said International Agricultural Corporation, will purchase for the sinking fund, bonds issued under said mortgage, to an amount sufficient to exhaust as nearly as may be the sum of $311,062.08, now held by said corporate Trustee in said sinking fund, and said corporate Trustee hereby invites sealed offers to be submitted to it on or before 12 o'clock noon, May 14, 1915, at its office, 16 Wall Street, Manhattan, New York City, for the sale to it of such bonds, at prices to be named in such offers, which offers shall be for all or any part of the bonds so offered, provided, however, that no offers will be accepted which shall be for a sum in excess of one hundred and three per centum (103%) of the principal amount of such bonds, and accrued interest. Notices of acceptance of offers will be mailed on or before May 15, 1915, to the makers of such thereof as are accepted, at the addresses designated by them, respectively. Delivery of bonds accepted, with all unmatured coupons attached, should be made at the office of said corporate Trustee on or before 3 o'clock P. M. May 19th, 1915, after which date interest on accepted bonds will cease. United States Treasury decisions require that Federal Income Tax ownership certificates for amount of accrued interest must accompany such bonds when presented for payment.

Government of the Argentine Nation

Five Year 6% Treasury Gold Bonds

Dated May 15, 1915 — Due May 15, 1920

Coupon bonds in denomination of $1,000 — Interest payable November 15 and May 15

EXEMPT FROM ALL PRESENT OR FUTURE ARGENTINE TAXES

These Treasury Bonds are issued under authority of Law Number 9468, dated January 2, 1914, and Law Number 9648, dated February 9, 1915, which authorize the Executive Power to issue a total amount of 80,000,000 Argentine gold pesos (equivalent to $77,760,000 United States gold or £16,000,000 sterling) for the purpose of furnishing means for the extension of the Sanitary Works and water supply of the Federal Capital. The immediate issue consists of the $25,000,000 now offered in the United States of America and £5,000,000 offered in the United Kingdom of Great Britain. Both the sterling and dollar bonds are of substantially similar tenor and content.

After May 15, 1917, sterling and dollar bonds will be interchangeable between London and New York at the fixed rate of $4.86 per pound sterling, the expense of any new stamps which may be required, to be borne by the holder.

These Five Year 6% Treasury Gold Bonds are the direct general obligation of the Argentine Government, whose faith and credit are pledged for the prompt payment of the principal and semi-annual interest as they fall due.

"For the purpose of furnishing means for the eventual replacement of the present short term Treasury Bonds by the issue of long term bonds, the Executive Power of the Nation shall procure such amendment of Laws Numbers 8889 and 9468 as will permit the Government to assume responsibility of and endorse with its guaranty the bonds or obligations which the Board of Sanitary Works is authorized to issue in accordance with those laws. When the amendment has been obtained and the issue made, the proceeds thereof will be applied to the redemption of the present issue.

"Until the entire loan, of which this bond forms a part, is cancelled, the Government of the Argentine Nation will not agree to more favorable conditions as regards security for any other loan whatsoever without securing in like manner the principal and instalments of interest of each and every bond of this loan. Loans are excepted which may be raised for industrial purposes, such as railroads or petroleum, and for which the industries themselves may be encumbered.

"When the amendment of Laws Numbers 8889 and 9468 shall have been accomplished and the attendant issue of bonds or obligations shall have been made, the Executive Power will retain in his control, as security for this loan until its complete cancelation, an amount in money or of such bonds or obligations equal to the amount of the present loan."

From the proceeds of the present loan there will be retained by the Bankers, funds sufficient to pay off $5,000,000 Series "A" 6% Gold Notes maturing December 15, 1915; £5,000,000 of short term notes maturing in London, September 2; and £3,000,000 maturing December 15, 1915. The balance will constitute free money available for further construction expenditures upon the Sanitary Works of Buenos Aires.

Additional bonds are reserved under the authorization of the above laws to refund the $5,000,000 Series "B" and $5,000,000 Series "C" Notes maturing December 15, 1916 and December 15, 1917, respectively.

WHAT IS NEW HAVEN WORTH?

Is there any justification for the present price of New York, New Haven & Hartford stock? What is the intrinsic worth of this stock, and what will be its position after the disintegration plans have been completed?

These are some of the questions that Mr. Moody answers in a special analysis of the property which we have just issued. Mr. Moody has been absolutely right in his analysis of the New Haven road for the past seven years.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE THIRTY-YEAR FIRST MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. GOLD BONDS (SERIES A) OF THE PENNSYLVANIA COAL AND COKE COMPANY UNDER ITS MORTGAGE TO THE COMMERCIAL TRUST COMPANY, DATED JULY 1, 1902:

Take notice that a meeting of the holders of the bonds issued under the above-mentioned mortgage of the PENNSYLVANIA COAL AND COKE COMPANY is called to be held at the office of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation in the Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on the 19th day of May, 1915, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose of acting upon a proposition to release from the lien of said mortgage a certain lease from the BLUBAKER COAL COMPANY to J. L. MITCHELL, dated April 1, 1902, covering certain coal and mining rights in and under approximately 1,730 acres in Elder and Susquehanna Townships, Cambria County, Pennsylvania, together with the improvements and equipment upon the leased premises and all rights appurtenant thereto. The foregoing notice is given by the undersigned, as it has acquired the right, title and interest of said Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company in and to the lease and property proposed to be released, as aforesaid.

Dated New York, April 4, 1915.

THE CLEARFIELD BITUMINOUS COAL CORPORATION,

By HAROLD S. VANDERBILT, Vice-President.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

Morris and Essex Railroad Company

The undersigned, representing a large amount of stock of The Morris and Essex Railroad Company, have been constituted and are acting as a Committee under an agreement dated April 26, 1915, for the purpose of protecting the interests and enforcing the rights of the stockholders of that company under the lease of its railroad and property to The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, dated December 10, 1868.

The Committee is of the opinion and have been advised that the additional dividend of one per cent. per annum provided for in the lease should not only have been paid by the D., L. & W. R. R. Co. to the stockholders of The Morris and Essex R. R. Co. for some years past, but should also be properly payable in future, and has caused legal proceedings to be instituted against the D., L. & W. R. R. Co. to enforce the rights of The Morris and Essex stockholders.

For further particulars stockholders are referred to the Committee's circular letter of April 26, 1915.

The present officers and Directors of The Morris and Essex R. R. Co. are substantially the same as those of the D. L. & W. R. R. Co., and their interest is adverse to that of the Morris and Essex stockholders. The Committee therefore deems it of the utmost importance that at the next annual meeting of the stockholders of the Morris and Essex R. R. Co. to be held on JUNE 30, 1915, independent directors of that company be elected.

The deposit agreement under which the Committee is acting provides for the deposit of stock and proxies. A substantial amount of stock and proxies has already been received. In view of the proximity of the annual meeting all stockholders are therefore requested, without delay, to deposit their stock and furnish the Committee with proxies to vote at the next annual meeting of stockholders.

Stock may be deposited and proxies filed with the Depositary, METROPOLITAN TRUST COMPANY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, No. 49 Wall Street, New York City, or with any of the following as agents of the Depositary:

Bridgeport Trust Company, Bridgeport, Conn.
The Union & New Haven Trust Company, New Haven, Conn.
The Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company, Providence, R. I.
Albany Trust Company, Albany, N. Y.
Utica Trust & Deposit Company, Utica, N. Y.
Bankers Trust Company, Buffalo, N. Y.
National Newark Banking Company, Newark, N. J.

Transferable certificates of deposit will be issued in respect of all stock deposited, and application will be made in due course for the listing of the certificates of deposit on the New York Stock Exchange.

Copies of the Deposit Agreement and of the Committee's circular letter of April 26, 1915, and forms of proxy may be obtained from the Depositary and its agents and also from the members of the Committee and from its Secretary and Counsel.

OLD LETTERS TELL OF THE REVOLUTION

Many Rare Historical Treasures in Noteworthy Sale of Autographs.

THE CAMPAIGN IN JERSEY

A noteworthy sale of autographs by Stan. V. Henkels will begin in Philadelphia tomorrow. In the collection is a letter of Brig. Gen. Hugh Mercer, dated Elizabethtown, Nov. 4, 1776, and addressed to Major Gen. Nathanael Greene. It says that Colonel Ten Eyck is to march his battalion of 250 men now on duty at Newark, that engineers and intrenching tools are needed, and that there are no storehouses at Bound Brook, but there are at the landing, two miles above. He proposes an alteration of the route of the army and asks Greene's approval, says there are some troops from Virginia on their way, and wants to know whether they are to be forwarded to Fort Lee, or would he rather attempt to drive the Hessians off Staten Island. It is a fine specimen of a rare autograph. Mercer was shortly after mortally wounded at Princeton. Few Revolutionary letters of his are extant.

William Pitt's Letter of 1775.

An important letter of William Pitt, Earl of Shelburne and Marquis of Lansdowne, is dated Borwood Park, July 31, 1775, and is addressed to Henry Laurens. It was written soon after the news of the battle of Lexington had reached London. It reads:

I am to thank you for your obliging letters, the last received this morning. I never imagined that public affairs would affect me so much as they have done since the affair of Lexington. A man of common attention cannot avoid feeling every passion agitated and distracted. I am very clear from General Gage's letter that the troops have suffered a signal defeat, and that the arms of England have lost a lustre which I see no possibility of their regaining during the present contest. There is besides a cloud which hangs upon the General's account and betrays a most alarming situation of things, while the conduct of the Provincials, thro' all the mist under the command it would seem of nobody, manifests a decisive superiority in every point of military judgment.

In my life I never was more pleased with a State Paper than I have been this morning with the Assembly of Virginia's discussion of Lord North's proposition. It's masterly.

By the papers, as well as the run of private accounts, I see very plainly whoever governs us is determined to proceed, and that as long as the stockholders keep forming the nation is to run every risque to heap the rewards of Sir R. Walpole and Mr. Fox upon Mr. Jenkinson. How long this torpor will continue it's impossible to say, nor do I consider with any pleasure upon whom the storm will or ought to burst, but what I fear is that the evil is irrecoverable, union itself will be too late.

I set out for Ireland on Thursday, and private business obliges me to return early in October. As to publick business I disposed, personal jealousy and disunion infects and destroys the weight of both individual and body of men. The City of London I see daily losing its weight thro' want of proper direction and joint effort.

The Revolution in Letters.

A feature of the sale is an extraordinary series of seventy-one letters of General Ebenezer Huntington, dating from the commencement of the American Revolution to the signing of the Treaty of Peace. They are replete with the most interesting accounts of the battles and marches of the Continental Army, and teem with patriotic expressions as well as denunciation of the manner in which the Continental soldiers were treated by their own people. He pleads with his father and brother to induce the people of Connecticut to be more patriotic and help their suffering, starved, and naked brothers in the army, declaring them not worthy of being free and regretting that he himself is an American.

An important civil war document is an engrossed copy of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, signed by President Abraham Lincoln, Vice President Hamlin, Speaker Schuyler Colfax, the Secretary of the Senate, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, 38 Senators, and 122 Members of Congress, all who voted for it. It is equally desirable as the official copy in the State Department, being signed by every person who signed the copy owned by the Government.

It has been said that there were three duplicate copies of the original document made at the time by the chief engraving clerk, Isaac Strahan, and two assistants by special permission. The late Major W. H. Lambert, the noted Lincoln collector, had two of these three copies. At the sale of his collection by the Anderson Auction Company on Jan. 14 to 16, 1914, one copy brought $3,250. This copy was signed by Lincoln, Hamlin, Colfax, and Forney, Secretary of the Senate, but not by the Senators and members of the House of Representatives. The second Lambert copy, in the sale of April 1 to 3, 1914, brought $300. It was not signed by Lincoln, although bearing the autographs of Hamlin, Colfax, McPherson, (Clerk of the House,) and of some, but not all, of the Senators and members who voted for the amendment. The third copy, recently discovered, has the signatures of Lincoln, Hamlin, Colfax, Forney, McPherson, and of every Senator and member who voted for the amendment.

Writes of Benedict Arnold.

Captain John W. Wendell's Orderly Book, commencing at Albany, April 20, 1776, and ending at Skenesborough, Aug. 20, 1776, is of unusual historical interest, and embraces a period in the Revolutionary history of New York of the utmost importance. Under date of July 30, 1776, there is this interesting item about Benedict Arnold:

The General is exceedingly astonished and concerned to find such supineness prevailing in the Third Brigade, stationed at Mount Independence, as if it were a time of profound peace and no enemy to contend with. He is therefore obliged to report to Brigadier Gen. Arnold and the Colonel commanding brigades, and to every commanding officer of regiments belonging to those brigades, how necessary it is in the present emergency for them by their authority and example to inspire all under them with a spirit of emulation in forwarding the work, cleaning the ground, and preparing to receive the enemy. The troops upon the Mount should be convinced by their last year's campaign at Cambridge of the utility of good works. The General trusts they will lose no time in raising them.

There is a letter of Eleazer Williams, dated Wethersfield, Aug. 3, 1774, to Nathan Hale and indorsed by the latter. An important historical letter of William Whipple is written in the year of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. A long letter of Maj. Gen. Clinton, July 26, 1788, to the Governor of Delaware, proposes amendments to the Federal Constitution. A letter of Robert Dinwiddie, Colonial Governor of Virginia, March 1, 1755, refers to General Braddock.

A letter of Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene, Nov. 2, 1781, to General Sumter refers to Cornwallis:

"I congratulate you on the glorious news from Virginia, the surrender of Lord Cornwallis and his whole army. Official information arrived last night. The particulars are yet to come, however; the account says the British Army marched out with furled colors and grounded their arms. This is glorious for America, a sweet revenge for the fall of Charleston."

Thacher Sale to Be Resumed.

The fifth part of the collection of the late John Boyd Thacher of Albany, N. Y., will be sold by the Anderson Galleries on May 13 and 14. It will include European autographs from A to C. A noteworthy item is a holograph letter of Lucrezia Borgia, dated Ferrara, Oct. 14, 1515. Another rare and fine specimen of a full letter signed is Bianca Capello, Jan. 2, 1577. Another rarity is a document signed by Diane N'Androuins, the beautiful Comtesse de Guiche, whom Henry IV. of France loved. There is also the rare signature of Louise Marguerite de Lorraine Conti, Princess de Guise, who died in 1631. A holograph letter of Marie de Rohan, Duchesse de Chevreuse, whom Richelieu banished for her intrigues, is also in the collection.

Sir Francis Bacon is represented by a holograph letter and also by a document signed. A letter of Robert Burns is dated Ellisland, Dec. 20, 1789, and is addressed to Prevost Maxwell, incorporating an academical poem of eleven verses. There are two full letters of Lord Byron, one dated Venice, Nov. 27, 1816, and the other La Mira, Nov. 1, 1817. Sir Thomas Browne, author of "Religio Medici," is represented by four pages in his hand, and signed Norwich, Dec. 11, 1658.

A short letter of Thomas Chatterton was written in 1769, the year before he poisoned himself at the age of 18. There is a page of autograph manuscript with the name of Robert Burton, author of "Anatomy of Melancholy," indorsed at the top. Of William Congreve, the celebrated dramatist, there is a document signed and dated June 4, 1719.

SEES RUSSIA WEAKENING.

German Paper Thinks Available Supply of Men Is Diminishing.

"The Russian press is full of details about the dearth of men in the country," the paper says, "as a result of the calling to the colors of all who are able to do work. In the Government of Tenbow, for example, 122 men have been called to the colors in a community consisting of 100 farms, aside from the men who were serving in the standing army before the war. Half of the farms, as a result, are stripped utterly of male laborers. To pump still more out of the exhausted supply of human beings would be too dangerous an experiment for even the wisdom of the Russian Government to undertake. Its methods heretofore have already taxed the moral reserves strongly, so that there is probably little left of the war enthusiasm of the early weeks.

"The fact that Russia, the greatest corn exporting country of Europe, is experiencing an unprecedented rise in the price of its foodstuffs and may be threatened by famine in a war that prevents its corn exports—that would not have been expected even by those who knew the inability of the Russian bureaucracy to reach prompt decisions with respect to organization.

"Russia, if the normal development is not soon checked, will soon number 200,000,000 inhabitants. With the armies of millions which it can form from that supply, with the unaging plans that run counter to the most important interests of Germany, with the ruthlessness of its policy of expansion and aggression, Russia will remain our most dangerous foe. As long as it is not reconstituted anew from the very foundation it cannot refrain from this policy, which is the natural consequence of its internal savagery. For that reason it is not because of political prejudices that we see in the present system of Russian Government one of the greatest dangers of European civilization.

"Only a full victory over the brutal force in the east can safeguard our future. Before we have gotten that far we need not bother our brains about our relations to Russia."

Business Men at the Exposition.

Through an arrangement perfected by the Merchants' Association and the New York Chamber of Commerce, parties from this State who visit the San Francisco Exposition may meet the official representatives of foreign countries for the distinct purpose of consultation in regard to trade opportunities. By informing the association or the chamber of their arrival in that city, business men who visit the fair will be received by the New York representatives and given the facilities of the State Building, together with the opportunity of learning much that will be of value to them in expanding their export business.

TO WELCOME DELEGATES.

Latin-American Ones to be Guests at Merchants' Luncheon.

The delegates appointed by the Governments of Central and South America to represent them at the foreign trade financial conference called by the United States Government to meet in Washington will be guests of honor at the May luncheon of the Members' Council of the Merchants' Association, which will be held in the Hotel Astor on Thursday at 12:30 o'clock.

W. C. Breed, Chairman of the Members' Council, will preside over the meeting. Acting Mayor McAneny will welcome the delegates on behalf of the city, and Collector Dudley Field Malone on behalf of the Treasury Department. The other speakers will be Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, who will represent the city's financial institutions, and William A. Marble, President of the Merchants' Association, who will represent the business interests. Samuel Hale Pearson, Director of the Banco de la Nacion, Argentina, will respond on behalf of the Latin-Americans.

The delegation to Washington includes some of the Consuls-General from the Latin-American republics stationed in this city. All the Consuls-General who are not delegates have been invited to attend the meeting, and the guest list, in addition, includes many of the business and financial leaders of the city.

Australia Discriminating.

Upon having the matter called to its attention by the Merchants' Association, the State Department has promised to take up with the Australian authorities the collection of duties on freights paid when a favorable opportunity presents itself. In assessing duty upon pianos that must be shipped through Canada to the Pacific Coast, Australia is collecting the same percentage of duty on the inland freight charges in the United States either to the seaboard or to the point of entry into Canada that is assessed upon the cost of the pianos. This practice renders a shipment of pianos to San Francisco by rail economically impossible and creates a practical discrimination against American railroads in favor of the Canadian lines.

Where Words Fail.

Words are puny things at best. We exhaust our best vocabularies in describing a South Carolina feud or a miners' strike in Butte, and naturally have no superlatives available to describe a world war. This should teach conservation, but it will not.—Joplin (Mo.) Globe.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The Northern disturbance of the last several days has nearly disappeared, although there were more showers Saturday night in the lake region and portions of the Middle Atlantic States. Another marked disturbance is central over Southern Alberta, and pressure is also low over the North Pacific States and the North Plateau, with resulting showers in the Pacific States, Nevada, Idaho, Western Montana, and Northwest Wyoming.

Killing frosts occurred Sunday morning in portions of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and the Dakotas.

There will be showers Monday over the central and north districts west of the Rocky Mountains, followed by generally fair weather Tuesday, and there will be showers Monday or Monday night in the extreme Northwest, extending Tuesday into the Dakotas and Nebraska.

It will be warmer Monday in the lake region and the central valleys and quite generally warmer on Tuesday east of the Mississippi River. It will be cooler Tuesday in the extreme Northwest.

Frost warnings have been ordered for the upper lake and west lower lake region, the eastern mountain districts, and the cranberry bogs of New Jersey and Wisconsin.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND TUESDAY.

New Jersey—Fair Monday and Tuesday.

LEWISOHN SUGGESTS CITY SAVINGS BANKS

Depositors to Receive Scrip and Investment to be Made in City Bonds.

SAVING BANKERS' PROFITS

Adolph Lewisohn, prominent as a capitalist and in copper development, Director in several financial institutions, as well as actively interested as an official in many charitable and educational institutions, proposes that the city establish places of deposit for the savings of the people and issue scrip backed by the city's credit. He discussed his plan in detail before the East Side Forum last night, and summarized its main purposes as follows:

Obtaining money on loans or deposit for the city's use in relief of the need for bond sales.

Providing wage earners more convenient and safe places of deposit and investment.

Mr. Lewisohn said he would have ten places of deposit open from early in the morning until late at night for the convenience of depositors, and interest paid by the city at an average rate of perhaps 3 per cent. He discussed the "over the counter" sale of city bonds in small amounts successfully carried out in Baltimore, Chicago, and other cities, and the popularity of the Postal Savings Banks, despite the fact that only 2 per cent. is paid on these deposits. In St. Paul, Minn., a plan very similar to the one Mr. Lewisohn proposes has been in successful operation for two years.

Would Make Better Citizens.

The investment of savings in the city's credit, Mr. Lewisohn said, would induce people to take more serious interest in the City Government.

"They would be directly interested," he said, "to see that the city's affairs are conducted in the right way, and this really is the right spirit for the people to have. If people of moderate means have all their savings deposited with the city it would be a great incentive to them to see that the city is governed right."

The advantage to the city, he said, would be in widening the market for the city's bonds and lessening the cost of borrowed money to the city. He read from a carefully prepared statement this explanation of the plan:

"The return of the deposits to be secured either by the general credit of the city or by the pledge of city bonds with some board or other official agency duly authorized; the city to have the use of the funds on deposit for purposes for which it might use the proceeds for corporate stock or other city bonds; the city to pay from 2½ per cent. to 3½ per cent. (varying according to money market and other conditions) interest on deposits and redeem the scrip or repay the deposit on thirty or sixty days' notice, or on demand, the city in that case, however, reserving the right to require such thirty or sixty days' notice; depositors of $100 or more to have the right to convert their scrip into city bonds issued directly to them.

"Whether empowering legislation will be necessary to enable the city to put the present proposal into effective operation and if so the precise form and provisions of such legislation, will depend on the details of the plans as finally determined upon," said Mr. Lewisohn. "It would seem possible to put the proposal into operation, at least to make a beginning, without any legislation, provided the financial officers of the city give it their enthusiastic support and actively co-operate in organizing and developing it.

Plan Would Encourage Saving.

"On Jan. 1, 1914, the private savings banks of the city had 2,053,423 depositors, with total deposits of $1,208,312,742.43. There are, however, many people who do not intrust their savings to the private savings banks. Many, indeed, excuse their failure to save by their fear that their accumulations, often the result of much personal sacrifice, may be lost through careless or dishonest management of private institutions. That there is room for a public institution which would serve these people is evidenced by the success of the Postal Savings Bank in this country.

"The restriction of deposits to $10 or its multiple should save a large amount of clerical work and bookkeeping which might otherwise eat into the net financial gain afforded by the plan, while on the other hand it is small enough to permit the plan to be available to the ordinary savings bank depositor.

"If it be decided that this proposition is worthy of future consideration and a committee be appointed to investigate it, it would seem advisable to extend the investigation to other phases of the city's debt, the purposes for which the city issues bonds, and the method by which they are sold and redeemed. The city's borrowing power under the constitutional debt limitation might become an important question because the deposits might be construed as city indebtedness and if they became large might approach the constitutional limit."

Would Save Bankers' Profits.

Mr. Lewisohn discussed the present method of selling city bonds, and said:

"The city now borrows money right along, and is issuing securities, partly long-term bonds and partly short-term notes, aggregating about $400,000,000 a year. Under the method I propose the city will get this money cheaper and the depositors will have the benefit of absolute security and know that they can get their money at any time if they want it.

"The saving of bankers' commissions and profits of 1 per cent. by the city on $400,000,000, for which it issues securities during the year, would amount to $4,000,000, and in time the city should be able to reduce the interest charged on its outstanding debt. The benefit which the city would derive might amount to $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 a year, which would materially cut down taxes and enable the city to do a great deal of work which it is now restrained from undertaking on account of not having the money at its disposal, such as improving the parks, better facilities for education, and the betterment of the people of the city generally.

"People could deposit in sums of $5, $10, $100, or more, as they have the money, and when their deposits aggregate $500 or $1,000 they should have the privilege of getting a long-term bond for it which would pay a little higher rate of interest.

"In my opinion, this is not going to hurt the present good banks, savings banks, and trust companies, as it will have the effect of inducing people to save and increase their deposits of all kinds, and will thus increase the wealth and prosperity of our popuulation."

It is time to cry aloud against the mother-in-law joke.

"I see by the paper," said a Newark matron to another, "that your daughter-in-law is giving a party tomorrow. I hope you will have a fine time."

"No fine time for me," answered the mother-in-law, with a sigh of mock resignation. "I am expected to take the baby out for an airing when the party begins, and stay out of the house till the party is over."—Newark News.

COAL VERSUS GOLD.

Across the continent comes the news that a Colorado gold mine has produced $23,000,000 in fifteen years. The newspapers devote considerable space telling how South Dakota this year yielded $7,000,000 of the yellow metal.

Romance clings around the glories of Cripple Creek and the Black Hills, but when it comes to hard cash Pennsylvania's coal mines could buy and sell all the Dakota and Colorado gold half a dozen times.

There is no other mineral romance in this country that matches the romance of Pennsylvania coal. Keystone State coal has been worth more than all the gold and all the silver mined in all the American States combined.

All the gold dug from the earth this year would scarcely pay for half the anthracite mined in one small district of Pennsylvania. The man who would trade our soft coal for the silver output of all the States would instantly subject himself to an investigation in lunacy.

If everybody in the United States dropped $3 in a hat it would just about pay for our coal at the mines during 1914. To buy all the gold and silver of the country each individual would need to put in the hat only $1.50.

Clothe a million dollars in the guise of a gold mine and it fires the imagination of a continent. Lay ten millions at your doorstep in the shape of coal and you kick it out of the way.

oPetry and story still wreathe the California forty-niners, but who recalls the birth of anthracite, which has been twenty times more valuable than all Sierra's gold?

When forty years ago the nation went wild over the wealth of Pennsylvania petroleum, men wouldn't even take the trouble to insert the one word coal in their leases of land. They were out for oil.

But alas! For every dollar some Coal Oil Johnnie Steele romantically made in petroleum some Berwind has coined ten out of the much-despised bituminous.

They were talking about this romance of Pennsylvania black diamonds. Thomas Fisher, who knows coal as any mother knows her own baby, told how his father and others like him could have leased thousands of acres of bituminous lands during the oil craze and got it for nothing. But they were swept away by the lure of oil, while the far more valuable coal was neglected.

Wellington Christ of Pinegrove recounted how his grandfather had sold 800 acres of anthracite in Schuylkill County for $340 for the entire tract. Out of that patch have since been taken millions.

Only a few years ago, when natural gas began its flaming career, soft coal lands were again treated as a despised doormat. But gas soon finished its meteroic journey, while bituminous still plods steadily on its way as the world's foremost fuel for steaming purposes.

And to prove that the tortoise has won more than one race, I can point to the fact that men are now paying $1,200 an acre for Western Pennsylvania coal which they refused to purchase in the late nineties at $50.

Stephen Girard saw further into the future with his one eye than anybody else could see with two. He beheld the coming value of coal, and so purchased vast tracts of land which are still yielding heavily.

E. J. Berwind has become one of the nation's richest men because long ago he concluded that the world must have more and more fuel every year, and hence he gathered up soft coal fields.

Asa Packer built Lehigh University out of his own intellect when he figured that people had to have coal, and so he built his railroad into the heart of anthracite.

Ario Pardee endowed Lafayette College with the proceeds of his foresight into the fuel problem. It was Franklin B. Gowen's brain, rather than that of J. P. Morgan and his fellow-reorganizers, which enriched the Reading Company with its enormous coal tonnage.

Pennsylvania coal is a grand employer of labor, since it pays nine men wages for every one that is on the payroll of gold and silver.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

ONE OF OUR BIG PROBLEMS.

Who's Going to Do the Work on Our Big Farms?

Some years ago a farm owner in Michigan lectured us for some kindly words addressed to farmhands. He said he knew not whereof we spoke. The great race of hired hands, once so broad of shoulder and tireless of arm, had become land proprietors or had gone to the city. Their successors, he declared, were a lot of duffers, indolent, discontented, negligent, and wasteful.

His communication was scarce dry before one who signed himself a farm laborer fired a broadside in reply. Farm owners, said this defender of his kind, had grown more selfish as they had grown rich. They were a bunch of drivers, nagging, critical, ungrateful.

So we knew that there was a farmhand problem. And it has not, apparently, disappeared with time. A Government report places it among the most important difficulties of American agriculture. It stands in the way of greater utilization of the soil. It prevents the planting of crops which would prove more profitable than crops which can be cared for by the farm owner alone. But for the lack of labor, many farms with markets at hand would be turned into truck gardens. Every year the wheat country beyond the Missouri must plead for harvest hands and sometimes in desperation commandeer them.

Suggestions for solving the problem are not lacking. But none of them is a cure-all. It is too complex a question for that. Probably necessity will provide a remedy. When beef goes to 50 cents a pound and, for want of leather, shoes sell for $10 a pair—a prediction of the Agricultural Department at Washington—the town will have to be deserted for the country simply because the country alone will offer the means of living.—Toledo Blade.

A POPULAR FALLACY.

Not True the Big Thief Fares Better Than the Little One.

Often have you heard it said that if you steal, steal a million. The inference is that a big thief has a smoother road to freedom than a little thief.

The esteemed Director of Public Safety supplies evidence to the contrary. He tells us about the inconspicuous offenders who are arrested seventeen times, and in the face of a dozen convictions still go free. Croesus couldn't do that with all his money, or, at least, not so long as there is any wood pulp that can be converted into a newspaper.

The chief reason why the little culprit can go ahead duplicating his offense time after time is because he is so small the newspaper microscope overlooks him. But old Mr. Moneybags, when he is hauled up for the theft of a million, goes on the first page of a thousand newspapers.

Any juggling of justice becomes hazardous in the case of Moneybags, since everybody would be told about it the next morning.

The minnow that gets through the net escapes notice, but everybody in the boat can see when a whale slips the harpoon.Girard, in Philadelphia Ledger.

Quaint Old Kentucky.

Recently a gentleman who travels out of Paris was in the Kentucky mountains, sixty miles from a railroad. A man asked him the time. The gentleman looked at his watch and told the inquirer. "That's railroad time, ain't it?" asked the man.

"Yes," said the Paris man.

"Well, we don't go by railroad time up here," said the man, "we go by sun time, 'cause we are closer to the sun than we are to the railroad."—Paris (Ky.) Democrat.

PIRATES WELCOMED TO OLD NEW YORK

GAVE FREEDOM OF PORT

In the hope, as its preface explains, of stirring up interest in the building of a merchant marine which will regain for the United States the supremacy this country formerly held upon the seas, the Bank of Manhattan has issued a historical brochure entitled "Ships and Shipping of Old New York."

The little volume, consisting of sixty-one pages of printed matter and scores of old-time wood cuts illustrating events of early day shipping, does not in any sense flatter the memory of the first New York ship owners. It appears from the volume that the first trade for which the colony on Manhattan became famous was a trade in tobacco, which was illicit, since it came from Virginia, an English colony, and through clearance at New York managed to reach Europe without the payment of taxes to England, "to the loss of £50,000 per year in British revenues."

It was in chagrin over these losses, the book tells, that the British swooped down upon the Dutch and cleared Manhattan of the Dutch control.

The first political scandal is recited as one which originated because the home of a New York Governor became famous for its Persian furniture and Oriental rugs at a time when pirates were making more merry than the populace liked them to along the Manhattan water front. There was a trial of the Governor to learn on what basis he let the pirates have free entrance to the port, and at the trial it came out that it cost a pirates' association 1,800 English pounds, "which went to the Governor and to the principal members of the council."

The first great wealth that came to Manhattan, the books says in asserting that Manhattan has always been a trading centre and devoted to commerce, was a batch of 14,000,000 Dutch guilders captured among the loot taken from seventeen Spanish galleons that came under the fire of a single Manhattan-manned privateersman.

The volume credits the first general expansion of New York shipping trade to the opening of commerce in slaves and carries the story to the point of the winning of world supremacy by detailing the work done to outfit pirate ships for "the Red Sea trade."

The supremacy of the ships which made New York their home harbor is traced at length up to their downfall through the depredations of the Alabama and other ships outfitted by the South during the civil war.

"The year 1853 marked the height not alone of clipper building," concludes the brochure, "but also the high tide of the American deep-sea merchant marine. America made the mistake of continuing to build wooden sailing ships when the era of iron and steam had arrived. So far as we knew we had no great deposits of iron and coal and we believed England had the advantage.

"Had it not been for the civil war we should perhaps have adjusted ourselves to changed conditions, but the Southern cruisers drove our flag from the sea. The old merchants entered other lines of business and the few who remained in the shipping industry were content to use foreign bottoms.

"Today, however, we look toward the dawn of a new era which promises much for the re-establishment of the American merchant marine and for the securing again of our share of the foreign trade of the world."

GROOVED CONCRETE FOR MOTOR HIGHWAY

TOLLS FOR OTHER VEHICLES

Brick Road from Southwestern Kansas to Kansas City Also Is Under Consideration.

A company recently organized in Joplin, Mo., will build a private road on which motor cars will operate between Pittsburg and Fort Scott, Kan., thirty-two miles, and should the plan prove successful, the road will be extended to Kansas City.

On a private right-of-way concrete tracks twelve inches wide will be built. The tracks will be concave in order to hold the wheel of the motor car and regular passing places for the cars will be established. The company will operate it as a bus and freight line, and will allow the use of the tracks for a toll charge by any person. This idea has arisen as a result of the problem of bad roads all over that part of the country.

Another scheme, which embraces many different plans to improve conditions, is the proposed building of a brick highway from some point in Southwestern Kansas to Kansas City. The construction of such a highway will give employment to hundreds of people who are now idle and cause the reopening of brick plants that have been shut down for months and the building and improving of "feed" lines to connect with the brick road. Several counties in the southern part of the State are co-operating in this project and have appealed to the different farmers' organizations for indorsement.

"The farmer has no time for motor car passenger business," said George Purdy, a Grange County deputy who is fostering the movement and who recently outlined the scheme before some representatives of organizations interested. "But there is a big opportunity in front of him if he will make practical use of the motor freight truck for long hauls. Many farmers now own heavy cars suitable for transporting their heavy produce. Since the logical market for this section of the country is Kansas City, suitable roads are needed for hauling to this point.

"Of course, to make it pay, a long haul is necessary, for every one knows that the short haul costs no more by railroad or any other way. Rock roads would not be practicable, because they wear out too quickly and the cost of maintenance is too great. Then they wash, crumble, and blow away. The brick highway seems to be the only solution."

A bill has been introduced in Kansas to stop the "hit or miss" road building used in many counties at present. The bill provides that if the tax is made, the road plan for the entire county must be made up and the work started on one road and the tax levy expended on that road until it is completed. For years it has been the custom to build a mile or two of road one year in one part of a county and the next year to build in another part. By the time the roads are connected the first highways are worn out. The new bill requires that continuous work be done on the roads both in building and in maintenance.

THE PLAIN TRUTH: THE COLD FACTS

Arthur R. Morris, for many years a Missionary to Japan, made a Will directing his Executor, Mr. Henry Lewis Morris, to sell his Real Estate and that various Charitable Societies and Associations should receive certain shares of the proceeds.

Mr. Morris placed these properties in our hands to sell at an Absolute PUBLIC AUCTION, WITHOUT PROTECTION, BY-BIDDING OR RESERVATION OF ANY KIND.

For the past three weeks we have been extensively advertising the sale of these properties.

We have called attention to the fact that since the panic of 1907 business has been bad.

In August, 1914, just as business was about to recover, Crash, came the European War, and Mercantile business, securities and Real Estate were paralyzed.

Sixty days ago Wall Street, the barometer of the Country, woke up and saw tremendous crops sold at high prices, money pouring into the Country from the sale of War Supplies; the new Federal Banking system in operation and that the United States was in for a period of good times; and prices of securities rose accordingly.

We have called attention to the fact that Real Estate STILL REMAINS AT ITS LOWEST EBB.

WHAT HAS BEEN THE RESULT?

The 65 lots between 153d and 156th Streets and Mott Avenue, three blocks north of 149th Street and Mott Avenue subway station, opposite Franz Sigel Park—only a very few people have seen these lots up to date.

Northeast corner of 138th Street and Third Avenue, subway station corner, leased to one party net. Only two inquiries have been received and only two persons have examined the property to our knowledge.

438-440 West 57th Street. Five story and basement brick apartment house, on plot 50x100. Rental $5,490 per annum. We have had one inquiry about this property and no one has examined same to our knowledge.

402-404 Pearl Street, running through to 10 New Bowery. Rental $2,300 per annum. Six story loft building, two frontages. No one has inquired about it and no one has examined the property up to the present writing.

18 three story private dwellings, Harrison Street, Clinton Street and Tompkins Place, Brooklyn. To be sold separately. Rental ranging $420 to $500. We have received several inquiries and a number of people have examined these houses.

Northeast corner of Jay Street & Myrtle Avenue, known as 69-75 Myrtle Avenue and 327-333 Jay Street, Brooklyn. Yearly rental $4,700. No one has inquired about and no one has examined the property so far as we know.

258 and 260 Academy Street, Long Island City. 2 two story 2 family dwellings. These no one has examined and only one person has inquired about.

It has seemed impossible to arouse any interest in the sale of these properties.

The reason may be that they are so widely scattered that people have paid no attention to them.

BUT REAL ESTATE IN NEW YORK CITY MUST HAVE SOME VALUE.

THERE MUST BE SOME PRICE AT WHICH IT CAN BE SOLD.

THESE PROPERTIES ARE CERTAINLY DESIRABLE. The lots must be worth something; they can be improved at once and are well located, on Mott Avenue near a subway station. The other properties will make splendid investments if bought at the right prices.

WE THEREFORE ARE SINCERELY IN EARNEST IN SAYING THAT ANY ONE WHO HAS A LITTLE MONEY, WHO WILL TAKE THE TIME TO EXAMINE THE PROPERTIES AND TO COME TO THE AUCTION SALE, SHOULD BE ABLE TO BUY THE PROPERTIES AT A SMALL PERCENTAGE OF THEIR ACTUAL VALUE AND GET REAL BARGAINS, MAKE A GOOD INVESTMENT, AND, WHEN TIMES IMPROVE, MAKE A SPLENDID PROFIT.

DISSOLUTION NO GAIN TO TOBACCO USERS

Bureau of Corporations Shows That Prices Have Not Been Affected.

BUT PROFITS ARE SMALLER

Both for Trust Successors and Independents — Advertising Expenses Doubled.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The Supreme Court's dissolution of the Tobacco Trust has resulted in competition between the successor companies in most branches of the industry, but has not affected wholesale or retail prices, and in general such competition has reduced the profits of the other companies.

That is the conclusion of the old Bureau of Corporations, now merged with the Federal Trade Commission, in the third portion of its report on the tobacco industry submitted to President Wilson.

Extensive, and largely technical, the report deals with the prices, costs and profits of the seven companies into which the Federal courts divided the American Tobacco Company in 1911 after the celebrated dissolution decree.

The extent of competition among the seven companies is discussed in so far as the facts regarding prices, costs and profits and changes in volume and division of business tend to show it, but not with regard to other important factors, because the courts retained jurisdiction of the case, and the Department of Justice is making its own investigations into the manner in which the dissolution decree is being observed. It points out, however, that the seven companies thus created were, in their respective branches, much larger than any companies not connected with the "combination."

"For particular brands," says the report, "neither the prices to jobbers nor to consumers show important changes following the dissolution of the combination. Such competition as has developed among the successor companies did not result in price-cutting."

Costs of manufacture since the dissolution were found distinctly higher because of duplication of effort, and chiefly because of advertising. Where the advertising bill for the big combination was about $11,000,000 in 1911, the seven successor companies spent more than $23,500,000 in 1913. While there was an increase in the volume of business, the ratio of advertising expense to sales doubled between 1910 and 1913. The aggregate profits of the successor companies in 1913 were $29,785,958, or about $1,230,000 less than the profits of the combination in 1910, on the basis of an investment of approximately $250,000,000.

"In view of such a high rate of profit," says the report, "the question naturally arises: Why has there been no competition in prices? The answer to this question is partly found in the peculiar price-making conditions in the tobacco trade." Sizes of tobacco packages, the report points out, are affected by law, and it suggests that price competition might be facilitated by amending the law to establish a larger number of sizes of tobacco packages with smaller difference between them, or providing that all kinds of tobacco may be packed and stamped in wholesale quantities.

Of the so-called independent companies, operating apart from the seven successors to the trust, the report says few of them have shown increased prosperity since the dissolution.

"Compared with either the combination of the successor companies," it says, "they have, on the whole, made an exceedingly poor showing of profits, and since the dissolution this has been especially marked in navy plug and Turkish cigarettes. On the other hand, in long cut smoking they have done much better since the dissolution. In scrap tobacco alone their profits have been greater than the combination or successor companies. One of the principal causes of this unfavorable profit showing of smaller companies has been a much higher ratio of manufacturing costs to sales. The chief explanation is apparently found in their small scale operations and less efficient organization. The smaller companies have been at a marked disadvantage with respect to the cost of distribution."

The decreasing rate of profit of the independents is ascribed to increases in selling and advertising costs since the dissolution. The general conclusions of the investigation are thus stated in the bureau's report:

"In conclusion it may be stated that the study of prices, costs, and profits in the tobacco industry, without taking into consideration other factors in the competitive situation, indicates that the decree of dissolution has resulted in the successor companies competing with each other for business in most branches of the industry, but has not affected wholesale or retail prices. The successor companies have also competed with the smaller tobacco concerns and, collectively, have won business from them in some branches and lost to them in others. As a consequence of competition the rate of profit of the successor companies has been reduced, although their rate of profit is still high. In general this competition has seriously reduced the profits of the other companies.

"This reduction in profits has not been caused by increased cost of manufacture, but by increased expenses of distribution, and principally by the increase in expenditures for advertising. As the sale of tobacco products depends largely on the advertisement of brands competition in the tobacco business necessarily increases advertising expenditure. In other words, for tobacco products, and it may be true also for other brand articles, the special cost of the system of competition is largely found in extraordinary advertising expense, and this would seem to be inevitable for brand articles so long as they have a proprietary character."

LAY Y.M.C.A. CORNERSTONE.

The cornerstone for the new $450,000 Union Branch of the Y. M. C. A., in Washington Avenue, from West 160st to West 161st Street, the Bronx, was laid yesterday in the presence of 5,000 persons. After an invocation by the Rev. Dr. Maitland Bartlett and the singing of "How Firm a Foundation" by the combined choirs of several neighboring churches, B. A. Hoover, Secretary of the Union Branch, deposited a box containing records in the cornerstone.

Roderick Stephens, Chairman of the Building Committee, then presented to George W. Perkins, Chairman of the joint campaign committee that raised funds for the erection of the building, a silver trowel. Mr. Perkins leveled the 1,000 pound cornerstone while the choirs sang Handel's "Hallelujah" chorus. A prayer by the Rev. Dr. W. B. Stephens closed the exercises.

The new building will have 1,250,000 square feet of floor surface, two gymnasiums, the largest swimming pool in New York, and will accommodate 3,500 members. It will have dormitories for 364 members.

Find Girl Who Lost Finger.

After a search of many hours the police of the Ralph Avenue Station yesterday identified Elizabeth Brown, 10 years old, of 387 Sumpter Street, as the child whose finger was torn from its socket by a picket on the fence surrounding the Evergreen Cemetery. The finger was found impaled on the picket Saturday night, at Bushwick Avenue and the Highland Boulevard. Early today the police found that the child had been hurried to the Bradford Street Hospital by a passing motorist. The girl was climbing over the fence when a ring on the finger caught on the picket and the finger was torn from her hand.

"LUSITANIA" ON EVERY LIP

50,000 BOARD THE SHIPS

Not Enough Boats to Carry Citizens, Who Spent $25,000 to Inspect Backbone of Nation's Defense.

More than 1,000,000 persons viewed the Atlantic fleet as it rode at anchor in the Hudson, north of Seventy-ninth Street, yesterday.

The police estimated last night that the crowds were the largest that had ever journeyed to Riverside Drive or the river shore to witness a naval mobilization.

It was not what might be termed a joyous or picnicky throng which came to see the third mobiliaztion here of a great section of the American navy, but one in which the great majority seemed to take the view that the occasion was a serious rather than a festive one.

The word most uttered by the scores of thousands who jammed Riverside Drive from Seventy-ninth Street, on over the viaduct clear to Fort Washington Point, was "Lusitania," and the principal topic was the grave situation that confronted the American Government as a result of the destruction of that great liner and the loss of more than 100 American lives.

Everybody seemed to realize that, in case the United States were called upon to assert its rights, the Atlantic Fleet would be the right arm of the Government, and there was much speculation as to how Uncle Sam's warships would acquit themselves in time of need. Needless to say, the consensus was that the big fighters and their men would show themselves worthy of the glorious traditions of the American Navy.

This occasion is quite different from that of three years ago when the fleet was reviewed by President Taft. Then the mobilization was just a great, big, wonderful show, but this time it comes when half of the world is at war, and at a moment when the country is horror-stricken as a result of the frightful marine disaster, a disaster due to war and not to an accident, as was the case of the Titanic.

The crowds gathered early and left late. They came in automobiles, buses, street cars, the Subway, the elevated, and on foot. There was not a moment from noon until near midnight when Riverside Drive, the river shore, and all other vantage points from which the ships at anchor could be seen were not black with closely packed humanity.

An artist who gazed shorewards from the deck of one of the dreadnoughts remarked that he believed it was the first time in the history of New York when it was possible to photograph more than a quarter of a million persons on the same plate.

Crowds Eager to Board Ships.

At the four main boat landings from which the launches and other passenger-carrying craft operated between the shore and fleet, police reserves were on duty every minute holding back the thousands who impatiently awaited a chance to pay their quarters and get to the ships and see at close range the fighting units of Admiral Fletcher's great command.

Each launch displayed a little pennant, on which appeared figures which indicated the maximum number of passengers that boat was permitted to carry. It was the duty of the police, the steamboat inspection men, and the naval shore guard to see that no boat carried more than the legal allotment.

A conservative estimate of the number of persons who actually went on board the various ships placed the total for the fifteen dreadnoughts and pre-dreadnoughts at about 50,000, and the only reason the number was not twice as great was because there were not enough boats to take them. As it cost 50 cents to make the round trip, $25,000 was spent for the privilege of boarding the big fighters. The excursion steamers which encircled the battleship column carried, it was estimated, at least 100,000 sightseeers during the afternoon.

On board the ships the visitors were welcomed by officers and men, and everything possible was done to make their stay pleasant, as well as instructive. Officers, petty officers, bluejackets and marines constituted themselves into a great committee to show the people over the ships, or "their ships," as one of the officers of the fleet flagship put it.

On the bulletin boards of the ships was an official order, one paragraph of which read:

"Admiral Fletcher desires that as large a number of visitors as practicable be received on board each ship, and that the visitors be shown about the ships, subject to the usual regulations, and that they be given every courtesy."

The fleet flagship Wyoming, from which fluttered the four-starred pennant of Admiral Fletcher, shared with the new super-dreadnoughts New York and Texas the honor of being the most popular of all the battle line ships. All afternoon these great fighters had capacity loads of visitors to entertain. The people came aboard in a never-ending stream and all among them were given every opportunity to see everything that was interesting, from the ship's mascot to the big guns in the main batteries. They were permitted to roam at will over the decks, to take a view of the ships to the north and the great throng ashore from the bridge, to go below and admire the wonderful silver services, and to ask all the questions they could think of and be certain of getting courteous answers.

Fletcher Cynosure of All Eyes.

Admiral Fletcher was much on the deck during the afternoon and was impressed by the orderliness of the crowd. To the people the Admiral was of as much interest as the ship itself. Everybody realized that he commanded the greatest fighting organization in the country, and they also knew that in the event of a national crisis he would be, next to the President, the man in whom the hopes of the country would be centred.

On all the other ships the crowds received the same warm, genuine welcome accorded them on the Wyoming. The people were permitted to do very much as they pleased, about the only place closed to them being the living quarters of the officers, the magazines, the insides of the turrets, and the engine rooms. They talked navy with the officers and men, played with the animal mascots, and some of the girls even smiled at the bluejackets, and in every instance the bluejacket smiled back.

An amusing incident happened aboard the Wyoming. A man who refused to give his name came on board, leading a goat. It was of the male variety, and had only one horn where two ought to be. Lieutenant Blankenship was officer of the deck as the man and his goat came aboard. A bluejacket hurried up to Blankenship and saluted.

"Here's a fellow with a goat, Sir," said the bluejacket, "and he seems a bit under the weather, Sir."

"Which one, the man or the goat?" asked Lieutenant Blankenship.

"Both, Sir," replied the bluejacket.

"Send them ashore in the next boat; the Wyoming has all the mascots she needs," ordered the Lieutenant.

At this moment the goat and its owner appeared before Lieutenant Blankenship.

"Pardon me, my dear Sir," said the man, as "Billy" tugged at the rope, "but I was told you wanted a mascot, and as goats is good sailors, I brought you a goat. He's yours for the asking."

Lieutenant Blankenship assured the visitor that the goat was not desired, and a few minutes later, with the assistance of several bluejackets, the goat was forced down the gangplank into a boat and taken ashore.

"One-horned goats always were lucky; and I wish we'd kept that one," said a "jackie," as the boat with the goat disappeared in the direction of the Eightieth Street landing.

At the Ninety-sixth Street landing, from which operated the boats that plied to the Utah and the other ships of the second division; at 126th Street, where the boats for the third division were in service, and at all other landings up to Fort Washington Point, similar scenes to those at Seventy-ninth Street were repeated. Boats were coming and going all the time, and there was not a trip when every boat did not have on board the full number of passengers allowed.

Rush to See the Submarines.

Ten submarines hugged the shore at 137th Street and 138th Street, while in between them, like a hen looking out for her chicks, was berthed the submarine mother boat, the monitor Tonopah.

Here occurred the biggest jam of the day, and it was a jam that never diminished. On the dock people swarmed like bees, and it took twelve policemen, reinforced by twice as many bluejackets and marines, to hold the crowd in check. No visitors were permitted aboard the submarines, and in the conning towers of each of the little under-water fighters were four bluejackets with others to see to it that the curious did not come aboard.

On the Viaduct above the submarine anchorage the people were packed like sardines, and all eyes were focussed on the submersibles moored below. A never-ending stream of people was passing up and down the stones stairway leading from the Viaduct to the street below at 136th Street, while other thousands came down the side streets from Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, passing under the arch of the Viaduct.

One of the officers of the Tonopah was asked how many visitors the submarines had drawn up to 5 o'clock, and he laughingly replied, "About a million."

While the visitors were barred from the submarines, they were welcomed aboard the Tonopah, and it took all the policemen and all the bluejackets to prevent everybody from trying to get aboard at the same time.

It was interesting to listen to the talk of those who watched the submarines from the Viaduct or from the pier below. They all wanted to know, it seemed, if any of the submarines were like those that sent the Lusitania to the bottom, whether or not they could run under their own power from New York to Germany, r whether they were to be compared to the German craft that are doing such frightful destruction on the other side of the Atlantic. Here again the war talk came in now and then, as the fate of the Lusitania and her passengers was referred to. It is safe to say that the submarines alone drew more than 200,000 to the Viaduct yesterday afternoon.

While the crowds were watching the E, D, and K boats the submarine G-2 arrived from Charleston, S. C., after a voyage all of which was made under her own power.

6,500 Sailors Get Shore Leave.

Six thousand five hundred men from the fleet had shore leave yesterday. Hundreds had gone ashore as soon as the boats dropped anchor on Saturday. Many of these scattered themselves about town on flying visits to friends and relatives, and 700 or more took up temporary headquarters at the naval branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, near the Sands Street gate of the Navy Yard in Brooklyn.

The shore leaves permitted the sailors varied in length from twenty-four hours to five days. While some of the men, who have no associations in this part of the country, were content to take short sightseeing trips through the city and then return to their vessels, the great majority were glad to take advantage of their full time and get as far away from the waterfront as possible.

The vacations now being enjoyed by the sailors are the first long periods off duty they have had this year. Some of them had short furloughs at Hampton Roads. None of them have been more than a few hours on land at any time for months.

Interest among the crews of the Wyoming and the Utah is centered in the forthcoming twenty-four-oared race to be rowed next Monday night among the crews from the various ships. At present the crew of the Utah holds the Battenburg Cup, a trophy presented to the United States Navy by Prince Louis of Battenburg, on the occasion of his last visit to America. At Guantanamo last December, while the fleet was engaged in Winter exercises, a picked crew from the Utah and the Wyoming organized a race, and more than $8,000 was wagered by the crews of the several ships on the result. A misstart was declared by the officer of the course, and Coxswain Beach of the Utah would not allow his crew to start again. Circumstances intervened so that the delayed race was never staged, and the oarsmen of each ship are anxious to try conclusions during the holiday in the Hudson. The race will be a feature of the program, and will likely be rowed under the glare of the searchlights.

Girl Waves Too Hard; Canoe Upsets.

Frank Smith, 24 years old, of 57 West Thirty-seventh Street, and his sister were thrown into the river yesterday afternoon, when a canoe in which they were seated capsized off West 157th Street. Both wore bathing suits. Their other clothing, money, and jewelry, in a valise in the boat, were lost. The two were rescued by boatmen. While circling the fleet the young woman became very enthusiastic, and in waving to those on board the warships capsized the boat.

William Bowler, a bluejacket on the New Hampshire, jumped into the river at the foot of 148th Street in the afternoon, and rescued a girl who had fallen into the water from a rowboat near the Amsterdam Motorboat Club landing.

The battle line ships of the fleet were again illuminated last night, and the gorgeous picture, which drew so huge a crowd Saturday night, was again the attraction that drew even more persons last night. The illumination will be repeated on Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights.

Only three arrests were made yesterday, and they were all disorderly conduct cases. Two men, charged with riding on the top of a freight train in order to get a better view of the fleet, were fined in the Night Court.

Nearly 85,000 persons were carried yesterday by the Fifth Avenue buses. This constitutes a record for bus travel in New York City, although Saturday, with its showing of 81,000, was not far behind. The company's big garage on 102d Street, east of Fifth Avenue, was swept bare of equipment, as every bus owned was in service. The presence of the fleet was the chief reason for the heavy traffic. Travel, however, has been unusually heavy this Spring on all the company's routes, April being the best month in the company's history.

CITY BREVITIES.

Thirteen-year-old Henry Hills of 1,625 Avenue A backed off the dock at the foot of East Ninety-third Street yesterday while trying to catch a ball, and it was all three Dock Department employes could do to rescue him, one of the trio, Edward Kerwin, being taken from the river exhausted.

The Association for Promoting Public Hygiene and Public Baths will open a three-day session in the City Hall tomorrow at 10 A. M. Borough President Marks will welcome the delegates.

EXPOUNDS JAPAN'S 'CHINA DOCTRINE'

Professor Asakawa of Yale Likens It to Our Own Monroe Doctrine.

WANTS EASTERN STABILITY

Seeks to Safeguard China from the Encroachments of Occidental Powers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 9.—An exposition of the general purpose of Japan in her negotiations with China was given out today by Kan Ichi Asakawa, assistant professor of the Japanese Civilization at Yale.

While not discussing the actual demands made by Japan, the professor contended that her whole policy was dictated by a desire to correct present conditions of instability in China, due largely to the latter country's unwise policy of granting foreign concessions and to establishing in the Far East such a community of interests as that aimed at by the United States in its relations with the other American republics. He said in part:

"The urgent need of the Far East is to adjust the relations between the chief members of its community, Japan and China, upon the fundamental principle of their common interest and common growth; on the basis of this Chinese-Japanese adjustment, to lay a secure foundation for a gradual liberation of East Asia from the bondage of various kinds that the West has imposed upon it in the last three-quarters of a century, and in making East Asia thereby an independent and self-respecting community of civilized nations, to aim ultimately at a more normal competition and co-operation than has been possible between the Orient and the Occident.

China Not Fully Independent.

"Let us, in the first place, look at the exact situation in China squarely in the face. It is a deplorable fact that China is not a fully independent and sovereign State like the United States or France, or even Mexico. China's sovereignty is seriously compromised and encroached upon by several modifications that have been imposed upon it in the course of the past three-quarters of a century. Among these modifying factors, each one of which has an intricate history of its own, may be mentioned the foreign settlements, the ceded and leased territories, the presence of foreign troops, the extra-territorial jurisdictions of foreign powers, the railway, mining, and other concessions, the financial administration of the customs and the salt gabelle, and the conditions regarding certain foreign loans of a political nature. It would be a herculean task for any nation to shake off so many and odious shackles.

"The present encroachments upon the sovereignty of China are the scars that her past troubles have left on her body, and, what is more important, some of them may, when opportunities should come, invite fresh troubles, inflicting more serious wounds. In other words, these conditions are indicative of the presence in East Asia of a perpetual source of instability. It is idle to imagine that things may go on indefinitely as they have been going on, that is, troubles arising from time to time and adjustments being made at the increasing expense of Chinese sovereignty. A little imagination will show that the peace of the Far East is hanging in the balance—that there is a continuous potentiality that the balance may be upset, crippling China and leaving the solitary Japan to her fate.

"Entirely aside from the question of the wisdom or the justice of the specific continental designs of Japan, what human power could arrest the increasing need of her economic expansion abroad, and what would be more natural than a consequent clash of this desire of Japan with the newly kindled nationalistic enthusiasm of China? It is a vital necessity for Japan, if she would not be stifled, to reach out for a market and for a field for economic penetration in China, and it is China's great duty to herself to prevent further eclipse of her sovereignty. If Japan, in her expansion movement, sought only to develop her interest at the expense of China, and if China gave herself up to an ill-considered policy of nationalism, and tried to carry it out by her accustomed methods of subterfuge, obduracy, and playing of other powers against Japan, the potential clash might explode as a serious conflict. Under these circumstances would not the only possible solution of this momentous problem be for the two nations to find means of mutual interest and insure their common development? Thus alone might be a conflict averted and the potential clash be turned into a mutual stimulation and wholesome rivalry.

Open Door Policy Inadequate.

"There are two generally recognized principles that guide the relations of the powers with China; namely, the open door in China, and her integrity. Much of the current discussion in the press about the Japanese-Chinese negotiations is supposedly based upon these two principles, whatever the popular understanding of them, and the attitude of the American Government is considered to be ruled by the same principles.

"The open door principle can never repair whatever evils are being wrought upon China by some of her past concessions, nor guarantee a just consideration of her own interest and of the growth of the common interest of the East Asiatic community. * * * As for the principle of the integrity of China, its inadequate justice lies not in the principle itself, but in some of the current conceptions of it. China's integrity is at present, as we have seen, more crippled administratively than territorially, and I imagine after the end of the European war China will have reason to fear a renewed attempt on the part of certain powers to make important encroachments upon her administrative entity. I believe that it is high time for the East Asiatic community to effect an arrangement to forestall such an eventuality.

"It is true that, just as the United States, beginning with the thirteen colonies, has expanded its territory, sometimes at the expense of others, so Japan has taken Formosa from China; just as the United States has secured a lease of the Canal Zone at Panama for an indefinite term, so has Japan a shorter lease of Kwantung and of the railway zone in South Manchuria; and just as the United States holds the Monroe Doctrine over a large part of the American Continent, so does Japan a promise from China not to give away to any power any part of Fukien, and seeks to make similar arrangements regarding Shantung, South Manchuria, and Inner Mongolia, and the entire coast line of China proper. These parallels are drawn, not in order to justify the expansion of Japan and America, but in order to point out the patent fact that Japan's hands are not clean from territorial aggrandizement upon the neighboring country, though much lesser in extent than is the case with America. I go further and suggest that the superior strength of Japan and America, respectively, has served as an immense security, invisible as it is, against willful aggressions of remoter powers upon neighboring lands. From an impartial standpoint I submit that the negative debts that China owes to Japan and England are fairly comparable with those which the Central and South American countries do the United States.

"Time has now come when, with the consent of her allies, and with a view of safeguarding the separate and the common interest of the two Eastern nations against the ill-will of her militant enemy, Japan was enabled at length to approach China for an exhaustive arrangement regarding the more important outstanding issues between the two countries that had troubled them since the war with Russia, all the new problems that the swiftly changed condition of the past few months had brought to a head, and all the fresh perils that would be certain to be inflicted upon China after the war if no provision were made to forestall them. In other words if one were the Premier of Japan and were to take this unequaled opportunity to act upon the principles I have enunciated, he would frame his demands upon China so as to achieve, at least, the following objects:

"First, to provide as far as possible against the demands that certain powers and some other rival powers might be expected to make upon China after the war that would place her in an even worse predicament and endanger the security of the Far East still further than at present.

"Second, to neutralize as far as possible the evils arising from the present abnormal political and economic status of China.

"Third, without infringing upon the vested interest of other nations, and restricting within the scope of the generally accepted definition of the open door, to secure in China such commercial and industrial concessions as would promote the common economic life of Japan and China by the opening of new ports, by settlement, by the investment of capital, and by facilities afforded for the exchange of raw material and manufactured goods, and thereby aid the world's commerce with the East in general and China in particular, besides insuring Japan's own growth.

"Fourth, within a certain period, till China should be sufficiently developed and reorganized to be able to throw off the restrictions of her sovereignty that have been imposed upon her by the West and to become a really sovereign power, for Japan to render China an effective political and military support and, in concert with certain other powers, to give China a substantial aid in purging her system of corruption and in reorganizing her institutions on an efficient basis."

FEAR POTATO FAMINE.

Germans Fed Them to Cattle, Now Are Running Short Themselves.

"Under the caption, "Where Is This to End?" the Vorwärts, the central organ of the Social Democratic Party in Germany, in its issue of April 17, received here, declares that there is now a danger of a shortage in the potato supply as well as the read supply, through faulty legislation of the Bundesrat, or Federal Council. The paper insists that the council, in regulating the sale of potatoes in Germany, left a wide loophole of wastage by permitting farmers to use potatoes for feeding cattle in so far as necessary for the continuation of their business.

To bring out the resultant danger to the German population, the paper quotes the Director of the new Statistical Office of Schöneberg, Dr. Kuckinsky, who said in the Vossische Zeitung:

"If this order of the Federal Council remains as at present, we shall have even in May, in addition to a shortage of bread, a shortage of potaroes. Our last potatoe harvest after the deduction of seed poatoes, amounted to 39,000,000 tons, that is to say, about three times as much as is used for human consumption in times of peace. Today we have at most only 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 tons left."

Three Injured in Mineola.

MINEOLA, L. I., May 9.—An automobile containing four women and driven by Henry Paulson of Rockville Centre crashed into a tree on the turnpike early today and was wrecked. Mrs. Margaret Rahm of 148 Huron Street, Brooklyn, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. T. J. Rahm of Rockville Centre, were seriously injured. They were removed to the Nassau Hospital.

Michael Kelsky, proprietor of the Atlantic Garage at Manson, L. I., while riding in his car on the Jerico Road today, was run down by a large touring car and seriously injured. He was removed to the Nassau Hospital, where it is said that he had sustained internal injuries.

Skull Fractured in Tire Accident.

AMITYVILLE, L. I., May 9.—After warning men at a garage on the South Country Road here today that a rim on the wheel of his automobile was defective and might fly off, Earl Fisher, 30 years of age, of Rockville Centre, knelt down on the road beside the wheel and was engaged in pumping air into the tire, when the tire exploded and the rim flew off, striking him in the head, causing an injury which may prove fatal. He is in the South Side Hospital at Babylon, suffering from a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. Fisher is the son-in-law of A. N. De Mott, a wealthy real estate operator of Rockville Centre.

Boy Near Death from Auto Injury.

Louis Talzano, 8 years old, of 2,375 Arthur Avenue, the Bronx, was knocked down yesterday by an automobile owned and operated by Albert H. Bullard of 547 West 157th Street at 189th Street and Cambreling Avenue. The boy was taken in the automobile to Fordham Hospital in a dangerous condition, suffering from concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

IN NEW JERSEY.

JERSEY CITY—Frederick Mahler, 47 years old, of Nyack, N. Y., an Erie conductor, died in St. Francis Hospital yesterday from injuries received in the Bergen yards last Saturday when he was struck by a train.

NEWARK—Michael Delaney, 30, of Holliday Street, Jersey City, Edward Vesey, 21, of 8 Brill Street, and Thomas Fox, 33, of 562 Hunterdon Street, were stabbed yesterdoay by a supposed lunatic who escaped. They are in the City Hospital.

HACKENSACK—Daniel Tillman of 101 East Twenty-seventh Street, Paterson, entered the barn of Victor Dandermoor yesterday and was hitching one of the latter's horses to a buggy when Dandermoor stopped him with a shotgun. Tillman was arrested.

HACKENSACK—Isaac Davidson, 57, a farmer of Allendale, was committed to the Hackensack jail yesterday charged with attempting to shoot his aunt, Mis Jane Wilson, and his sister, Mrs. Ada Shuart, with whom he has lived for many years.

BABY HIT BY MOTOR CYCLE

Robert Hermann, 32 years old, living in 1,851 Seventh Avenue and a member of a leather goods firm in 494-436 Broadway, with members of his family and several friends, met with an automobile accident on the Queens Boulevard near Greenpoint Avenue, Long Island City, shortly after noon yesterday, in which Hermann, his daughter, Clarice Hermann, 6 years old, and two of his friends, Mrs. Mary Joseph, 50 years old, and Mrs. Carrie Steiner, 47 years old, both of 149 West 120th Street, were severely injured.

Hermann was driving the car, returning to Manhattan. The boulevard was crowded with cars, the majority of which were bound in the opposite direction for a trip through Long Island. In keeping clear of the outgoing procession of automobiles, Hermann told the police, he hugged the side of the road, when a big touring car going east dashed by and, striking his machine a glancing blow, caused it to overturn on the slanting side of the road.

As the machine turned over the occupants were partly thrown out and partly caught by the car. Other motorists went to their assistance, and an ambulance surgeon from St. John's Hospital had the injured taken into a nearby hotel, where their injuries were dressed. Hermann and his daughter were cut about the face and head, Mrs. Joseph had her right thigh injured and Mrs. Steiner had an injury to the left leg and knee. After having their injuries dressed they refused to go to the hospital and were sent to their homes.

WOMAN HURT SAVING BABY.

Run Down as She Pushed Perambulator from Auto's Path.

Mrs. Esther Dinzirah, of 75 East 110th Street, was wheeling her baby across Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon at 102d Street, when a motor car owned and driven by David Heimberger, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., came down suddenly upon her. Mrs. Dinzirah shoved the baby carriage out of the way of the car, and in doing so came directly in front of it. She was knocked down and thrown to one side. Heimberger picked her up and carried her to Mt. Sinai Hospital. She was badly bruised in the face.

Thomas Poland, of 243 East 104th Street, walking with his 3-year-old son John up Third Avenue, was run into at 116th Street by a motor cyclist, John Telesco, of 330 East 113th Street. Boland was uninjured, but the baby was upset and cut and bruised around the body. He was taken to Harlem Hospital.

David Swedowsky, of 1,645 Madison Avenue, who was riding a motor cycle, collided at Fifth Avenue and 106th Street with a motor car driven by Donald Flick, of 304 West 139th Street. Flick picked him up and took him to Mt. Sinai Hospital, where it was found that his left knee was broken.

Mrs. Harriet Getter, of 377 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when she jumped from an automobile in which she was riding with her husband, in the Central Drive, Central Park, when the motor collided with an automobile owned by Marcus Durang, of 232 West Forty-first Street. She was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain.

Three children were hurt when a swift motor cycle ran down a party out for a Sunday stroll at Seventy-second Street and Park Avenue, yesterday afternoon. They were John Shelley, 10 years old, of 1,273 Third Avenue, contusions of left leg; John Savage, 8 years old, of 1,252 Third Avenue, fractured right leg, and Beatrice Telesca, 16 years old, of 434 West Forty-sixth Street, contusions of left leg. The motor cycle, the police say, was owned and driven by Joseph Sandera of 362 East Seventy-second Street. A passing automobile, owned by Henry W. Bauman of 39 West Sixtieth Street, took the injured children to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Newark Girl Killed by Touring Car.

While on her way to get some ice cream, Dorothy McKeon, 6 years old, of 37 West Kinney Street, Newark, was run down by a touring car yesterday afternoon at Halsey and West Kinney Streets, Newark, and was so badly injured that she died within an hour after being admitted to St. Barnabas's Hospital. The machine was owned and driven by John H. Scheffling, 60 years old, of 329 Bergen Avenue, Jersey City. He was arrested by Lieutenant McNeil and locked up at the First Precinct Station on a technical charge of manslaughter. The child is said to have walked directly in front of the machine, according to the police.

Girl's Palate Split in Auto Accident.

As Bertha Eisner, 3 years old, of 12 Park Avenue, Rockaway Beach, and Dorothy Ferril, 4 years old, of 629 Boulevard, Rockaway Beach, were crossing Park Avenue together, Bertha jumped back in time to escape an automobile, but Dorothy was struck and thrown against the sidewalk. Thomas Vitale, the chauffeur, who was driving a car owned by Benjamin Lechtman of 469 Boulevard, stopped and took the injured girl to the Rockaway Beach Hospital, where she was found to be in a serious condition from concussion of the brain, a split palate, and possible internal injuries.

Motor Ambulance Hits Elevated.

Dr. D. H. Reeves of St. John's Hospital in Long Island City was badly cut and bruised when the big motor ambulance driven by Chauffeur Thomas, in responding to a call from Astoria, yesterday morning, collided with one of the pillars of the new elevated road at Second Avenue and Elm Street. Both the doctor and chauffeur managed to keep their seats, but they were thrown with considerable force against the front of the machine. The automobile was still in running order, and they continued to the Grand Avenue Police Station, where they got Mrs. Marion K. Young, 56 years old, of 289 Van Pelt Street, Astoria, who was found wandering the streets, demented.

Deaf Woman Struck by Auto.

Mrs. Thomas Driscoll, 34 years old, of 3,108 Third Avenue, a deaf-mute, was knocked down yesterday by an automobile operated by Anthony Gaose of 2,453 Third Avenue, while crossing the street in front of 814 Brook Avenue, the Bronx. According to the chauffeur he sounded his horn. Mrs. Driscoll was taken to Lebanon Hospital in the car, and after being attended for minor injuries was taken to her home.

Willie Hoppe's Car in Collision.

In a collision between two automobiles yesterday morning Willie Hoppe, the billiard player, and his wife were shaken up, but otherwise uninjured. At the time Hoppe was returning to his home at 601 West 160th Street, going north in St. Nicholas Avenue, when an automobile owned by August Diener of 1,405 Westchester Avenue, the Bronx, going west in 145th Street, collided with the Hoppe machine. Both cars were slightly damaged.

WAR SENTIMENT OPPOSED

Telegrams Continue to Pour In, but Vast Majority, It Is Said, Advise Against Resort to Force.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Through its Ambassador in Washington, the German Government today officially expressed to the United States "deep regret that the events of the war had led to the loss of so many American lives," but this action has not relieved the tension here, nor has it appeared to modify the impression, which is gradually becoming a conviction, that the issue presented in the Lusitania horror must be met by this Government in a positive way.

But no word is forthcoming from the White House, which has assumed the exclusive handling of the problem, as to what course will be pursued to show the indignation felt over the destruction of the Lusitania, and with it the sacrifice of the lives of American men, women, and children. There is reason to believe, however, that the demands that this Government is expected to make will give Germany the opportunity of adjusting the matter on a basis that will avert war.

The seclusion of President Wilson, which was begun on Friday afternoon when he received news of the loss of the Lusitania, was continued today up to the time he left for Philadelphia to deliver an address tonight to newly enfranchised foreign-born citizens. In the more than three days since he learned of the sinking of the great Cunarder the President has seen no member of his Cabinet except his son-in-law, the Secretary of the Treasury, who dined at the White House last night, and it is said that there was no conversation between the President and Mr. McAdoo on the relations of Germany and the United States.

Sees No Visitors.

Today the President shut himself in his study and would see no one, not even Senator Stone, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, who called at the executive offices. Senator Stone had a long talk with Secretary Tumulty, the only official who has been in touch with the President since the sinking of the Lusitania, and afterward reiterated the significant opinion that Congress would not be called in extra session.

It has become a matter of comment here that the President has cut himself off from all intercourse with his Secretary of State at this trying period, when the international relations of the country are in such a perilous condition. No word of advice has been sought from Secretary Bryan. It is the general impression here that he is as ignorant as the rest of the American people as to what opinion the President has formed of the killing of Americans in the destruction of the Lusitania, and as to what explicit measures the President regards as necessary to meet the grave question that confronts the Government. Naturally this situation has brought various suggestions offered in explanation of the President's failure to consult Mr. Bryan.

President in Supreme Control.

Of these suggestions that which has gained the most currency is that the President wishes to demonstrate to the country that he is in supreme and sole charge of the conduct of the foreign relations of the Government, and that he is not being influenced in any way by what Mr. Bryan may have to propose. Those who argue along this line contend that Mr. Bryan is unpopular throughout the country on account of a belief that he has no real foreign policy, and that the people have no confidence that he would do the thing most needed to uphold the national dignity in a situation such as now confronts the Administration. And the argument is capped with the prediction that if the country should become involved in war Mr. Bryan would have to quit the Cabinet. Nothing has come from the White House to give credence to a suggestion of this character. What President Wilson thinks in this connection is a profound secret, and, judged from all that can be learned, a secret that is shared by nobody.

Sentiment Against War.

Nothing beyond the fact that the President has not seen Mr. Bryan since the Lusitania disaster is known to indicate that Mr. Wilson believes it a wise course to get his bearings in this situation without Mr. Bryan's assistance.

Cautious remarks of some officials make it appear that they are certain that the President will not call an extra session of Congress. Although it seems inconsistent with the statement that the President has not communicated with anybody on the subject of the Lusitania, there is some reason for the belief that a hint has come from the White House that Mr. Wilson does not regard it as wise to bring Congress to Washington to discuss the situation. This circumstance is significant when taken in connection with the fact that the senders of a great majority of the flood of telegrams that has descended on the White House since the liner was sunk deprecate the idea that the response to Germany should be a declaration of war or radical action that would make war certain.

THE TIMES correspondent was told that 99 per cent. of these messages were against war.

Great Flood of Telegrams.

The telegrams relating to the Lusitania disaster have been pouring into the White House telegraph room since Saturday morning. Some of them are from Senators and Representatives and Governors of States, but the vast majority are from private citizens, many of whose names are not familiar to the White House. Most of the Senators and Representatives, it was said today, expressed their complete confidence that the President would act in this crisis in a way to meet the approval of the country, and this sentiment is coupled in a majority of instances with an expression of the belief that the situation does not require a resort to hostilities.

Some of the telegrams condemned the utterances of Colonel Roosevelt concerning the torpedoing of the Lusitania. Many of those who thought it necessary to communicate their views to the President urged him to take a firm stand, but did not indicate what that stand should be. These telegrams come from every section of the country. An interesting feature of them is that practically all go beyond the ten-word limit of the minimum rate for telegrams.

One of the messages received by the President was a long telegram from Victor E. Mitchell, K. C., of Montreal, which was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES today. Mr. Mitchell appealed to the President to hand passports to Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, and declared that the publication of the German Embassy's advertisement, warning Americans not to take passage on ships of Germany's enemies, was an insult to the United States. No comment on Mr. Mitchell's views could be obtained at the White House today. In fact, throughout official circles there was a disposition to refrain from discussion of the possible course of the Government.

Through the Treasury Department Dudley Field Malone, the Collector of Customs for the Port of New York, has submitted to the State Department an official report concerning the allegation that the Lusitania was armed. Mr. Malone declares that the Lusitania was inspected before she sailed, and that she did not carry any battery. It is said that this report was asked for by Secretary Bryan, and it is supposed that he will send it to the White House.

Bernstorff Sees Bryan.

Count von Bernstorff visited Secretary Bryan today, and after he had gone Mr. Bryan issued this prepared statement:

"The German Ambassador called at the State Department and expressed his deep regret that the events of the war had led to the loss of so many American lives."

The Ambassador was greeted cordially and smilingly by Secretary Bryan, with whom he was closeted for about fifteen minutes.

The Lusitania case was discussed. When Mr. Bryan was asked late this afternoon whether the expression of regret came from the German Government or was merely the personal expression of the German Ambassador. He said he understood that it was personal with Count von Bernstorff. It had been explained earlier in the day by Count von Bernstorff, however, that in making the expression of regret he had acted under instructions from the Government at Berlin.

"I understood that it was merely his

Germany Sends Regret, and 'Sympathy', But Says the Blame Rests With England

BERLIN, (via London), May 10.—The following dispatch has been sent by the German Foreign Office to the German Embassy at Washington:

"Please communicate the following to the State Department: The German Government desires to express its deepest sympathy at the loss of lives on board the Lusitania. The responsibility rests, however, with the British Government, which, through its plan of starving the civilian population of Germany, has forced Germany to resort to retaliatory measures.

In spite of the German offer to stop the submarine war in case the starvation plan was given up, British merchant vessels are being generally armed with guns and have repeatedly tried to ram submarines, so that a previous search was impossible.

They cannot, therefore, be treated as ordinary merchant vessels. A recent declaration made to the British Parliament by the Parliamentary Secretary in answer to a question by Lord Charles Beresford said that at the present practically all British merchant vessels were armed and provided with hand grenades.

Besides, it has been openly admitted by the English press that the Lusitania on previous voyages repeatedly carried large quantities of war material. On the present voyage the Lusitania carried 5,400 cases of ammunition, while the rest of her cargo also consisted chiefly of contraband.

If England, after repeated official and unofficial warnings, considered herself able to declare that that boat ran no risk and thus light-heartedly assumed responsibility for the human life on board a steamer which, owing to its armament and cargo was liable to destruction, the German Government, in spite of its heartfelt sympathy for the loss of American lives, cannot but regret that Americans felt more inclined to trust to English promises rather than to pay attention to the warnings from the German side.

Kaiser and His Officers Guilty of Murder, Says Inquest Report On Loss of The Lusitania

KINSALE, Ireland, May 10.—The verdict, rendered here today by the coroner's jury, which investigated five deaths resulting from the torpedoing of the Lusitania, is as follows:

We find that the deceased met death from prolonged immersion and exhaustion in the sea eight miles south southeast of Old Head of Kinsale, Friday, May 7, 1915, owing to the sinking of the Lusitania by torpedoes fired by a German submarine.

We find that the appalling crime was committed contrary to international law and the conventions of all civilized nations.

We also charge the officers of said submarine and the Emperor and the Government of Germany, under whose orders they acted, with the crime of wholesale murder before the tribunal of the civilized world.

We desire to express sincere condolences and sympathy with the relatives of the deceased, the Cunard Company and the United States, many of whose citizens perished in this murderous attack on an unarmed liner.

Jury's Verdict Holds All Law Violated—Condoles with America on Loss of Lives.

KINSALE, Ireland, May 10.—The inquest which began here Saturday over five victims of the Lusitania was concluded today, and the Coroner's jury returned the following verdict:

We find that the deceased met death from prolonged immersion and exhaustion in the sea eight miles south-southwest of Old Head of Kinsale, Friday, May 7, 1915, owing to the sinking of the Lusitania by torpedoes fired by a German submarine.

We find that this appalling crime was committed contrary to international law and the conventions of all civilized nations.

We also charge the officers of said submarine and the Emperor and Government of Germany, under whose orders they acted, with the crime of wholesale murder before the tribunal of the civilized world.

We desire to express sincere condolences and sympathy with the relatives of the deceased, the Cunard Company, and the United States, many of whose citizens perished in this murderous attack on an unarmed liner.

A vital feature of the hearing was the testimony of Captain W. T. Turner of the lost steamship. Coroner Horga questioned him:

"You were aware threats had been made that the ship would be torpedoed?"

"We were," the Captain replied.

"Was she armed?"

"No, Sir."

"What precautions did you take?"

"We had all the boats swung when we came within the danger zone, between the passing of Fastnet and the time of the accident."

Can't Reveal Instructions.

The Coroner asked him whether he had received a message concerning the sinking of a ship off Kinsale by a submarine. Captain Turner replied that he had not.

"Did you receive any special instructions as to the voyage?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Are you at liberty to tell us what they were?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you carry them out?"

"Yes, to the best of my ability."

"Tell us in your own words what happened after passing Fastnet."

"The weather was clear," Captain Turner answered. "We were going at a speed of eighteen knots. I was on the port side and heard Second Officer Bestford call out:

"'There's a torpedo.'

Second Explosion Perhaps Internal.

"I saw on the other side and saw clearly the wake of a torpedo. Smoke and steam came up between the last two funnels. There was a slight shock. Immediately after the first explosion there was another report, but that may possibly have been internal.

"I at once gave the order to lower the boats down to the rails, and I directed that women and children should get into them. I also had all the bulkheads closed.

"Between the time of passing Fastnet, about 11 o'clock, and of the torpedoing I saw no sign whatever of any submarines. There was some haze along the Irish coast, and when we were near Fastnet I slowed down to fifteen knots. I was in wireless communication with shore all the way across."

Told Submarines Were About.

Captain Turner was asked whether he had received any messages in regard to the presence of submarines off the Irish coast. He replied in the affirmative. Questioned regarding the nature of the message, he replied:

"I respectfully refer you to the Admiralty for an answer."

"I also gave orders to stop the ship," Captain Turner continued, "but we could not stop. We found that the engines were out of commission. It was not safe to lower boats until the speed was off the vessel. As a matter of fact, there was a perceptible headway on her up to the time she went down.

"When she was struck, she listed to starboard. I stood on the bridge when she sank, and the Lusitania went down under me. She floated about eighteen minutes after the torpedo struck her. My watch stopped at 2:36. I was picked up from among the wreckage and afterward was brought aboard a trawler.

"No warship was convoying us. I saw no warship, and none was reported to me as having been seen. At the time I was picked up I noticed bodies floating on the surface, but saw no living persons."

Why He Slackened Speed.

"Eighteen knots was not the normal speed of the Lusitania, was it?"

"At ordinary times," answered Captain Turner, "she could make 25 knots, but in war times her speed was reduced to 21 knots. My reason for going 18 knots was that I wanted to arrive at Liverpool bar without stopping, and within two or three hours of high water."

"Was there a lookout kept for submarines, having regard to previous warnings?"

"Yes, we had double lookouts."

"Were you going a zigzag course at the moment the torpedoing took place?"

"No. It was bright weather and land was clearly visible."

"Was it possible for a submarine to approach without being seen?"

"Oh, yes; quite possible."

"Something has been said regarding the impossibility of launching the boats on the port side?"

"Yes," said Captain Turner, "owing to the listing of the ship."

"How many boats were launched safely?"

"I cannot say."

"Were any launched safely?"

"Yes, and one or two on the port side."

"Were your orders promptly carried out?"

"Yes."

"Was there any panic on board?"

"No, there was no panic at all. It was all most calm."

"How many persons were on board?"

"There were 1,500 passengers and about 600 crew."

Asked No Escort, Obeyed Orders.

By the foreman of the jury: "In the face of the warnings at New York that the Lusitania would be torpedoed did you make any application to the Admiralty for an escort?"

"No, I left that to them. It is their business, not mine. I simply had to carry out my orders to go, and I would do it again."

Captain Turner uttered the last words of this reply with great emphasis.

By the Coroner—I am very glad to hear you say so, Captain.

By a Juryman—Did you get a wireless to steer your vessel in a northern direction?

"No," replied Captain Turner.

"Was the course of the vessel altered after the torpedoes struck her?"

"I headed straight for land, but it was useless. Previous to this the water-tight bulkheads were closed. I suppose the explosion forced them open. I don't know the exact extent to which the Lusitania was damaged."

"There must have been serious damage done to the water-tight bulkheads?"

"There certainly was, without doubt."

"Were the passengers supplied with lifebelts?"

"Yes."

"Were any special orders given that morning that lifebelts be put on?"

"No."

No Warning by Submarine.

"Was any warning given before you were torpedoed?"

"None whatever. It was suddenly done and finished."

"If there had been a patrol boat about, might it have been of assistance?"

With regard to the threats against his ship Captain Turner said he saw nothing except what appeared in the New York papers the day before the Lusitania sailed. He had never heard the passengers talking about the threats, he said.

"Was a warning given to the lower decks after the ship had been struck?" Captain Turner was asked.

"All the passengers must have heard the explosion," Captain Turner replied.

Captain Turner, in answer to another question, said he received no report from the lookout before the torpedo struck the Lusitania.

NO NEED TO FIGHT, IF RIGHT

URGES SINGLE ALLEGIANCE

And Warns Against Loyalty That Does Not Put America First.

NO TIME TO FORM GROUPS

GREAT OVATION RECEIVED

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—President Wilson gave tonight to a gathering of 4,000 naturalized Americans, who were part of an immense crowd in Convention Hall, the first intimation of the course which the United States Government will probably pursue in the situation resulting from the loss of more than a hundred American lives on the British liner Lusitania.

He spoke by implication, but his would remain at peace it would seek to convince Germany of the injustice to all mankind of the tragedy of last Friday.

"America," said the President, "must have the consciousness that on all sides it touches elbows and touches heart with all the nations of mankind. The example of America must be a special example, and must be an example not merely of peace, because it will not fight, but because peace is a healing and elevating influence of the world, and strife is not.

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

These remarks precipitated a tumult of applause and patriotic enthusiasm, attended by a waving of thousands of small American flags. The President had made no direct reference to the Lusitania tragedy, but the audience did not hesitate to read the application of his statement.

Humanity First.

While it had not yet been determined, he said, exactly what steps would be taken by the United States in the present crisis, the idea uppermost in the President's mind was to show that whatever course was adopted—no matter how vigorous—it would have as its objective the good of humanity.

"I present to you—God bless him!—the President."

In giving the naturalized citizens a welcome and appealing to them for a single allegiance to the United States, the President presented the idea of the welding of foreign blood in the make-up of America and pointed out that the true goal of right American citizenship to be a loyalty, not to the country of one's birth, but to the land of one's adoption.

"While you bring," he said, "all countries with you, you come with a purpose of leaving all other countries behind you—bringing what is best of their spirit, but not looking over your shoulder or seeking to perpetuate what you leave in them.

"I would not certainly be one who would suggest that a man cease to love the place of his origin. It is one thing to love the place where you were born and it is another thing to dedicate yourself to the place where you go.

"ou can't be an American if you think of yourself in groups. America does not consist of groups. A man who considers himself as belonging to a national group is not yet an American.

"My advice to you is to think first not only of America, but to think first of humanity, and you do not love humanity if you see to divide humanity in jealous camps."

The President was constantly interrupted by spontaneous outbursts of applause. He spoke clearly and so quiet was his huge audience that he could be heard distinctly in all parts of the great hall.

One of the passages in his speech, which the crowd applauded most loudly, was this:

"The man who seeks to divide man from man, group from group, interest from interest in the United States, is striking at its very heart."

Feels His Spirit Renewed.

In his peroration the President aroused great enthusiasm when he said that he had felt that he ought not to be away from Washington, but after coming he found that the gathering had renewed his "spirit as an American."

"In Washington," he said, "men tell you so many things every day that are not so, and I like to come and stand in the presence of my fellow citizens and drink of the common fountain with them, feeling the sense of their support."

There was a tremendous ovation as the President closed his address.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Think Themselves Only Americans.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—The full text of President Wilson's speech tonight is as follows:

"It warms my heart that you should give me such a reception, but it is not of myself that I wish to think tonight, but of those who have just become citizens of the United States. This is the only country in the world which experiences this constant and repeated rebirth. Other countries depend upon the multiplication of their own native people. This country is constantly drinking strength out of new sources by the voluntary association with it of great bodies of strong men and forward looking women. And so by the gift of the free will of independent people it is constantly being renewed from generation to generation by the same process by which it was originally created. It is as if humanity had determined to see to it that this great nation, founded for the benefit of humanity, should not lack for the allegiance of the people of the world.

"You have just taken an oath of allegiance to the United States. Of allegiance to whom? Of allegiance to no one, unless it be God. Certainly not of allegiance to those who temporarily represent this great Government. You have taken an oath of allegiance to a great ideal, to a great body of principles, to a great hope of the human race. You have said, 'We are going to America,' not only to earn a living, not only to seek the things which it was more difficult to obtain where you were born, but to help forAard the great enterprises of the human spirit—to let men know that everywhere in the world there are men who will cross strange oceans and go where a speech is spoken which is alien to them, knowing that, whatever the speech, there is but one longing and utterance of the human heart, and that is for liberty and justice.

Looking Only Forward.

And while you bring all countries with you, you come with a purpose of leaving all other countries behind you—bringing what is best of their spirit, but not looking over your shoulders and seeking to perpetuate what you intended to leave in them. I certainly would not be one even to suggest that a man ceases to love the home of his girth and the nation of his origin—these things are very sacred and ought not to be put out of our hearts—but it is one thing to love the place where you were born and it is another thing to dedicate yourself to the place to which you go. You cannot dedicate yourself to America unless you become in every respect and with every purpose of your will thorough Americans. You cannot become thorough Americans if you think of yourselves in groups. American does not consist of groups. A man who thinks himself as belonging to a particular national group in America, has not yet become an American, and the man who goes among you to trade upon your nationality is no worthy son to live under the Stars and Stripes.

"My urgent advice to you be not only always to think first of America, but always, also, to think first of humanity. You do not love humanity if you seek to divide humanity into jealous camps. Humanity can be welded together only by love, by sympathy, by justice, not by jealousy and hatred. I am sorry for the man who seeks to make personal capital out of the passions of his fellow men. He has lost the touch and ideal of America, for America was created to unite mankind by those passions which lift and not by the passions which separate and debase.

Came Here for Ideals.

"We came to America, either ourselves or in persons of our ancestors, to better the ideals of men, to make them see finer things than they had seen before, to get rid of things that divide, and to make sure of the things that unite. It was but an historical accident no doubt that this great country was called the 'United States,' and yet I am very thankful that it has the word 'united' in its title; and the man who seeks to divide man from man, group from group, interest from interest, in the United States is striking at its very heart.

"It is a very interesting circumstance to me, in thinking of those of you who have just sworn allegiance to this great Government, that you were drawn across the ocean by some beckoning finger of hope, by some belief, by some vision of a new kind of justice, by some expectation of a better kind of life.

"No doubt you have been disappointed in some of us; some of us are very disappointing. No doubt you have found that justice in the United States seen only with a pure heart and a right purpose, as it does everywhere else in the world. No doubt what you found here didn't seem touched for you, after all, with the complete beauty of the ideal which you had conceived beforehand.

"But remember this, if we had grown at all poor in the ideal, you brought some of it with you. A man does not die out to seek the thing that is not in him. A man does not hope for the thing that he has not seen. And if some of us have forgotten what America believed in, you, at any rate, imported in your own hearts a renewal of the belief. That is the reason that I, for one, mak eyou welcome.

Realizing a Dream.

"If I have in any degree forgotten what America was intended for, I will thank God if you will remind me.

"I was born in America. You dreamed dreams of what America was to be, and I hope you brought the dreams with you. No man that does not see visions will ever realize any high hope or undertake any high enterprise.

"Just because you brought dreams with you, America is more likely to realize the dreams such as you brought. You are enriching us if you came expecting us to be better than w eare.

"See, my friends, what that means. It means that Americans must have a consciousness different from the consciousness of every other nation in the world. I am not saying this with even the slightest thought of criticism of other nations. You know how it is with a family. A family gets centered on itself if it is not careful and is less interested in the neighbors than it is in its own members.

"So a nation that is not constantly renewed out of new sources is apt to have the narrowness and prejudice of a family. Whereas, America must have this consciousness, that on all sides it touches elbows and touches hearts with all the nations of mankind.

Too Proud to Fight.

"The example of America must be a special example. The example of America must be the example not merely of peace because it will not fight, but of peace because peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world and strife is not.

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right.

"So, if you come into this great nation as you have come, voluntarily seeking something that we have to give, all that we have to give is this: We cannot exempt you from work. No man is exempt from work anywhere in the world. I sometimes think he is fortunate if he has to work only with his hands and not with his head. It is very easy to do what other people give you to do, but it is very difficult to give other people things to do. We cannot exempt you from work; we cannot exempt you from the strife and the heart-breaking burden of the struggle of the day—that is common to mankind everywhere. We cannot exempt you from the loads that you must carry; we can only make them light by the spirit in which they are carried. That is the spirit of hope, it is the spirit of liberty, it is the spirit of justice.

"When I was asked, therefore, by the Mayor and the committee that accompanied him to come up from Washington to meet this great company of newly admitted citizens I could not decline the invitation. I ought not to be away from Washington, and yet I feel that it has renewed my spirit as an American.

"In Washington men tell you so many things every day that are not so, and I like to come and stand in the presence of a great body of my fellow-citizens, whether they have been my fellow-citizens a long time or a short time, and drink, as it were, out of the common fountains with them and go back [illegible]

CROWDS CHEER PRESIDENT.

Great Demonstration of Loyalty by People of Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 10.—President Wilson received a tremendous greeting tonight when he arrived in this city to address 4,000 newly naturalized citizens in Convention Hall. His entrance into the auditorium was marked by cheers of a vast audience, the waving of flags, and singing.

The fact that the relations between this country and Germany are strained by the Lusitania incident, seemed to make the people more responsive to the President and to every reference made to him by the preceding speakers.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the Rev. Henry N. Couden, the blind chaplain of the United States House of Representatives. Mayor Blankenburg presided. In his address the Mayor told the new citizens that they must be Americans first, last, and all the time.

"You must dedicate yourself to this country first, last, and always," said the Mayor. "No matter what happens in the world at large. Thank God, we have at Washington a man who knows what is right and just."

The Mayor was interrupted by prolonged cheering, handclapping, and flag waving. The police band played "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and President Wilson joined in the singing.

Mayor Blankenburg's conspicuous greeting of the President in the Broad Street Station, where they met him in the President's private car, and the Mayor's complimentary references to Mr. Wilson in his speech were regarded as highly significant. The Mayor, a German by birth, went directly to the President's car to shake hands with him and rode with him in the automobile to the Convention Hall. It seldom has happened that the Mayor of the city has gone directly to the President's private car to pay his respects.

President Wilson also, apparently, noted the significance of the Mayor's eagerness to set an example to the Germans of this city.

The President's progress from Broad Street Station to the Convention Hall was marked by extraordinary police precaution. Hundreds of patrolmen, mounted police, and motor cycle men were stationed to meet him at the station. A strong escort of police, besides the First City Troop, accompanied him to the hall. Director Porter and Superintendent Robinson were in actual command of the police and every precaution was taken. When once within the hall uniformed and plain-clothes policemen were stationed near the platform and throughout the audience.

Long before the hour scheduled for the President's arrival Broad Street Station was packed. Market Street, adjacent to the station, and Broad Street were also well filled with people, and the throngs were far larger than on any other occasions of President Wilson's visits to this city. By the time the train rolled into the station the platform facing the gates was crowded, and the large detail of policemen had their hands full. There was no disorder, but the greatest eagerness was manifested to have a look at Mr. Wilson. The sinking of the Lusitania and the probable attitude of the Administration was the common topic in the crowd.

An hour before the President's arrival, a party consisting of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of Labor Wilson, Governor Goldsborough of Maryland, Judge Joseph Buffington of the United States Court of Appeals, and the Rev. Mr. Couden, arrived at Broad Street Station and were met by a reception committee, headed by Charles Z. Tryon, which escorted them to the Bellevue-Stratford. There an informal reception was held for them and they were the guests of the committee at dinner. Other visitors from Washington included Richard K. Campbell, Commissioner of Naturalization, and Raymond F. Crist, Assistant Commissioner.

The newly naturalized citizens in whose honor the President came to Philadelphia arrived early at the hall. Some days ago the men got tickets for themselves and their families and although they were anxious to see and hear the President at that time, their interest was tremendously increased inview of the momentous happenings of the last few days.

When the President's party arrived at the Convention Hall the streets outside were black with people and Mr. Wilson was repeatedly cheered. Inside practically every seat had been taken. On the President's entrance the cheering was kept up for several minutes.

Secretary of Labor Wilson spoke to the newly naturalized citizens on the duties they had assumed. He referred to the war and asked all to keep a "cool head and a clear vision." He said that if Americans could, with honor, avoid sacrificing their people and property to the demon of war, they would be in a better position to help bind the wounds of those stricken nations when the time came to urge the claims of peace.

After his speech at Convention Hall President Wilson was escorted to his automobile and to Broad Street station, which he reached at 10:15 P. M. He found Fifteenth Street and Filbert Streets crowded. He was cheered repeatedly as he sat in his automobile and waved his hat to the crowd as he stepped out. After shaking hands with Captain J. Franklin McFadden of the City Troop he was taken up to the passenger floor and entered his private car. As he passed inside the gates the crowds in the station who had been waiting to catch a glimpse of him, rushed to the iron railings and cheered. He bowed and waved his hat to them.

Secretary Tumulty, after the President was in the car, stated that the President was extremely grateful for the enthusiastic reception, and that he appreciated the sincerity of the crowds.

ROOSEVELT INTERESTED.

Anxious to Hear What the President Said and Is Watching Closely.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 10.—Colonel Roosevelt was greatly interested tonight in what President Wilson said in Philadelphia and was anxious to hear about it. He is watching the situation closely. It is possible that he may make a statement after he has read the President's speech.

HALTS TITANIC HEARING.

Notices in Legal Proceedings Lost on the Lusitania.

The loss of the usitania has resulted in the postponement of the legal proceedings in the Federal District Court on account of the loss of the Titanic. Soon after the latter disaster the White Star Line began proceedings in the District Court to limit its liability on account of th passengers and baggage lost in the liner to $96,000, the value of the salvage and passage money. In connection with this suit claims amounting to $18,000,000 were filed with the court.

Judge Mayer had set next Monday for the beginning of the hearing in the matter, but it was represented to him yesterday that the summonses to appear on that day, which had been issued to the English parties to the suit, had been contained in the mail carried by the Lusitania, consequently they were now at the bottom of the ocean.

As a result, Judge Mayer postponed the hearing of the cast to some future date to be fixed. Meanwhile, on Thursday he will take the testimony of an important witness from the shipbuilding yards of Harlan & Wolff, Belfast, where the liner was constructed.

Before the Circuit Court of Appeals Charles C. Burlingham, counsel for the White Star Line, argued for the issue of writs prohibiting the filing of orders made by Judge Augustus N. Hand and Judge Mayer, which would permit certain of the Titanic claimants to withdraw from the limitation of liability proceedings here and file new claims in the British court. The court reserved its decision.

...LUSITANIA DEAD BURIED IN IRELAND

Funeral Trains Pass for Hours Through Queenstown—Americans to be Sent Home.

LAST EFFORTS TO IDENTIFY

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—Ninety-two passengers of the Cunard Line steamer Lusitania, who formed part of the pitiful handful of maimed dead, and dying brought ashore with the survivors of the disaster that followed the attack on the vessel by a German submarine last Friday, were buried this afternoon with services that have no parallel in history.

Under a sky in which not a single cloud floated and to the strains of hymns played by a British Army band they were laid to rest two miles behind Queenstown in a cemetery bursting with spring greenery and tucked between hills flaming with gorse. The services at the graves began at 4 o'clock, and at 4:30 the sod of Ireland was being shoveled upon the coffins.

Queenstown never sensed the full horror of the Lusitania disaster until today. Up to the time that the long stream of coffins began to disappear over the hill behind the town there was about the affair, what, with the continued searches for survivors and the bustle about the morgue, something of the unusual and theatric. But when the funeral started the realization came that each of these cheap coffins held a body and that in the Atlantic, less than twenty miles away, there were over a thousand more—all victims of a German submarine.

Hours to Move the Coffins.

The townspeople stood hatless nearly all forenoon as the coffins were conveyed to the cemtery on carts. This process required hours, and it was not until 3 o'clock in the afternoon that the funeral procession proper left the Cunard offices at the waterfront. There were only three bodies, one each in a harse, in this cortege, the other eighty-nine already having been placed in the graves.

With the British Army band playing Chopin's "Funeral March," the procession marched through the crooked streets, past the Cathedral, which stands on the highest point in the town, and then took its course along an undulating country road, now rising and now sinking, between green hills. Along this country road country folk were clustered for the most part, perched on stone fences, behind the soldiers who guarded the road the entire two miles from the Cathedral to the cemetery.

An early morning train today brought nearly a hundred friends or relatives of passengers of the Lusitania to Queenstown from various parts of the British Isles. Among those who arrived was W. J. Griffiths of the Canadian office in London, who desired to extend aid to the Canadian survivors.

The bodies of the sixty-four unidentified dead were viewed by weeping men, women, and children who sought a last opportunity to see if there were among the dead those for whom they were searching. This delayed the funeral procession, the entire forenoon being devoted to last efforts to make identifications.

The churches in Queenstown, both Protestant and Catholic, all held memorial services this morning.

Assisting the Bishop at the cathedral was Father Cowley Clark at London, a survivor of the disaster. Participating in the Protestant service was the Rev. Swan-Mason, Chaplain of the battleship Ocean, which was sunk recently in the Dardanelles.

All shops in Queenstown were closed and had their blinds drawn when at 10 o'clock this morning Bishop Brown celebrated a high requiem mass in St. Coleman's Cathedral in the presence of General Hill and Admiral Sir Charles Cook and the members of their respective staffs. The public mourning was general, nothing but the most necessary business being conducted.

As soon as the light permitted today officials of the Cunard Company sent photographers to take photographs of the unidentified dead in the morgue. All the known American dead have been embalmed.

The bodies of these Americans, and a number of British first-cabin passengers were not included in today's funerals.

Sixteen members of the crew of the Lusitania were buried in a common grave with the unknown dead.

Americans' Bodies Together.

The bodies of the identified Americans, covered with the Stars and Stripes, were removed from the scattered morgues and placed side by side in the Cunard Line offices on the water front. As they were carried through the streets by British sailors the crowds uncovered.

Cheap, brown coffins contained the bodies of Charles Frohman, Isaac F. Trumbull of Bridgeport, Conn., Mrs. Henry D. Macdona of New York, Charles H. Stevens of Atlantic City, Dr. F. S. Pearson of New York, D. Walker of New York, Dr. Pearson's secretary; Mrs. McBride, Hugh Compton, 17 years old; C. T. Brodrick of Boston, Herbert Ellis of New York, and Mrs. Spillman of Detroit. Mr. Frohman's secretary arrived today to take charge of his employer's body.

Dr. Depage, Medical Director of the Belgian Red Cross, arrived here today and positively identified the body of his wife, who was a passenger on the Lusitania. The body of Madame Depage was sent to London and thence will be taken to Brussels.

F. M. Lassettef, an officer of a Scottish regiment, who was wounded early in the war and had been on a voyage of three months to recover his health, was saved, together with his mother, by the saloon grand piano of the Lusitania, on which they floated for three hours. Mr. Lassetter says he came up near his mother after the boat went down, and sighted the piano, floating with its legs up. He lifted his mother on the piano and then climbed aboard himself. They found the unique craft well above the waves and perfectly seaworthy.

The Lassetters were less exhausted when taken aboard the trawler than most of those persons who had been in lifeboats.

One of the survivors identified the body of Mrs. R. D. Shymer of New York, the American widow of an English nobleman who subsequently married an American and had been living in New York. She was on her way to London and her name probably will be added to the list of American dead. Her body will be sent back to the United States as well as those of the others, some of them starting tonight.

Common Grave for Children.

Many children and little babies still lie in the morgues. The townspeople covered them with flowers today and it is probable these little ones will be placed in a grave together.

Some on crutches, many limping, and nearly all bruised, the survivors left their hotels in silent groups throughout the afternoon. There were some Americans, many Canadians and English. The presence of so many children on the Lusitania was due to the fact that Canadian women were going to England to join relatives while their husbands were at the front.

Not a single body was brought in today from the spot where the Lusitania disappeared, but some bodies may yet be found if a storm does not scatter them. There will not be so great a number picked up, however, as was the case in the North Atlantic after the Titanic disaster, for that vessel remained afloat so long all on deck had ample time to carefully adjust lifebelts.

Father Cowley Clark of London, who was a colleague of the late Cardinal Newman and was among those saved from the Lusitania, said today:

"I saw the Crompton family of Phil...

Affidavits made by Miss Jessie Taft Smith of Braceville, Ohio; Dr. Howard L. Fisher, Major W. Warren Pearl and Robert Rankin of New York are the only permanent records of the Lusitania disaster obtained by the United States Consulate here. All are brief and none reflects seriously upon the behavior of the Lusitania's crew, except what some witnesses consider the lifeboat fiasco. The affidavits of Miss Smith and Mr. Rankin were cabled tonight to Secretary of State Bryan, while those of Major Pearl and Dr. Fisher were sent to Ambassador Page at London.

Can't Remember His Rescue.

Arthur Courtland Luck of Worcester, Mass., arrived at Queenstown yesterday, too dazed to remember how or where he had been rescued. He was unable to move about yesterday, but today he searched among the dead for the bodies of his wife and two children.

O. H. Hammond of Bernardsville, N. J., who says he was lunching with Herbert S. Strong and Linden Bates, Jr., of New York, when the ship was struck, was taken to a hospital here on arrival. He made inquiries for his wife and was told there was a Mrs. Hammond in the building. This woman, however, proved to be a steerage passenger, who had lost her husband. Mr. Hammond gave her money to buy clothes and reach her home.

Mme. Marie Depage, wife of Dr. Antoine Depage, Medical Director of the Belgian Red Cross, who is among the identified dead, was bringing back to Europe $100,000 contributed in the United States to the Belgian Red Cross fund, but this money was in the liner's safe and went down with the ship.

The police have taken possession of $50,000 in cash, many drafts, and a considerable amount of jewelry found on the dead.

The body of Mrs. Anthony Watson of New York has been added to the list of identified American dead, while the name of John Williams, 99 years old, has been included in the list of survivors.

The name of Mrs. Charles F. Fowles of New York, a first cabin passenger of the Lusitania, today was added to the list of identified dead.

A body landed at Kinsale today was identified as that of Mrs. W. Willy. [The first cabin passenger list of the Lusitania contains the name of Mrs. Catherine E. Willey of Lake Forest, Ill. A dispatch received earlier in the day from Hutchinson, Kan., stated that "Mrs. Katherine A. Willey, of Lake Forest, Ill.," had cabled that she was alive though terribly mangled. This would indicate that the body identified as Mrs. W. Wiley is that of another person, who may have had a similar name.]

PEARL FAMILY SEPARATED.

Father, Mother, and Two Children Rescued Apart—Two Children Lost.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—Dr. F. Warren Pearl of New York, who was a Surgeon Major in the United States Army during the Spanish-American war, and was on the Lusitania, bound for Belgium on Red Cross work, was saved with his wife, who has a broken arm, and two of their children. Two other children and two nurses employed by Dr. Pearl are missing.

Mrs. Pearl says that she saw Mr. Stone and Mr. Bates go down when a wave washed over the port side of the ship. Mr. Bates was wearing a heavy overcoat.

"I was lunching with Mr. Stone, Mr. Bates, Mme. Anton de Page, and Dr. J. T. Houghton when I felt a shock," said Dr. Pearl.

"When I reached the deck I found that one nurse and two of my children were missing. I discovered later that they got into a boat which was launched safely on the starboard side. I returned to the port side and jumped overboard just before the ship went down.

"I saw no signs of panic. Officers and crew apparently were doing everything possible to save the passengers, but the explosion rendered the engines useless and it was impossible to slow down the ship.

"I did not know whether any of my family was safe until I got ashore, after three hours in the water, in which I floated with the greatest ease on my lifebelt. When I reached the land I found my wife at Admiralty House, suffering with a broken arm.

"I soon brought two of our children to her. Two are gone, but I thank God that so many of my family were saved, especially when I recall that whole families have perished. I saw a father, mother, and three daughters, all dead, clasped in each other's arms."

BABY'S PHOTOS HIS MASCOT.

BOSTON, May 10.—A cablegram from Charles E. Lauriat, Jr., a publisher of this city, who was a passenger on the Lusitania, was received by Mrs. Lauriat at her home in Cambridge today. The message which came from London said:

"I arrived from Queenstown yesterday (Saturday) safe and sound and am suffering from no aftershock, only muscular lameness.

"We were struck at eight minutes after 2. After doing all I could on the ship, I jumped and swam; at 2:25, I found and got onto a collapsible life boat. I opened her up and took charge. We got in, thirty-two in all. Then we rowed for shore. We were picked up in about two hours and reached Queenstown at 9:30 P. M.

"The town was wide open with hospitality. We brought through four slightly injured. The women showed wonderful courage.

"I saved the baby's pictures. They were my mascot. I also saved my passport and all drafts."

HOLD SEARCHERS AS SPIES.

Soldiers Mistake Americans for German Submarine Officers.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—Lindell T. Bates, son of Lindon W. Bates of New York, Vice Chairman of the American Commission for the Relief of Belgium, was arrested at Kinsale yesterday on a charge of espionage while searching for the body of his brother, Lindon W. Bates, Jr., who is believed to have perished on the Lusitania. Newton B. Knox, an American mining engineer, who was with Mr. Bates, was taken into custody at the same time.

The Sergeant who made the arrests accused them of being officers of a German submarine. After being taken before a Captain they were detained at the barracks half an hour, until United States Consul Frost, at Queenstown, vouched for their innocence. Their search of the coast revealed no trace of the body of L. W. Bates, Jr.

DELAY IN LAUNCHING BOAT.

Mrs. Jessie Taft Smith Was in Only Craft Leaving Port Side.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—Mrs. Jessie Taft Smith of Braceville, Ohio, who was making the trip from New York unaccompanied, was one of the coolest survivors of the Lusitania disaster. Recounting her experiences today she said:

"I was in my room writing when the torpedo hit the ship. I am satisfied that no warning was given. I have testified to this in an affidavit which I have supplied to the State Department.

"It is a surprising fact how many people were caught in their staterooms. Evidently they shared my feelings, that if struck the ship would stay up a long time. This probably accounts for the heavy losses among the first cabin passengers, many of whom went below to get their belongings. I had practiced putting on my life belt, and by the time I reached the deck I had adjusted it. On my way to the deck the list was so great that I fell against some man, who expostulated with me. Asking his pardon, I hurried to the port side and was thrown into a boat by a steward and fell sprawling.

"Two-thirds of the people in this boat, the only one launched on the port side, were men. A fearful time was taken in lowering the boat, which was only about thirty feet away when the Lusitania disappeared beneath the waves, leaving a mass of wreckage, swimmers and dead bodies.

"After rowing for three hours we were picked up by a fishing boat. Later we were taken aboard a trawler and landed here. I was taken into the home of a local doctor, whose American wife has treated me as if I were her own relative. Today my husband arrived, but I shall stay here as long as possible."

NEW SEARCH FOR BODIES.

Cunard Line Sends Powerful Tug to Scene of Disaster.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—F. J. Gauntlett of Washington, after sending messages to the American Ambassador at London and the State Department at Washington, asking that representations be made to induce the authorities to resume the search for the bodies of victims of the Lusitania, has piersuaded the Cunard Company to charter a powerful tug, which left this evening for the scene of the disaster.

MANY CHILDREN OWE LIVES TO VANDERBILT

Woman Tells of His Heroic Work Gathering Little Ones to the Life Boats.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—Mrs. Lines, a Canadian woman, who reached London today from Queenstown, paid a glowing tribute to the gallantry of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his valet, Ronald Denyer.

"People," sh esaid, "will not talk of Mr. Vanderbilt in future as a millionaire sportsman and a man of pleasure. He will be remembered as the children's hero and men and women will salute his name.

"When death was nearing him he showed gallantry which no words of mine can adequately describe. He stood outside the palm saloon on the starboard side of the Lusitania with Ronald Denyer by his side. He looked around on the scene of horror and despair with pitying eyes.

"'Find all the kiddies you can, boy,' he said to his valet. The man rushed off collecting children and as he brought them to Mr. Vanderbilt the millionaire dashed to the boats with two little ones in his arms at a time.

"When he could find no more children he went to the assistance of the women and placed as many as he could safely in the boats. In all his work he was gallantly assisted by Denyer, and the two continued their efforts until the very end.

"I hope the young men of Britain will act with the same cool bravery for their country that Mr. Vanderbilt showed for somebody's little ones."

SINCERE, SAYS DERNBURG.

When the dispatch from Berlin, expressing the German Government's regret over the loss of life in the Lusitania disaster, was read to Dr. Bernhard Dernburg yesterday, he said:

"I should say that that statement was a sincere expression of the German attitude in the matter." He declined to say more.

closed, but that the explosion and the force of the water must have burst them open. He said that all the officers were at their posts and that earlier arrivals of the rescue craft would not have saved the situation.

Coroner Sums Up Case.

After physicians had testified that the victims had met death through prolonged immersion and exhaustion the Coroner summed up the case.

He said that the first torpedo fired by the German submarine did serious damage to the Lusitania, but that, not satisfied with this, the Germans had discharged another torpedo. The second torpedo, he said, must have been more deadly, because it went right through the ship, hastening the work of destruction.

The characteristic courage of the Irish and British people was manifested at the time of this terrible disaster, the Coroner continued, and there was no panic. He charged that the responsibility "lay on the German Government and the whole people of Germany who collaborated in the terrible crime.

"I propose to ask the jury," he continued, "to return the only verdict possible for a self-respecting jury, that the men in charge of the German submarine were guilty of willful murder."

The jury then retired and prepared their verdict.

HAD CARD OF NEW YORK FIRM.

Dead Man Thought to be a Canadian Captain Who Called at Store.

LONDON, May 10.—Cornelius Horrigan, a waiter on the Lusitania, is quoted as testifying Saturday evening at the opening of the Coroner's inquest over the bodies of five victims landed at Kinsale that he believed one of the bodies was that of Steward Cranston, but he was not positive. He was unable to identify any of the others.

One was that of a man about 35 years old, in whose pocket was found a business card, bearing the name of John Wanamaker of New York, and in the left-hand corner "Notary Public MacQuerrie, Bureau of Information."

The unidentified passenger in whose pocket was found a business card bearing the name of John Wanamaker of New York and in the left-hand corner "Notary Public MacQuerrie, Bureau of Information," is believed to be a Captain in the Canadian artillery, who sailed with his wife.

David L. MacQuerrie, head of the Bureau of Information at the Wanamaker store, said yesterday that he gave such a card to a man, about 35 years old, the day before the Lusitania sailed. Mr. MacQuerrie could not recall the man's name, but remembered that he told him he was from Toronto, where he had bought his ticket on the Lusitania, and that he intended to sail to enlist in a regiment in London.

"I gave him my card," Mr. MacQuerrie said, "as a means of introduction to another second cabin passenger whom I had assisted in getting a ticket."

CALL IT WORLD'S VERDICT.

London Daily News Extols Pronouncement of Coroner's Jury.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 11.—In an editorial this morning on the proceedings at the Lusitania inquest at Kinsale, The Daily News says:

"The jury which charged the officers of the submarine and the German Emperor and the Government of Germany with willful murder in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania merely put on record the verdict which has already been passed by the entire civilized world outside of central Europe.

"The disgust with which this monstrous deed is regarded will certainly be emphasized by the indecent brutality with which one German paper after another is recording its joyful pride in the massacre of 1,500 unarmed civilians. Before the universal horror which their exhibition of ferocity has excited, other questions sink into insignificance."

"The problem, though difficult, of securing to great liners the greatest possible protection against savagery by sea should not, it would seem, be wholly insoluble. The British public may at least rest secure that so far as can be solved at all, it certainly will be now that the last shreds of reliance on the common sense and common humanity of the enemy has been by their own act torn away."

DENIES CONVOY IS POSSIBLE.

But London Expert Admits Patrol Feasible—Wonders at Ship's Course.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Chronicle naval correspondent, discussing the loss of the Lusitania, says:

"We are brought to a critical question that will be asked, Might the murderous attack have been frustrated? Some persons seem to think that the Admiralty should have established a convoy for the Lusitania, but a little consideration will show that this would have been impossible. We cannot convoy every ship of the thousands which arrive in or depart from our waters. No owners would wish to have their vessels collected in groups and convoyed by a few warships, and if this were done the submarines would desire no better target than a squadron of liners and cruisers approaching the Channel or leaving it at the speed of the slowest among them.

"Obviously the days of a convoy in the old sense passed away with the sailing ship era. A patrol is another matter, and certainly we may give the Admiralty credit for having taken every precaution that is possible to avert the disaster.

"One fact, which has already attracted attention, is that the Lusitania was sunk a few miles from the Old Head of Kinsale and upon or within a short distance of her customary course. Into this matter we cannot enter, but obviously the best means to frustrate a submarine's attack is for vessels to proceed at high speed and upon varying and unknown courses. A submarine is blind at night and at a disadvantage in the daylight. It is necessary that she should see her target, and if the intended victim does not come her way she will be foiled.

"The tactics of submarine warfare have always directed attention to this matter. It has been pointed out that the best opportunities arise in case of a ship's approaching the harbor or intending to enter some strait or inlet, the submarines lying in wait to attack

VERSIONS OF BOAT ORDERS

May Have Been Due to Momentary Feeling That Ship Was Safe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 10.—A Queenstown dispatch to The Times says:

"There is a curious statement made independently by two American passengers, that an order was received not to launch the boats.

"In one case the passengers already in the boat got out, and in the other case the narrator threatened to shoot any man who tried to prevent the lowering of the boat.

"Some light is, perhaps, thrown on this incident by the statement that after the ship had tilted over to a sharp angle, she remained for a time in that position, and, bearing in mind all that had been said and written about the Lusitania's water-tight compartments, and double skin, some of the passengers thought that she was really unsinkable.

"These points and others of which rumor whispers will, no doubt, be elucidated in good time."

LIVERPOOL MOVES TO PREVENT RIOTS

Saloons Closed at 6 P. M. and Leaders of Recent Outbreaks are Warned by Magistrates.

LIVERPOOL, May 10.—The municipal authorities ordered that all saloons be closed at 6 o'clock tonight, in consequence of the anti-German riots here yesterday. The ringleaders of those disorders were let off leniently in court today, but were warned that further outbreaks would be punished rigorously.

In dealing with the rioters the Magistrate remarked that it might be easily understood that in the first flush of the excitement following the torpedoing of the Lusitania the people, particularly those who hac relatives on the ship, might have been beside themselves. It could not be stated too emphatically, however, that the interests of the country demanded that such riots should not take place.

Some of the persons arrested for participating in the outbreaks were discharged and others were remanded for a week.

Women Smash Windows.

NEWCASTLE, England, May 10.—The sinking of the Lusitania and the manner in which the deed was hailed in Germany has aroused strong feeling here against Germans being allowed to continue business in this city.

A big crowd, composed mainly of women, paraded the streets today, smashing the windows in the establishments of German pork butchers.

EXCHANGES BAR GERMANS.

Naturalized Citizens Forcibly Kept Out in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 11.—The 150 Germans on the London Stock Exchange have received notes from a committee requesting them not to enter the house in the future, but in spite of this request a good number of them turned up at the doors yesterday. They found awaiting them a determined guard of British members, who told them if they "had not sufficient sense to keep away," they would be forcibly ejected.

At many of the doors scuffles took place, but the Germans were all repulsed.

The sinking of non-combatant vessels by German submarines has been viewed with a steadily growing feeling of indignation at the Baltic exchange, and that feeling was much strengthened when the news of the destruction of the Lusitania became known there. At ont time it was feared something serious might happen as among the members are a considerable number of naturalized Germans, Austrians, and Turks.

A meeting of protest was held unofficially at which a resolution was passed calling on the Board of Directors to expel all naturalized foreigners born in enemy countries. This resolution found about 400 supporters in spite of the fact that the gathering was hurriedly summoned. The board seemed indisposed to go to the length suggested but passed a resolution requesting members of foreing birth to reafrain from using the Exchange until further notice.

The action of the board by no means satisfied the protesters who were more excited than ever when they became aware of the compromise that had been arranged. They therefore held another meeting which was attended by some 800 members and at which another petition was drawn up requesting the board to expel members of German, Austrian or Turkish birth.

In the afternoon the board held a second meeting when the following resolution was passed:

That all members and clerks who are German, Austrian, or Turkish by birth, although naturalised British subjects, be suspended until further notice, this resolution not to apply to any member or clerk who is over sixty years of age or any member or clerk who has a son serving in his Majesty's forces.

The number of men to whom the resolution applies is said to be about 100 and the number to whom exemption applies amounts to fifteen.

Another agitation which has the support of a good many members, is in favor of asking naturalized British subjects born in enemy countries to sign a declaration holding Germany responsible for the war and expressing abhorrence at the wanton destruction of human lives and property at sea.

The general opinion in shipping circles is that German submarine outrages will have little effect in stopping the sending of supplies to the country. Yesterday, however, owing to the excitement prevailing, little business was done at the Baltic.

LIVERPOOL, May 10.—The Directors of the Cotton Exchange posted notice today that hereafter no Germans or Austrians would be permitted to use the Exchange.

MARTIAL LAW IN VICTORIA.

800 Troops Patrol the City to Guard German Property.

VICTORIA, B. C., May 10.—Victoria is under martial law today as a result of rernewed attacks on German establishments by mobs bent on avenging the sinking of the Lusitania.

After a mob of several thousand men and boys had smashed windows last night in a brewery, the New England Hotel, a jewelry store, a cleaning establishment, and a plumbing shop, the Mayor read the Riot Act at a downtown street corner and 800 soldiers began policing the city.

A detachment of troops is expected today from Vancouver to reinforce the local garrison, as further trouble is feared. The Phoenix Brewery virtually was wrecked. So far as known no one was injured.

Eight hundred troops patrolled the streets all night. A guard was placed around Government House to prevent any disorderly scenes there. Mrs. Barnard, wife of the Lieutenant Governor, is the daughter of Mr. Loewen, a German, founder of the Phoenix Brewery.

The mob last night was made up wholly of civilians, the boldest of whom seemed to be boys. At most of the places only windows were smashed.

WILSON MAY REVEAL HIS DECISION TODAY

personal sentiment," was Mr. Bryan's explanation.

Mr. Bryan was told by newspapermen this afternoon that a press dispatch ad come from Berlin saying that the German Government had telegraphed a message of regret to the United States, but Mr. Bryan said that he had seen no such message, nor had he received any statement on the subject from Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador in Berlin.

Questioned as to whether his recent circular giving notice that American passports would not be issued to persons going to Europe for pleasure and sightseeing, Mr. Bryan said that this was not intended as a warning to Americans not to go abroad. To another inquiry he said that as far as he knew, nobody had written to the State Department asking if it would be unsafe for American travelers to take passage on British ships.

No Warning, Says Bryan.

Mr. Bryan also said that no advice along the line of such an inquiry had been given by the department. As to the advertisement of the German Embassy in American newspapers warning Americans not to take passage on the ships of Germany's enemies which appeared first on the day the Lusitania sailed and was repeated last Saturday, Mr. Bryan said that the attention of the State Department had not been called to the advertisement in any official way. When he was asked if Germany had given any warning to the United States Government that it was intended to destroy the Lusitania, Mr. Bryan answered in the negative, and then added: "I had better not go further than to say that no warning was given."

May Silence Dernburg.

Secretary Bryan said the State Department would not take any notice of the statement made by Dr. Bernard Dernburg in New York yesterday to the effect that the German submarine attacks on British merchant vessels would be continued. Mr. Bryan said that Dr. Dernburg had no official status as far as this Government was aware.

Dr. Dernburg's defense of the sinking of the Lusitania has aroused indignation here, and there is reason to believe that this indignation is shared by Government officials and may have its effect on the course of the diplomatic action to be taken in the Lusitania case. It would cause no surprise in Washington if Dr. Dernburg's activities as an agitator were cut short by orders from Berlin.

Without any reliable official basis for it, discussion is going on here as to what will be the probable course of President Wilson to meet the Lusitania incident. One suggestion is that the Government may break off diplomatic relations with Germany in order to emphasize an accompanying declaration that the United States cannot remain on friendly terms with a nation that resorts to inhuman and barbaric methods of warfare. It is pointed out that this course would mean that the United States Government would surrender its responsibility for caring for the interests of German subjects in Great Britain, France, and Russia, but at the same time would be obliged to abandon its care of British, French, and Russian interests in Germany and Austria. While this theory is discussed gravely, the more general opinion appears to be that it will not meet the situation.

Must Have Assurances.

Those who believe that the matter of upholding the national prestige throughout the civilized world is certain to be the keystone of the President's action are convinced that no policy will satisfy American sentiment that at least does not contemplate obtaining positive assurances from Germany that there will be no repetition of the Lusitania horror. Opinion in Washington is crystallizing around the suggestion that assurances that American lives will be safeguarded from German attack on the high seas must be furnished by Germany.

In the conviction that resident Wilson will resort to diplomacy instead of military measures in the initial effort to obtain a satisfactory solution of the Lusitania incident, persons here have advanced the suggestion that the President's action will take the form of a personal letter to Emperor William expressing the widespread feeling of horror in the United States over the manner in which Germany is conducting the war. References to the indignation created in America by the destructive work of the German forces in Belgium, it was said, might even be mentioned to emphasize how American public opinion had become more and more aroused until it reached the highest point of horrified expression over the sacrifice of the lives of Americans on the Lusitania. The President, it is asserted, might ask the Emperor to give assurances in behalf of himself and his Government that there would be no repetition of the Lusitania tragedy, and trust to the Emperor to respond affirmatively.

The disposition here among those who have some understanding of President Wilson's character is to believe that he will not be hindered by technicalities in dealing with the Lusitania case. That the Lusitania carried ammunition, or that she was subsidized by the British Government and could be taken over as an auxiliary cruiser, will not influence the President, it is believed, in determining how the situation shall be dealt with.

It is not doubted there that the President will act soon, and there is expectation that he will be prepared to show his hand when the Cabinet holds its regular meeting tomorrow.

Other Envoys See Bryan.

The British and French Ambassadors were at the State Department late in the day to express to Mr. Bryan their sympathy over the Lusitania tragedy. Both showed deep interest in the development of public feeling over the catastrophe, but it was apparent that they had nothing to suggest as to what should be the action of the United States. That America must settle herself directly with Germany for these acts was the substance of opinion among the diplomatic representatives of the allied powers.

Chevalier van Rappard, Minister from the Netherlands, also called at the department, and made it clear that that the situation of his Government was identical with that of the United States in relation to the Lusitania. After a conference with Counselor Lansing, Mr. van Rappard said that citizens of Holland had lost their lives on the Lusitania; that Dutch ships had been torpedoed as was the American steamer Gulflight, and that Dutch commerce had suffered more severely than that of the United States.

BARS OCEAN HAZARD POLICIES.

Hartford Insurers Lose $400,000 on Lusitania Passengers.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 10.—With a total loss of at least $400,000, resulting from the torpedoing of the Lusitania, the Travelers' Insurance Company of this city, the pioneer accident company of this country, announced today it would issue no more policies involving the hazard of an ocean voyage while the war continued.

For the last nine months the Travelers', whose policies have a double indemnity clause, paying twice the face value of the policy in case of death on a common carrier, has been cautious about writing persons who might make European trips.

Most of the policies held by Lusitania victims were issued several years ago. Elbert Hubbard's wife paid only $5 to the Aetna Life for the $1,500 accident policy she held, and the Aetna Life, with $58,000 lost on the husband, will double the wife's policy to $25,000 to be paid to the estate.

The Travalers' has not yet finished checking up its lists, but it is now known that $375,000 was lost in accident lines and about $25,000 in straight life policies, the latter ranging from $8,000 to $5,000.

The Colt Manufacturing Company today stated that it had not shipped any revolvers on the Lusitania, and that if there were any Colt weapons listed in the manifest they were consigned by another American firm.

HELD BACK LUSITANIA NEWS

Passengers Not Told Till Sunday—Mrs. Shearson Describes Alarm on Board.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—Passengers on the American liner New York, reaching London today from Liverpool, confessed that there was extreme anxiety over their own ship when they learned the fate of the Lusitania. Captain Roberts withheld news of the Lusitania disaster from them until Sunday morning. The New York got into Liverpool late Sunday night. When the passengers head that the Lusitania had been sunk they asked Captain Roberts if there was any danger to the New York. There seemed to be no assurance that the Germans might not try to torpedo a steamer flying the American flag if they had deliberately drowned American citizens on a steamer flying the British flag.

Mrs. Edward Shearson, wife of a New York banker, said:

"Every one of us was alarmed when we heard what had happened to the Lusitania and Captain Roberts assued us that every precaution had been taken to get the passengers off if the New York should be torpedoed. In fact, it was known that the New York's lifeboats had been swung out for three days. You see, Captain Roberts did not intend to take any chances with the Germans. The New York also took a southerly course to make sure that we would not be in the path of waiting submarines. I intended to sail on the Lusitania, but at the last moment my husband persuaded me take the New York. Thank Heaven, I did it."

WORSE THAN A CRIME, SAYS LORD ROSEBERY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—In a letter to The London Times this morning Lord Rosebery writes:

"There are two or three points to be noted with regard to this infamy—(1) The moral degradation of a nation that can hail such a crime as a victory and rejoice over it; (2) the mental degradation of a nation which can offer warning as an excuse for a massacre. It is constantly proved in humbler cases of homicide that she murderer declared 'I'll do him,' but that has never saved a culprit from the gallows; (3) the stupidity of it. Never has that much—claimed saying, 'It is worse than a crime; it is a blunder,' been more fully exemplified.

"It is intended to dismay our people; it will only rouse them to more furious effort. It is intended to alarm neutrals, whom it will only alienate and incense, and all this to secure, without any possible competition, the title of the enemy of the human race and the horror of the civilized world."

BLOW UP BRITISH SHIP; LET THE CREW ESCAPE

LONDON, May 10.—The British steamer Queen Wilhelmina of Hartlepool was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea off Blyth on Saturday. Time was allowed for the crew to take to the boats. The men were picked up by a patrol boat and landed at Shields.

The Queen Wilhelmina was engaged in the transatlantic trade. She was of 2,307 tons net. She was 363 feet long and was built in 1888. On her last voyage across the ocean she left Philadelphia on April 6 for Leith.

SLATON WOULD GO SLOW.

Governor of Georgia Praises President's "Conservative Attitude."

Governor John M. Slaton of Georgia, in a statement last night regarding the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania, advised that the American people await patiently for full particulars of the incident before forming their final judgment. He made public a telegram that he sent to President Wilson this morning, in which he said he was "in hearty sympathy" with the President's "conservative attitude."

"I think the President should have all the time he wants to consider so grave a question," said the Governor. "If he plunges this country into war it will take a long time to extricate it. It means everything to the welfare and happiness of a hundred million people, and it is not a matter for snap judgment.

"I think it is a blessing that Congress was not in session when the first reports of this great calamity came. In the heat of passion there might have been acts that would not come after mature thought. It is a wise thought to count ten before speaking in anger. I think America should count a great many times ten before she gives formal expression in this case."

CHURCHILL TELLS OF WARNING SHIP

CANNOT GUARD ALL VESSELS

Principle Holds That Merchant Traffic Must Care for Itself, Subject to General Plans.

SILENT AS TO COAST PATROL

Cannot Reveal Naval Dispositions, He States, but All Facts Will Come Out at Official Inquiry.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 11.—Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, was the target of a multitude of pointed questions in the House of Commons yesterday as to what precautions were taken to safeguard the Lusitania.

While declining to reveal the naval dispositions for partolling the coast, he admitted that it was impossible to provide escorts for all passenger ships. Directions as to course had been sent to Captain Turner, who was told of submarine movements, and acknowledged the receipt of two messages, the second reply arriving just before the attack was made.

The questions to the Government, which came from Lord Charles Beresford and others, asked for details as to what speed the Lusitania was making when she was torpedoed; whether there was a patrol boat in that locality; whether all points where vessels arrive and depart were now adequately patrolled; what provisions were made in the case of the Lusitania in view of the warning issued in America; whether Mr. Churchill was aware that previously to Friday German submarines had for some time been actively at work on the south coast of Ireland; whether he was aware that the Admiralty had provided torpedo boat destroyers and other naval vessels to meet on the south coast of Ireland steamers carrying horses from the United States on Government account to convoy them to Liverpool, and finally, what arrangements, if any, were made to convoy and protect the Lusitania.

Warned Turner, Gave Directions.

"The Admiralty had general knowledge of the German warning issued in America," Mr. Churchill stated, "and from that knowledge and other information concerning sugmarine movements, it sent warnings to the Lusitania and directions as to her course. I think, however, it not right to go into that matter in detail, as it is going to be a subject of inquiry, and it might appear that I was endeavoring to show blame on the Captain of the Lusitania in a matter which will be a subject of full investigation."

Mr. Churchill said that this investigation by the Board of Trade would be conducted by Lord Mersey, assisted by skilled assessors, and that it would be opened without avoidable delay.

"In the meantime," he continued, "it is premature to discuss the matter. But I must make it plain that in no circumstances will it be possible to make public the naval dispositions for patrolling our coast. Our resources do not enable us to provide destroyer escorts for mail and passenger ships."

Replying to further questions, Mr. Churchill said:

"The shocking exception of the Lusitania should not divert the attention of the House of Commons and the country from the fact that Great Britain's entire seaport trade has been carried on without appreciable loss. The general principle regarding the providing of an escort is that merchant traffic must look after itself, subject to the general arrangements of the Admiralty, and there is no reason to suppose that this principle is not entirely successful."

Says Turner Replied.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition in the House, asked if any answer had been received from the Captain of the Lusitania, showing that th Admiralty instructions to the liner had come to his hand. Mr. hurchill replied that both messages were acknowledged ,and the second acknowledgement came a very short time before the attack was made.

Lord Charles Beresford then inquired if Premier Asquith had received his letter of April 15, warning him of the peril that threatened the Lusitania, and whether this warning had gone unheeded. Mr. Churchill answered that Premier Asquith had handed him Lord Beresford's letter, and that it had been carefully studied at the Admiralty. So far from being unheeded, a great many of the measures recommended had already been adopted on the largest possible scale.

Asked if the German submarine which sank the Lusitania was of a prior to April 14 Mr. hurchill replied:

"I have no knowledge of the size or number of this submarine."

Questioned regarding a letter sent to the Admiralty ten days ago, giving information concerning the supposed type of this submarine, Mr. Churchill said the information contained in this communication was wholly untrue and that the facts which had given rise to the supposition were known to the Admiralty.

Hopes Neutrals See Great Issue.

Premier Asquith answered a question from William Llewelyn Williams, who said that the British Government should officially bring to the notice of the nations signatory to The Hague Convention "the gross and repeated breaches of the convention by Germany."

"This war was begun by Germany with a flagrant breach of a treaty," replied Mr. Asquith, "and it has been carried on with a progressive disregard of convention and of previously accepted rules of warfare.

"The facts ar euniversally known, and there is no object in approaching neutral Governments u nless and until the latter are prepared to take some action in the matter. We trust that neutral nations are growingly realizing that the issues involved in this war affect the whole civilized world and the future of humanity."

JEWS WITH WILSON, SAYS THE WARHEIT

Speaking of the strained relations between the United States and Germany, The Warheit, in an editorial on "The Jews, the United States, and Germany," says this morning:

The Frankfurter Zeitung, speaking of the possibility of war between the United States and Germany, says that the United States cannot declare war because of the millions of Germans, Irish, and Jews," being in the way."

The Jews should very much like the Frankfurter Zeitung and others to refrain from mentioning them in their discussions of a war between the United States and Germany.

If mentioned they must be, then let it be said in their name: "The Jews of the United States will all, to the last man, stand behind President Wilson and the United States Government."

We take the responsibility for the statement that in all international matters in which the United States is involved, the Jews, as a national unit, are the only ones who stand solidly behind the Washington Administration. This was true with regard to the Mexican question; this is just as true now with regard to the world war.

The Jews may have their sympathies, but when living up to the President's neutrality proclamation is concerned, they will not be found among those who under the pretense of neutrality carry on a systematic agitation against one or another of the warring nations.

The attitude of the Jews toward the sinking of the Lusitania may serve as an example of their loyalty and patriotism. A survey of the Jewish press and a comparison between the sermons yesterday in the churches and those in the synagogues of the country, will prove conclusively that the Jews are undivided in their support of the President and are ready to serve him and their country in any emergency that may arise.

RELIEF WORK STARTED, C. H. DODGE HEADS IT

McAneny Names Committee and Asks That Funds Be Sent to Vanderlip.

Acting Mayor McAneny nominated yesterday the Lusitania Survivor Relief Committee. Cleveland H. Dodge is Chairman, Frank A. Vanderlip Treasurer, and its other members are Adolph Lewisohn, George W. Perkins, John D. Crimmins, Alfred T. White, and Mrs. W. K. Draper of the American Red Cross.

The committee met and organized at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the City Hall and will send out today its appeal for funds, which may be transmitted to Mr. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, 55 Wall Street. They canvassed the situation thoroughly, and Mayor McAneny said it seemed that there would be need of every cent that could be collected.

"We have heard from the Cunard Company," he said, "that it will look after the dependents of its own crew, but that still leaves a great deal of distress to be relieved. In England at this time there are very heavy calls on the purses of every one, and although I cannot as yet give any estimate of what we should like to raise, I am sure that we shall be able to use every dollar we can get."

Letters by the thousand are to be sent out today to those who heretofore have contributed to such funds, and it is intended to work systematically to make the collection a success.

SAW THE SUBMARINE CREW.

Rev. Dr. Guvier Says They Stood on Deck and Watched Tragedy.

LONDON, May 10.—The Fishguard correspondent of The Daily News quotes the Rev. Mr. Guvier of the Church of England's Canadian Railway Mission, a Lusitania survivor, as saying that when the ship sank, a submarine rose to the surface and came within 300 yards of the scene.

"The crew stood stolidly on the deck," he said, "and surveyed their handiwork. I could distinguish the German flag, but it was impossible to see the number of the submarine, which disappeared after a few minutes."

LITTLE EFFECT ON MARKET.

No Gold, Silver, or Government Securities Lost on Lusitania.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The sinking of the Lusitania had little effect on Stock Exchange prices today. In fact, prices that slightly dropped on Saturday picked up when 'Change opened. As to the general effect on London's financial market, the loss of the Lusitania meant little.

It was explained to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Lusitania carried no silver for London, as it was shipped on the American Line to safeguard it against danger. No gold was lost, as gold right now happens to be going out of England to America. No Government securities were aboard the Lusitania, as under the Government decision of last October no securities of any kind have been put on the market.

While the Lusitania undoubtedly carried many commercial bills, including discount bills of lading, &c., no real inconvenience was experienced by the market because these are easily adjustd by cable.

CRASH IN STOCKS ON WILSON RUMOR

Fifteen-Minute Panic on Report of Assassination and Prices Fall 4 to 15 Points.

RALLY ON BANKERS' ORDERS

Canard About the President Is Attributed by Some to Bucket Shop Men of Pittsburgh.

The climax of a session marked by tense excitement and falling prices in the stock market came at noon yesterday, when a tremendous wave of selling forced many of the prominent stocks down from 4 to more than 15 points. For a few minutes the Stock Exchange was gripped by the same panicky conditions that accompanied the great decline last Friday after news of the sinking of the Lusitania was received. Banking support was accorded quickly, and in the final two hours of dealings a large amount of selling was absorbed without difficulty, although prices constantly fluttered in a way that forecast weakness in case the vigilance of the market's guardians relaxed.

The direct cause of the collapse in the noon hour was a rumor that President Wilson had been assassinated. Reaching the Exchange floor, it flashed among the 500 active members there in a moment, and the onslaught against prices began. United States Steel was rapidly hammered down from its best level, close to 54, to 48¾. Amalgamated Copper dropped 6 full points, Reading shot downward nearly 5, and St. Paul 6 points, while Bethlehem Steel, the stormy petrel of many markets of late, was thrown over in big lots until 16 points had been lopped from its highest quotation of the day.

The slaughter continued fifteen minutes before supporting orders were hurried into the market. At about the same time the news tickers sent out a brief line, wired from Washington, that the President was secluded in his office pondering over the problem of the Lusitania and had seen practically no one during the morning.

The canard concerning the President excited much indignation among members of the Stock Exchange, and an investigation was at once to trace its source. There were conflicting reports in regard to the rumor. In some quarters it was understood its first appearance in New York was through the medium of a dispatch from Chicago. Others it was said that a cotton brokerage firm had been told by telephone from Pittsburgh that a strongly supported, though circumstantial, story was being repeated there of the attack on Mr. Wilson.

Exchange authorities were inclined to believe that Pittsburgh was the place of origin, and that the story had been spread by bucket-shop interests for the deliberate purpose of forcing a break in the market. The evident purpose, the Exchange men said, was to cause a decline great enough to wipe out the margin of holders of "long" stock in bucket shops, which usually is 2 points. With the majority of customers cleared of the books, it was explained, the bucket-shop men could start over again building up a following on the buying side of the market, and record as profit the margin destroyed by the decline in New York.

Governors of the Exchange at the end of the day were not optimistic about running down the author of the rumor.

"We have tried our best, and are still making efforts to run down this story to its source," said William C. Van Antwerp, spokesman for the board, "but it is very difficult to get anything definite on it. There is practically no defense against such an act."

While the international situation was viewed by the market community in a far more serious light than last week, stocks got away to a fairly good start at the beginning of business. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Steel and others of the standard list scored gains in initial trading and prices generally stood up firmly for the first quarter hour. From then on the apprehension of traders increased, following receipt of dispatches from Washington which told of darkening clouds as communications from the interior registered evidences of a growing indignation against Germany.

When prices began to slide down, led by a drop in Southern Pacific, the brokerage offices quickly filled up and serious faces were seen everywhere studying the quotation boards. Editorial comment in the different newspapers was read and commented upon. Before the rumor of President Wilson's death reached the rank and file of watchers in the commission houses, many were raised to a high pitch of nervousness, and this fact accelerated the selling when the avalanche received a start.

The record of the day as displayed by leading issues is set forth in this table:

	High.	Low.	Net Loss.
Amalgamated Copper	68⅝	62¾	3⅞
American Locomotive	40⅞	36¼	2⅝
Baldwin Locomotive	47	38	3½
Bethlehem Steel	142	126	7⅛
General Motors	137½	125	4½
Lehigh Valley	139	135	1¾
Mexican Petroleum	75	66¼	3½
National Lead	59	53	3¼
New York Central	88	81¾	1⅝
New Haven	63⅝	60	1⅝
Reading	143¾	138⅝	¾
Southern Pacific	88⅝	84½	1⅝
St. Paul	91¼	85½	2⅝
Union Pacific	126	120⅝	1
United States Steel	53⅛	48¾	2¾
Westinghouse	89	80¾	4½

The day's turnover, in the neighborhood of 1,160,000 shares, was one of the largest of the year. Sales in the hour from 12 to 1 o'clock amounted to about 330,000 shares, greater by a considerable margin than during the two succeeding hours combined. When prices had been lifted from 2 to 3 points above the lowest quotations, business grew more steady, and fluctuations toward the close were confined to a narrow range.

TO PUNISH RUMOR MONGERS.

Chicago Grain Brokers Warned Not to Spread False Reports.

CHICAGO, May 10.—President C. H. Canby of the Chicago Board of Trade posted the following notice today:

"The officers of the Board of Trade will hold to strict accountability any member found guilty of originating or disseminating false rumors. All those operating leased wires are notified that they will be held responsible for any false news circulated by their aid or assistance over said wires."

The notice was inspired by rumors spread among brokers that President Wilson had been assassinated. Scores of persons who called up the newspapers gave the board as the source of the rumors, which grew as they spread to include other prominent men. A police investigation was started to trace the report.

MANY RUMORS HAVE A SHORT LIFE HERE

One Is That Fleet Review Is Off and Another Tells of Plot Against German Ships.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department branded as untrue the report originating in New York that President Wilson had ordered canceled the naval demonstrations at that port.

The rumor that the ships of the fleet were to be ordered to their various stations reached the fleet late yesterday afternoon. It was promptly branded as a canard.

Officials at the docks in Hoboken of the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd lines yesterday denied the rumor that they had stationed extra guards at their piers, fearing an outbreak against their ships.

Concerning the report that the United States Government might consider the possibility of confiscating the vessels awaiting an explanation from Germany on the Lusitania, the officials said they know nothing about it, and they did not think anything of the sort was at all possible.

One of the many rumors that gained currency yesterday was that owing to the torpedoing of the Lusitania by a German submarine, resulting in the death of Alfred Vanderbilt, the German employes of the Vanderbilt and the Biltmore Hotels had been summarily dismissed. Alfred G. Vanderbilt owns the Vanderbilt, and members of his family, through being large stockholders in the New York Central Railway, are largely interested in the Biltmore.

This rumor found its way into every prominent hotel in New York. Investigation showed that it was absolutely unfounded. Walton H. Marshall, manager of the Vanderbilt, and John McE. Bowman, President of the Biltmore, gave it an unqualified denial. August Keller, maitre d'hôtel of the Vanderbilt, thought the story might have gained currency from the fact that he had given orders to his waiters, of many nationalities, in order to keep them out of war discussions, that if any of them mentioned the name of the Lusitania while on duty he would be promptly discharged.

SURE PACIFIC CRUISE WILL BE ABANDONED

Observers in Washington Say War Complications Will Prevent It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—It was all but officially admitted today that the Atlantic battleship fleet would not be sent to the Pacific Coast, but would be retained in the Atlantic. No statement was forthcoming from responsible officials of the Navy Department, but on the basis of certain developments the conviction became stronger than ever tonight that Admiral Frank Friday Fletcher would be ordered not to take the fleet through the Panama Canal.

Josepheus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, conferred early this afternoon with Major Gen. George W. Goethals, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, on the question whether the fleet could safely pass through the canal in July. After the conference it became known that no reassuring advice was given to Secretary Daniels by the Canal Zone Governor. The information that he gave to the Secretary, was, on the contrary, such as to indicate that it would be a risk to send the fleet through the canal this Summer.

It is not understoon that General Goethals said that the fleet could not go through the canal. The information he brought was that vessels drawing thirty feet of water were now passing through the canal, and that if there were no more slides in the meantime it was probable that vessels using the canal in July might find a navigating depth of thirty-five feet. But General Goethals made it plain that there were no storage facilities for coal in the Canal Zone at this time. The navy had been planning to ship large quantities of coal to the Zone and to the Pacific Coast in colliers in advance of the fleet, but it was pointed out that the lack of coaling facilities in the Zone would be a serious drawback to the dispatch of the fleet. General Goethals also reported that vessels were not permitted at this time to pass through the canal under their own steam, but must all be towed. This was also disappointing news for navy officials, for it meant that it would require a week each way in moving the fleet through the canal.

Though officials have been insisting that the fleet would be sent to the Pacific Coast, there has never been any conviction among naval officers here or in the fleet that the battleships would make the voyage this year. Since the return from the Cuban cruise several naval officers have visited Washington and brought word that the personnel of the fleet did not expect it to be sent to the Pacific. Naval strategists have insisted all along that the fleet should be kept in the Atlantic on account of possible developments in the European situation, and, regardless of canal conditions as they may be reported by General Goethals, the view is firm in well-informed circles here that the grave international situation now confronting the country makes certain the retention of the fleet in the Atlantic.

MISS ADDAMS'S COMMENT.

Thinks Lusitania's Loss Should Stir Neutrals to Peace Move.

By JANE ADDAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, May 10.—The feeling in The Hague among pacifists is that the Lusitania incident should be made the occasion of pressure for the co-operation of all neutral nations to end the war. Talk of reprisals or aggression can only increase the spirit of bitterness and horror of the present situation before which the people in Europe already stand aghast.

DEATH TO FROHMAN A GREAT ADVENTURE

Declared to Miss Jolivet, as Ship Went Down, That He Did Not Fear to Die.

HAD NO HOPE FOR ESCAPE

Body to Start for New York on Saturday—Search for Alfred G. Vanderbilt Abandoned.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—In response to instructions cabled from New York, the body of Charles Frohman will be shipped on the steamer New York, leaving Liverpool on Saturday. It will be accompanied by Charles Lestocq, the personal representative of Mr. Frohman here. The Duke of York Theatre, of which Mr. Frohman was the lessee, will be closed on the day of the funeral, in accordance with cabled instructions from the family in New York. A memorial service will be held here.

LONDON, May 10.—"Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life," were the last words of Charles Frohman before he went down with the Lusitania, according to Miss Rita Jolivet, an American actress with whom he was talking calmly just before the end came.

Miss Jolivet, who was among the survivors taken to Queenstown, said she and Mr. Frohman were standing on the deck as the Lusitania heeled over. They decided not to trust themselves to lifeboats, although Mr. Frohman believed the ship was doomed. It was after reaching this decision that he declared he had no fear of death.

Dr. F. Warren Pearl also tells of the incident. "On my way to the deck," he said, "I saw Charles Frohman distributing lifebelts. He evidently did not expect to escape, as he said to a woman passenger:

"'Why should we fear death? It is the greatest adventure man can have.'"

Vanderbilt Search Abandoned.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10.—William Webb, the representative of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, wanted to send out a tug last night to continue the search for Mr. Vanderbilt's body, but the Admiralty and Cunard Line officials discouraged the plan, which was abandoned. There is no indication when the search for bodies will be resumed.

Dr. Kenan, of Wilmington, N. C., who is on the Lusitania's passenger list as coming from New York, was found seriously ill in a hotel late this afternoon.

Dr. Kenan said that as he want down with the ship he saw Alfred G. Vanderbilt leaning against a gateway door and that Mr. Vanderbilt called out to him. "They've got us now."

Mr. Vanderbilt, according to Dr. Kenan, wore what looked like a very heavy overcoat, around which a life belt had been buckled. Dr. Kenan did not see him come to the rail of the steamer.

Dr. Kenan was ill when he went into the water, and his condition is still serious, but he probably will recover.

FROHMAN FUNERAL PLANS.

Services Over Body Will Be Private —Public Ceremonies Same Day.

The New York is due here on Sunday, May 23. On its arrival Mr. Frohman's body will be taken to the home of his brother, Daniel Frohman, 145 West Seventy-ninth Street.

The funeral services will be held the following Tuesday and in accordance with a wish often expressed by Mr. Frohman, will be private. But on the same day at 11 o'clock in the morning, in deference to innumerable requests, an additional service will be held in the Temple Emmanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street. Admission to this service, at which the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman will officiate, will be by card. The interment also will be private.

On the day of the funeral all of Mr. Frohman's theatres in England and America will remain closed and all of his attractions will be suspended.

Alf Hayman, Mr. Frohman's general manager, said last night there had been no search for the manager's will. Mr. Hayman said there had never been a will, and that it had always been Mr. Frohman's wish that in case of his death the institution he had built up should be perpetuated under his name. This wish will be carried out.

Hundreds of telegrams and letters have been received from all parts of the world, and for the present only acknowledgment through the newspapers can be made by the family and his associates.

The Council of the Actors' Equity Association at its regular weekly meeting yesterday adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That our sympathy and condolence we extended to the brothers and sisters of Charles Frohman in their grief over his shocking and untimely death. It is our certain belief that Mr. Frohman will be cherished in the minds of actors as a manager who loved them and whose word to them was as good as his bond.

REV. JAMES A. BEATTIE LOST.

A Missionary on His Way from This Country to India.

A death notice published in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning tells of the death of the Rev. James A. Beattie on the Lusitania. He was a missionery of the Reformed Church in America and was returning to the Arcot Mission in India after a year's leave spent in this country. His wife, who was returning to India with him, was saved although it is not yet known how she escaped.

Dr. Beattie was born in Scotland and received his education in Edinburgh, coming to this country when a young man. For a number of years he was pastor of a church in Amsterdam, N. Y., resigning to take up missionary work. He had been an Indian missionary for the past twenty years.

TRUMBULL'S BROTHERS WILL NOW MAKE ARMS

His Death on the Lusitania Moves Family to Alter Policy of the Firm.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., May 10.—War munitions are soon to be manufactured at the large plant of the Trumbull Manufacturing Company in Plainville, suburb of New Britain. John B. Trumbull, President of the company, announced this today, and he and his brothers would thus be avenged for the killing of their brother, Isaac B. Trumbull, of Bridgeport, who lost his life when the Lusitania was torpedoed.

"Our plans are still in embryo," he said, "but we are figuring on the machinery necessary for the manufacture of munitions of war. In the past we have turned down orders for rifle parts and shrapnel, but the death of our brother has made us determined to go into the business."

MR. RIDDER DECLARES LOYALTY TO AMERICA

Says German-Americans Are "With the President" in Matters of National Honor.

Under the heading "A Pertinent Question" Herman Ridder says in today's Staats-Zeitung:

"What attitude do German-Americans take toward the German submarine policy as evidenced by the fate of their fellow-citizens on the Lusitania?

"Are they with the President of the United States or the Emperor of Germany?—The Evening Mail.

"I speak for myself and I believe for the great majority of German-Americans when I say that we are with the President of the United States to the finish in all matters affecting national honor or national prestige.

"I subscribe unqualifiedly to the statement of Carl Schurz: 'My country, right or wrong: if right, to be kept right; if wrong, to be set right.'"

INVEIGHS AGAINST 'NEUTRALS.'

Chicago Paper Charges Germans There Are Treated Unfairly.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 10.—The Chicagoer Presse, afternoon edition of the Illionis Staats-Zeitung, the leading German publication of Chicago, editorially complains today that Americans in Chicago are discriminating against Chicago German-Americans, and as a consequence their business languishes. The Chicagoer Presse suggests that inasmuch as in many parts of the city German dealers have been blacklisted, it would be in order for German-Americans to patronize only German-American merchants and read only German papers. The editorial in part follows:

"America is neutral. The Government at least says it is, and terms everyone a lout who doubts this and dares undertake to prove the contrary. . . . Here in Chicago grocers and butchers especially are affected by this continually increasing 'neutral' feeling, for neutral Americans no longer patronize their German-American fellow citizens. Everybody has the privilege of geting his necessary supplies from whoever he chooses to purchase them from. But if we have no right to harm others because of their creed or race, neutral Americans certainly are not privileged to blacklist their fellow-citizens on account of their descent. This equals a sort of conspiracy which would be severely punished by law if America was less neutral.

"It is nevertheless a fact that in many districts in Chicago German dealers have been blacklisted. But what if the Germans in Chicago would resort to the same retaliatory measures adopted by Germany against England? What if the local Germans, finding their economic existence endangered, should follow the example set and declare that they will buy from Grmans only, will employ German workmen only, read no other than German papers and patronize such firms only which advertise in German papers?"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

QUEENSTOWN, May 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.—Dr. J. T. Houghton of Troy, who was proceeding to Belgium accompanied by Mme. de Page, head of the Belgian Red Cross Society, was interviewed at the American consulate. He had a flesh wound under the right eye received in falling upon a piece of wreckage. Dr. Houghton, who was in his stateroom at the time of the disaster and rushed on deck to see what had happened, told this story:

"I may say that I had a dread foreboding that we were torpedoed and was not surprised when I got on deck to be informed by an officer that we had been attacked by a German submarine. By the time I had reached the deck the vessel had a decided list to starboard. I remained standing on the deck for a moment or two and was joined by Mme. de Page.

"The boats were by this time being lowered. An officer told us that there was no reason to fear any danger. The vessel would be headed for Queenstown and would be beached there, if necessary.

"Then the liner was again struck, this time forward of the main bridge. The first torpedo had struck amidships. The second attack was evidently of a more deadly character than the first, as quite suddenly the big vessel began to settle by the head.

"Orders quickly came from the bridge to lower all the boats. This work was at once commenced.

"Almost a panic then took possession of the women, who were terror-stricken and commenced to cry piteously. Children were clinging to their parents and the whole scene was too sad to witness.

"Women and children were being rushed into boats which were being lowered, some of them successfully, but others not so. Many people were thrown into the sea.

"I saw the time had come to leave the ship, now well down by the head. I said to Mme. de Page that we had better jump overboard and trust to be picked up by one of the rafts or lifeboats. This we both did. As I struck the water my head came into violent contact with a piece of wreckage which stunned me and I commenced to sink. Happily I came to the surface again and struck out for a damaged raft that was not far away. My first thought was to try to see Mme. de Page, but no trace of her was to be seen and I can only conclude that she was drowned.

"Quite a number of people were on the raft and it was sinking under me. So several women and children were taken off by a life boat.

"I felt weak from loss of blood, but tried to cheer those who were with me. One poor fellow lost his reason altogether, jumped into the sea and was drowned.

"We were about 100 yards from the Lusitania when she foundered. It was an appalling sight to witness as her decks were still crowded with passengers, frantically rushing about in a frenzied state.

"The spectacle in the water was even worse, when scores of people were struggling to keep afloat and some shouting for help. But we could not give them any assistance.

"We were picked up by a trawler, transferred to the tug Stormcock and brought to Queenstown. It was an awful experience and I thank Providence for my escape."

National Security League Calls Army, Navy, and Coast Defense Inadequate.

WILL SEEK LEGISLATION

Messrs. Choate, Parker, Stimson, and Menken Urge Support of Military Efficiency Program.

The army, navy, and coast defenses of the United States are declared to be inadequate in an open letter signed by Joseph H. Choate, Alton B. Parker, Henry L. Stimson, and S. Stanwood Menken, which was given out yesterday in support of the plans of the National Security League. This organization, which maintains offices at 31 Pine Street, has embarked on a national campaign for better war defenses, and its appeal for members and supporters is expressed by the catch-phrase, "a first defense army of 1,000,000 workers."

The letter of Messrs. Choate, Parker, Stimson, and Menken contains most of the arguments put forth by the league in asking public support and enrollment. Its text follows:

"Careful investigation by our committees who have looked into the question of national defense brings to light the following conditions of affairs:

According to official Government reports, there are barely 30,000 mobile troops in continental United States. These are distributed among fifty-two widely scattered posts, which would make it impossible to mobilize quickly at any given point. Even this small force is short of officers, ammunition and equipment. Furthermore, it has no organized reserve.

Our coast defenses are inadequate, our fortifications insufficiently manned and without adequate organized reserves.

Our navy is neither adequate nor prepared for war. This, our first line of defense, is inadequately manned, short of ammunition, and has no organized reserve of trained men. Our submarine flotilla exists chiefly upon paper. Fast scout cruisers, battle cruisers, aeroplanes, mine layers, supply ships, and transports are lacking. Target practice has been neglected or altogether omitted.

In view of this condition of affairs, and since there is no assurance that the United States will not again become involved in war,

And since a peaceful policy, even when supported by treaties, is not a sufficient guarantee against war, of which the subjugation of Belgium and the present coercion of China by a foreign power are noteworthy examples; and the United States cannot safely intrust the maintenance of its institutions and nationality to the mere negations of peace,

And since we are not adequately prepared to maintain our national policies, nor, since the present defenseless condition of the nation is due to the failure of Congress not only to follow the carefully considered plans of our naval and military advisers, but also to provide any reasonable measure for gradually putting such plans into practice,

It is manifest that until a workable plan for a world alliance has been evolved and agreed to by the principal nations, with proper guarantee of good faith, the United States must undertake adequate military preparations for its defense.

An Appeal to Americans.

In the meantime the National Security League feels impelled to call public attention to our deplorable condition of unpreparedness. At the same time the league issues an appeal for public support in behalf of the following program for better national defense.

1. Legislation correcting present wasteful methods of military appropriation and disbursement.
2. Adoption of a definite military policy.
3. A stronger, better balanced navy.
4. An effective mobile army.
5. Larger and better equipped National Guard.
6. The creation of an organized reserve for each branch of our military service.

All those interested in the work of the league are invited to send their names and contributions to the National Security League, 31 Pine Street, New York City.

The letter is addressed to "present and former members of the Cabinet, to members of Congress, to Governors of our States and territories; to Mayors of all American cities, to chambers of commerce and boards of trade, to merchants' associations, to colleges and universities, to university clubs and alumni associations, to all patriotic organizations, to all women's clubs and to all American citizens."

"Until a satisfactory plan of disarmament has been worked out and agreed upon by the nations of the world," says a statement, "the United States must be adequately prepared to defend itself against invasion. A military equipment sufficient for this purpose can be had without recourse to militarism. The league was formed as a preparation not for war, but against war."

MONDELL CALLS IT PIRACY.

Says Germany Must Apologize and Punish the Perpetrators.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

NEWCASTLE, Wyo., May 10.—I have delayed answering to your request for an expression of my views on the sinking of the Lusitania until full particulars were received. The torpedoing of the Lusitania without notice and opportunity to disembark the passengers was an act of piracy and murder under all the laws of God and man.

If the German Government does not disavow responsibility, apologize and punish the men who did it, and promise every possible reparation, the act must be considered, in view of the American lives lost, an act of international hostility to the United States and subject to all the consequences of such an act.

F. W. MONDELL,
Wyoming Congressman.

GERMAN PASTORS BOLT.

Refuse to Discuss Resolution Condemning Lusitania Sinking.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Clergymen of pro-German sympathies bolted the weekly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Ministers of Chicago today when their colleagues refused to postpone discussion of a resolution condemning "the inhuman torpedoing and un-Christian sinking of the Lusitania." Half a dozen pastors left the room after fighting in vain to have the resolution tabled. The resolution was adopted.

The declaration also expressed "perfect confidence" in the "sane leadership of President Wilson." Similar resolutions of confidence in the President were adopted by the Presbyterian Ministers' Association.

At the meeting of Baptist Church leaders several speakers, including Shailer Mathews, Dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, urged prayers for the guidance of the President "in this, his hour of distress."

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH'S VIEW.

Michigan Senator Regards the Situation as a Deplorable One.

Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 10.—Your telegram received, asking for an expression of my views regarding the sinking of the Lusitania. Ordinarily I would be glad to comply with your request, but I do not consider it appropriate for a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations to express an opinion on this matter at the present time. From every point of view we are confronted with a most delicate and deplorable situation in international affairs, which calls for prudence, patriotism, and sound judgment. I have no doubt the Senator, Michigan."

GIBBONS COUNSELS CALMNESS.

Cardinal Will Pray That Nation Be Directed Aright.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 10.—Prudence and calmness of action and speech is the course that Cardinal Gibbons recommends to the American people in the present crisis. When asked for a statement today regarding the Lusitania disaster, the Cardinal, after a little hesitation and serious thought, said he could be quoted as saying:

"I feel the greatest sorrow and horror for this terrible tragedy. So many women and children and non-combatants losing their lives is certainly a tragedy. The American people must be calm and prudent. It is best to leave the destinies of the nation in the hands of the President and the Government. Popular sentiment is not a standard to be followed too hastily. The calm deliberation of our National Executive will lead to the best solution of this question. In the meantime the thing for the people to do is to ask Almighty God in fervent prayer to guide our President and Government to the best and wisest solution. I will pray that Heaven guides us right. That is all I wish to say now."

STAND TO DUTY, SAYS HIBBEN.

President of Princeton Pleads for Truth to Traditions.

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University, in an address before the City Club here today said:

"Whatever I intended to talk about, I can see that there is only one subject foremost in all of your minds. This is the great problem for our country due to the vast war.

"What does the immediate future hold in store for America? I believe we have but one feeling and that is that God forbid that we be brought into war at this or any other time."

He said that no matter whether this nation was about to have war or peace, the great need was that every strong man stand by his duty in business or professional life.

"Besides standing at our post," he continued, "we must all hang together; all of us as Americans. Whatever the emergency that may confront us, let us be true to the traditions of Washington, Hamilton, Jefferson, and Lincoln, as well as to the traditions of the incumbent of the White House—Woodrow Wilson."

TIME FOR RIGHTEOUS ANGER.

Michigan's Governor Begs for Prayerful Patience.

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., May 10.—In response to the numerous requests for an expression with regard to the Lusitania incident Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris at his home here today issued a statement on the subject as follows:

"This is not the time for Americans to seek revenge; this is not the time for Americans to get insanely angry.

"This is the time for righteous anger; the time for patriotic thinking. The United States must relentlessly pursue the ends of justice.

"The sinking of the Lusitania presents to the United States the greatest problem in her history. I ask the people of Michigan to prayerfully and courageously exercise patience and uphold the hands of President Wilson, knowing that he will act wisely and patriotically for the highest welfare of the United States and to the end that international justice be maintained.

"WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS."

BAY STATE BACKS WILSON.

Speaker of Massachusetts House Says All Should Uphold President.

BOSTON, May 10.—The sinking of the Lusitania and the situation which President Wilson faces was the subject of a formal address by Speaker Channing H. Cox in the House of Representatives today.

"Not since Fort Sumter was fired upon so inflamed as it is today," he said. "The United States stands face to face with a grave situation, more grave, perhaps, than we realize. It is the hour when all should stand as one behind President Wilson and testify to our confidence in him.

"But, as men having influence in this old Commonwealth, may I urge you to impress upon all your fellow-men the danger that may arise from unbridled speech and for the substitution of passion for reason."

SHOULD SUPPORT PRESIDENT.

Governor Lister of Washington Would Uphold His Final Decision.

OLYMPIA, Wash., May 10.—Governor Lister gave out a statement today concerning the sinking of the Lusitania, in which he said, in part:

"While the people of the United States do not desire to become a party in the present conflict, yet as a neutral nation we ought to put forth every effort to secure protection for innocent persons.

"The President when he reaches a decision should be supported by a united people."

Trust Wilson, Says Sheppard.

GEORGETON, Texas, May 10.—"The sinking of the Lusitania is one of the unspeakable horrors of modern warfare and will be a tremendous argument for general disarmament when the European war closes," said Morris Sheppard, United States Senator from Texas, in an address here today. He also urged the nation "to handle the present situation with patience and calmness and trust President Wilson to take the proper course."

Preachers Pray for Peace.

DETROIT, May 10.—Prayers to "steady" President Wilson, "in the paths of peace in this hour of the nation's greatest crisis," were offered at the annual meeting of the Detroit Pastors' Union here today. A telegram was later sent to the President, assuring him of the united support of the Christian people of Detroit in his "firm stand for peace."

Senator Sherman for Silence.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 10.—Asserting that he did not believe a United States Senator should discuss such a subject at this time, Senator Lawrence V. Sherman today canceled his engagement to speak on Wednesday in Cleveland at the World Court Congress, the object of which is the creation of an international court for world peace.

PRECAUTIONS INADEQUATE.

London Morning Post Says Cunard Co. and Admiralty Had Warning.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Morning Post editorial today says:

"It is perhaps vain to go into the rights of this business, because all right and law have been trampled under foot by the German Government. It has shown its contempt for all international law and incidentally for the United States. This does not concern us. We are interested in the more practical questions of greater moment to ourselves.

"Later news leaves many important points still unsettled. We know the Lusitania, the Cunard Company, and the Admiralty had ample warning that the attack was to be made, but we have not discovered that any precautions were taken adequate to the menace.

"We must decline either to condemn or to absolve prematurely. What we do say is that the case is extraordinary and demands the most searching and immediate scrutiny and investigation. As to the bearing of this disaster on the greater situation, it can only spur the British people to a deeper and firmer resolve to conquer the enemy at any cost and however long the task may take. It would be a splendid reply to this foul outrage if the Government were to declare for national service so as to mobilize the whole nation."

PROMISING SUPPORT

Alton B. Parker Urges That the President Be Left Undisturbed to Act.

MINISTERS ARE AROUSED

Sons of Roosevelt, Root, Wickersham, and Other Prominent Men Send Message to White House.

"The attempt to persuade the public what action the Lusitania disaster requires the President to take, is unfair to him and may work injury to us. He alone must bear the heavy responsibility of decision—and greater there cannot be. No one knows it better than he. For both personal and patriotic reasons his best effort will be put forth. We all know this to be true. Why then do we not let him alone? Why not give him time? There is certainly no need for hurry. On the contrary, there is every reason for making haste slowly.

"Have we forgotten the Maine? Can we not see President McKinley, standing with his back to the wall in the face of the hoarse cry of angry men demanding war—and his refusal to hurry. He saw his duty to the people and performed it. True, in the end war came—but not as a result of passion—and in the meantime the sentiment of the world had come to our side.

"The President has information that we have not. When to announce a decision may be almost as important as what the decision shall be. Let us all pray that those who will be heard because they cannot act may be induced to desist until the man chosen by the people to decide shall have performed his great task."

Juniors Wire the President.

Among the messages sent yesterday to the President with regard to the need for action in the present crisis and the feeling of national solidarity was one signed by several young professional men, the sons of leaders in political, social, and professional life. The signatories are mostly Harvard graduates, all under 35 years of age, who have been closely associated both socially and professionally for a number of years.

Yesterday several of the group, including Elihu Root, Jr., Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Grenville Clark, conceived the idea at about the same time that it might be a good idea to send an expression of their views to Washington. All of their associates who could be reached met at Delmonico's for luncheon and at the meal talked over the message, which was finally put into shape and telegraphed to the President. The message reads as follows:

The President of the United States, White House, Washington, D. C.:

The undersigned citizens of New York express their conviction that national interests and honor imperatively require adequate measures both to secure reparation for past violations by Germany of American rights and sure guarantees against future violations. We further express the conviction that the considered judgment of the nation will firmly support the Government in any measures however serious to secure such reparation and guarantees.

There were no refusals to sign the message, and it was said that many other signatures could have been obtained if it had been possible to reach others associated with the men who signed it.

Wood Sees Food for Thought.

The following statement was issued yesterday by L. Hollingsworth Wood, Secretary of the American League to Limit Armaments:

The overwhelming horror of the sinking of the Lusitania has brought the war so close to each one of us as individuals that we can view the logical consequences of following the militarists' idea at closer range than even our newspapers have permitted us to do before. Let us be sure to interpret our abhorrence of this frightful deed into constructive action to abolish forever the possibility of its recurrence. Out of the jaws of death into this frightful disaster comes a cruel message which should rouse the American people to a realization of the results or a militaristic policy where judgment has surrendered to a so-called military necessity which knows no law.

To suspend our judgment is not to minimize our condemnation of an act, but it makes possible a careful judgment of how the action of our country in this time of intense feeling can be made of constructive service to mankind for all time.

Ministers Share Agitation.

The Methodist ministers of New York at their regular meeting yesterday tabled promptly a resolution offered by the Rev. A. F. Campbell of the Nostrand Avenue Church, Brooklyn, which commended the President's caution in dealing with the war situation. The sinking of an American ship and loss of American lives was mentioned, but there was no reference to the Lusitania. A moment later, however, when Bishop Luther B. Wilson was called upon to close the meeting with the usual benediction, he offered a long prayer which practically incorporated the resolution.

He prayed also for Divine guidance for the President and his advisors. In informal discussion before and after the meeting it appeared that many of the clergymen thought the President was too conservative.

The Baptist ministers in their Monday meeting adopted a resolution offered by the Rev. J. C. Allen of Brooklyn, which read as follows:

In this time of grave and critical responsibility for the President of the United States, we wish to assure him of our thoughtful sympathy, of our earnest prayers that he may have divine guidance, and of our loyal support in whatever measures may be found necessary for the maintenance of national honor and for promoting the interest and well-being of humanity.

In proposing his resolution the Rev. Mr. Allen declared that all Christian citizens should take active interest in every question of national and international import.

OUTCRY IN PORTUGAL.

Hope Expressed That America Will Not Acquiesce.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LISBON, May 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—An universal outcry is raised here against the torpedoing of the Lusitania, which the press describes as piracy, a crime, barbarity and murder.

The hope is also expressed that America will not tamely acquiesce in the outrage.

"WITH JOYFUL PRIDE"

Cologne Volkszeitung Says, "This Latest Deed of Our Navy Will Not Be the Last."

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—The Cologne Volkszeitung says:

"The sinking of the Lusitania is a success of our submarines which must be placed besides the greatest achievement of this naval war. The sinking of the giant English steamer is a success of moral significance which is still greater than material success.

"With joyful pride we contemplate this latest deed of our navy. It will not be the last.

"The English wish to abandon the German people to death by starvation. We are more humane. We simply sank an English ship with passengers who at their own risk and responsibility entered the zone of operations."

LIKE BRITISH PROTEST IN 1870.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Daily Mail, in an editorial, says:

"People are asking, 'What will they—Americans—do?' The real question is 'What can Americans do?' When their dignity has been flouted they can enter a protest. When Germans flouted the British flag in 1870 we entered protests. We were not in a position to go to war in 1870 and Americans are not in a position to go to war in 1915, and we venture to predict that the result of the American protest will be exactly the same as the effect of former British protests.

"Americans, of course, can seize German ships that are imprisoned by our cruisers in New York Harbor and hold them for damages, just as we can and should seize German property in Great Britain and Canada. But that is about all the the hundred million unarmed United States citizens can effect."

WOULD HANG VON TIRPITZ.

Daily Chronicle Also Thinks German Empire Must Be Torn Asunder.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Daily Chronicle says: "The blood of over 1,500 men, women and children lies at the German Admiralty's door. It was a massacre whose scale and whose cold premeditation taken together render it almost unique among Christian records since the massacre of St. Bartholomew. If ever out of the ground or out of the sea blood cried for vengeance surely that of the Lusitania's victims cries.

"In some respects this hideous wickedness is the most momentous event that war has yet brought forth. Exulting in by the German people wherever the German language is spoken, it cleaves a chasm not merely between their Empire and ours, but between their nation and all nations for whom civilization and moral progress are realities. Their mine and submarine methods at sea have been illegal and barbarous from the beginning, but it was only by stages that they reached this climax of crime, and now as we stand right in the face of it, what does it mean to us? It means that the sort of shake-hands-and-be-friends peace, for which many of us long hoped against hope, is placed finally beyond all reach. It means that the British people has to resolve to carry on this war until direct and personal retribution is done upon the arch criminals.

"We have to visualize the prospect of actually hanging Grand Admiral von Tirpitz and all his responsible associates, not as an extravagance at which sober people smile or frown, but as a definite aim which has an avowed place in our policy. Vindictiveness is not a passion to indulge rashly, nor is it one to which our nation is easily prone, but there are cases in which the relentless pursuit of retribution is not merely indulgence or passion, but the discharge of a duty. Such a duty it is which the colossal edifice of German crime, piled one upon another, wickedness after wickedness, with no visible limit, is laying upon the Allied powers. Outrages wrought thus defiantly not by mere individuals, but by trusted heads, and with the approval of a whole nation, challenge the whole fabric of civilization. Unless that fabric is to cease to exist, the challenge must be taken up and the wrong eventually brought home to its authors in a way that does not seem compatible with any continued existence of Germany as a great power."

NORWEGIAN PRESS AROUSED.

Sinking of the Lusitania Denounced as an Inhuman Act.

CHRISTIANIA, (via London,) May 10.—Commenting on the destruction of the Lusitania, the Morgenbladet says, "The sinking deliberately without warning of the Lusitania with hundreds of non-combatants on board, men, women and children of many nationalities, has created everywhere a feeling of horrible and loathing to great to be measured."

The Oresladet says: "Such horrible methods of making war should be protested against everywhere in the name of humanity."

The Aftenposter says: "The conduct of the German submarines seems now to have reached a climax. The whole world is filled with detestation and horror that in our times of enlightenment such a deed can be perpetrated by a nation of culture."

DUTCH ANSWER TO GERMANY.

Defense of Sinking Lusitania Rejected—Blow to British Prestige.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—(Despatch to the Morning Post.) The Meuwe Van Den Dag combats all arguments published from the German side in defense of the sinking of the Lusitania. As to allegation that 1,500 cases of munitions were on the Lusitania and that the bulk of the cargo consisted of contraband of war, the newspaper says:

"Ought the lives of 2,000 people be endangered even though the passengers' ship was conveying contraband?"

Discussing the statement of Lord Charles Beresford respecting the shortage of cruisers for protecting trade routes, the Nieuwe Van Den Dag remarks that this does not free the German admiralty of its share of responsibility for the death of the victims.

On the other hand the Nieuwe Van Den Dag is of the opinion that a severe blow has been inflicted upon England's naval prestige as showing that Great Britain can no longer guarantee the safety of transatlantic traffic.

WHAT U. S. WILL DO

Thinks America Will Not Be Guided by the Monetary Interests of the Country.

REWARD THORDIS CAPTAIN

Opposition Leader Says That So Far No Effective Protest Has Been Made by a Neutral.

LONDON, May 10.—"Our enemies have reached a degree of infamy, culminating in the destruction of the Lusitania, which it is simply hopeless to attempt to describe," said Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, in a speech today. Mr. Bonar Law's remarks were delivered on the occasion of the presentation of a medal to Captain Bell of the British steamship Thordis, which rammed a German submarine off Beachy Head in February.

Saying that up to the present no "effective protest" had been made by any neutral country, he added:

"What will happen now? The great proud nation—the United States—is the neutral country most closely affected by this latest outrage. The simple fact is that citizens of that great country have been barbarously murdered. It is not for me to say what their action ought to be, but I feel sure the United States will be guided not merely by the monetary interests of the country, but by feelings as to what is due to a great nation among other nations of the world."

Mr. Bonar Law said if the sinking of the Lusitania had the effect he believed it would have upon the feelings, not only of British soldiers, but of the whole nation, "then we can thank the Germans for this last instance of their barbarous methods."

RUSSIAN PRESS HORRIFIED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, May 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Columns are devoted in every single organ of the Russian press to the sinking of the Lusitania. The effort to find adequate terms for the expression of the depths of horror and indignation at this outrage makes the entire Russian press one terrible commination service against German Kultur.

The Novoe Vremya heads its article "The Beast from the Bottomless Pit," and comes to the conclusion that a curse overhangs the German nation. It continues: "They have completed their appointed circuit in history and will now be hurled headlong into the bottomless pit which they digged themselves."

In another article the same paper advocates general adoption by the Allies of German principles and practices, arguing that the Germans themselves are most likely to fear effects of the terrorism they invented for others. If the same methods were turned upon their authors the war would be sooner ended.

The Bourse Gazette says: "Of all the abominable deeds of German piracy this crime is the most astounding both for the number of its victims and the peculiar circumstances." This article is devoted to showing that Emperor William is personally responsible for the whole series of deeds which it says shame the world.

The Petrograd Courier strikes an original note in an article headed "The Murderers of the Lusitania." It says: "War hitherto has been war through all the ages of history, namely, a fight between definite opponents. The Germans have turned this war into warfare against humanity at large. They are not content with killing their foes, but must murder every living thing they have a chance to destroy. Such being the case, it wants no very lively imagination to appreciate what Americans will think of this wholesale murder, not because American citizens have suffered, but because a blow has been struck in the back, and probably not the last blow, against the principle of American freedom.

"The right to punish criminals who violate the laws of humanity belongs first and foremost to the great American republic. America knows well how to use this right. The sympathy of the civilized world is guaranteed her beforehand. The world is being suffocated by poisonous gases of inhuman cruelty spread abroad by Germany, who, in the madness of her rage, is committing needless, purposeless and senseless murder solely from lust of blood and horror."

Most of the papers emphasize the fact that the American Ambassador here the moment he received intelligence of the fate of the usitania, visited Foreign Minister Sazonoff, with whom he was closeted a considerable time. He afterward saw the French and British Ambassadors.

WANTS U. S. TO AVOID WAR.

Kingston (Ont.) Daily Standard Tells How Best to Help Allies.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 10.—The Kingston Daily Standard, which is the oldest newspaper in Canada outside the Province of Quebec, being now in its 105th year, expresses the hope editorially today that the United States will not enter the present war as an active participant. The Standard declares that "the greatest service that the United States can render the Allies in this great war is to keep out of it," and adding that a declaration of war on her part would tend to demoralize the financail markets of the world. The Standard concludes a lengthy editorial as follows:

"While we value the sympathy and the moral support of the United States, let us consider well before we urge her into this fight. Our opinion, and we believe it is shared by many thoughtful Canadians, is that it will be much better for the world and certainly much better for the Allies, if the States shall keep out of the fight as active participators.

"The best services that country can do the cause of the Allies and the cause of humanity is to continue to supply the Allies with arms and ammunition, and, going now a little further, see to it beyond the shadow of a doubt that the German murderers and their partners in crime shall receive no supplies or arms of any kind from the United States."

SPRINGS UP IN ENGLAND

Lusitania Disaster Changes Grim Humor of Soldiers to Hatred —Rouses Civilian Fury.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—There are innumerable evidences that the Lusitania disaster has bitten like corroding acid into the very heart of the British people. Apathy, indifference and a certain mild, impersonal hostility has turned into bitter hatred and thirst for vengeance. Conversation THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has had during the last few days with many representative Englishmen, and a hundred other indications, prove the birth of this new spirit beyond doubt.

"This horror," said one man, "coming as the culmination of a long series of outrages against the ideals toward which the world has been striving for centuries, will cast Anglo-Saxon feeling into a mold which will remain set for at least two generations after us."

An officer just back from the front told me the effect of the Lusitania news on the men in the trenches had been extraordinary.

"Good humor in their fighting and a sort of pity for the poor beggers whom they might kill or wound," said he, "had been the characteristic spirit of the men. My own personal experience shows me this has changed into fury and a desire to slay."

An Irishman who fills a notable place in London life said: "If I am any judge of the Anglo-Saxon race, and I don't speak only of this country, the Lusitania sinking has roused a spirit of hatred which will find vent in very different fashion from the emotional and hysterical ebullitions seen in Germany. There will be no 'Gott strafe England' postcard or things of that sort. I have one son. He is 19 and was at Oxford when the war began and had a splendid record of scholarship. He is a sub-lieutenant and goes to the front within two weeks. Every father must feel a pang at seeing his only son going into the horrors of this chemical war, but after the Lusitania horror I would have forced him to go if he had been reluctant. He is going soon, God bless him."

PROFESSOR BLACK'S VIEW.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Daily News says that Professor Hugh Black of New York, who recently inaugurated a two months' copastorship with the Rev. R. J. Campbell at the City Temple, had intended to book by the Lusitania, but changed his mind and sailed on a previous boat. He was due to preach in London the week before the Cunarder sailed, and he changed his plans before the German threat was published in New York. No German threat, however, would have prevented his keeping his engagement in London, he remarked.

"First of all," said he, "let me say that I have never known a subject in the United States on which there was the unanimity of sentiment as to the righteousness of the Allies' cause, and when I left New York the hopes of victory were so high that Wall Street prices were rising steadily, and stockholders were betting the war would be over this year. I confess I do not find the optimism so strong in London, and my experience is that the business men here are preparing for a long war.

"The Germans and pro-Germans in America are blindly confident of ultimate victory. It is impossible to argue with them. They do not believe the stories that appear in the bulk of the American papers. They say the American press has been bought by English gold."

WORDS IN PROTEST WASTED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—The Daily Telegraph says in an editorial:

"Germany stands before the civilized world and before heaven as the murderer of 1,500 human beings, done to death in cold blood. This is the nation with which we and other great powers have conferred at The Hague in past years in order that war might be robbed of some of its horros. This is the nation of which Baron Marschall von Bieberstein once declared that none was 'superior' in its respect for 'the sentiment of humanity and civilization.'

"We in the United Kingdom have had forged for us a new bond, a bond of grief twith the great English-speaking nation on the other side of the Atlantic. We can judge from merican newspapers what the vast bulk of the people of the United States think. We cannot foresee what action their Government will take. It is not our business. But one thing is certain: The time has gone by for a protest to have any effect on a people mad beyond ordinary limits of madness. It must have come before—when one after another all restraints of war were being brushed aside by the enemy."

"Today Germany is her own law and glories in her lawlessness. But though the people of the Untied States may be condemned to stand by as inactive witnesses of crescendo of outrage, we in association with our Allies have our path marked out for us. We shall not waste words in protest. It is our part to punish. That task can and must be undertaken by our whole manhood. There must be no holding back, no hesitation. Germany must be broken. Her heart must be changed by the only means that will be effective. We must pour troops into the Continent in ever increasing numbers, until overwhelming victory will have been accomplished, and then will come thet final act. In the words of the Prime Minister, due reparation must be exacted from all persons, whatever their position of their antecedents, who can be shown to have violated the most fundamental of all the rules and usages of civilized law, and all evidence must be preserved so as to facilitate judgment being passed on the offenders. This must be our bond as in spirit we stand in mourning beside the nameless graves of the murdered—by every means within our grasp we must obtain the power to punish and to exercise it justly and fearlessly in the cause of humanity."

CONDEMNED IN ARGENTINA.

Rights of Neutrals Outraged, Conscience of Humanity Aroused.

BUENOS AIRES, May 10.—La Nacion publishes editorially an energetic protest against the torpedoing of the Lusitania without previous warning.

It declares that the act was an outrage against the rights of neutrals and has aroused the conscience of humanity.

TO EMBROIL AMERICA

New Yorker Staats-Zeitung Offers a New Defense of the Lusitania Attack.

The suggestion that the sinking of the Lusitania was caused deliberately by the British Admiralty to embroil this country in a war with Germany is made in an editorial in the evening edition of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung yesterday. Under the heading "Was it in England's Plan?" the German paper said:

"And what do those Americans say, the passengers of the Lusitania, who in the first place have a right to speak? They protest against the action of a line which lured them upon a designated vessel that was hurrying toward certain danger, laden with explosives and war materials and British reservists, that deserves to be called a member of the British war fleet as well as the Eitel Friedrich or the Kronprinz Wilhelm. They do not excuse Germany, that would be asking too much, even though they admit at the same time that Germany gave them urgent warning. * * *

"But the sharpest criticism on the part of the passengers, as well as on the part of the press of America, even that which since Saturday has been hurling a veritable flood of jingoism against Germany and German-Americans, is directed against the English naval administration, which is identical with the Bluffer Churchill. Who, in spite of the promise expressly given to the passenger guests that they would know how to protect the great ship bearing passengers as well as war materials from the German submarines, even if it were necessary to send armored convoys—did nothing.

"Shall we say, wished to do nothing? Was it perhaps in the plan of the Churchills and Northcliffes, who can fight with nothing but the weapons of jingoism, to sacrifice the Lusitania to her fate, just because on the had prominent Americans abroad? Was it a part of the 'plan of campaign in May' so to whet the sentiment in America against Germany that America, even if it did not directly choose war, would adopt measures of reprisal that must help England? And help just at the moment when the effective offensive of the Germans was bearing fruit?

"Was it a part of the plan, by means of the sinking of the Lusitania, with its many American passengers, so to unite the neutrals of the world, Italy, Holland, the Scandinavian countries, Greece, Switzerland, the Balkans, and even South America, in an offensive and defensive alliance that should be aimed, under the slogan 'rights of neutrals,' solely against Germany, against Germany's submarine warfare? It is the answer which the British Admiralty today allows to be given to the criticism—that it will leave the criticism unanswered—makes the suspicion more acute. How could it, indeed, defend itself against the charge that it sacrificed its Lusitania, with all the Americans on board, without moving a finger, to a fate that had been openly announced previously?"

INDIGNATION IN GREECE.

Newspaper Calls Torpedoing of Lusitania Crime Against Humanity.

LONDON, May 10.—A Reuter dispatch from Athens says that the torpedoing of the Lusitania has aroused profound indignation throughout Greece. The newspaper Hestia says:

"This German crime affords an appropriate commentary on the German accusations of cruelties alleged to have been perpetrated by Russian troops in East Prussia. While undertaking to give lessons in the principles of humanity to others, they themselves commit the greatest crimes against humanity."

THINKS KAISER FEELS HIS POWER CRUMBLING

London Paper Says He Will Not Hesitate to Butcher His Own Subjects.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 10.—In the course of an editorial which is attracting special attention, and which represents a view held in some well-informed quarters, the London Star says:

"It is, we fear, certain that the Hohenzollern crew of criminals are now fighting to save themselves and not to save the German Empire. Their homicidal insanity is growing more frenzied every day. They are not waging war like a great nation which expects to live in amity with its enemies after war is over. They are waging war like murderers, who are selling their lives dearly.

"The Kaiser and his blood-stained court are assuredly at this moment dreading the awful apocalypse which will sooner or later burst upon the German people. They are treading the path which all tyrants have trodden. They know that defeat means revolution and they know that Russia and its dynasty will go down in the crash.

"The Kaiser and his generals and his officers will not hesitate to butcher Germans as ruthlessly as they butchered Belgians and Americans, but a great fear is in the soul of the Kaiser and his accomplices. They fear the spirit of revolution which is hovering over their banners."

WOUNDS THE WHOLE WORLD.

Danish Newspaper Says Germany Is Outside the Pale of Law.

LONDON, May 10.—The Hovedstaden of Copenhagen is quoted by Reuter's correspondent as follows:

"It is clear that Germany now holds herself outside of international law. Here is the embodiment of German military will. If the violation of Belgian neutrality; if Louvain, Senlis, and Rheims have not yet taught us Danes that neutrality is only a conception of a State, that it has nothing to do with the hearts of the citizens, then the Lusitania will teach us and all the world. Germany will know that the torpedo that hit the Lusitania also hit us and wounded the human feelings of the whole world."

WATCHFUL WAITING BEGINS TO PALL

That Is a Policy of Going Out the Back Gate and Down the Alley.

LEADS TO WORSE DISASTER

Time for the American People to Think for Themselves, Even Though It Rocks the Boat.

By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Mt. Kisco, May 10, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am no singer of hate hymns. That is a German accomplishment. But between hating a mad dog and protecting yourself against him, the difference is material. One is hysteria and a waste of energy, the other is the law of self-preservation. And against murderers to protect your family, your friend, and yourself, with our people has always been accounted a duty, and an honorable one. In the past it has been the duty also of our Government to protect her citizens. That was in the past. Since Mr. Wilson came into office that duty has been neglected, and for this neglect, in permitting it, our people themselves are in part responsible.

For many years our country has been admitting to membership foreigners of every nation, millions and millions of foreigners, who came here chiefly for two reasons; to escape military service at home, and to make money. Not because they loved, or even understood, our ideals of Government, certainly not because they loved us, but because they wished to avoid military service in their own country, and because at home they were pitifully poor.

That on the night after the Lusitania was sunk, in New York at Lechows, and the Terace Garden, those foreigners to whom we gave refuge cheered the officers who sank that ship and who at home used to push them off the sidewalk, does not alter the fact that they are now "Americans" with a chance to make money out of this country and with no law compelling them to defend it. And when three years ago in Mexico Americans were murdered and American property to the value of hundreds of millions of dollars was destroyed, and Mr. Wilson declared his policy of watchful waiting, with that policy these Americans acquiesced. Because if their fellow countrymen in Mexico were protected that might mean war, and war would have interrupted them in the making of money.

It was the blind leading the blind.

Mr. Wilson, mislead by the approval of men to whom dollars for themselves meant more than the loss to the nation of honor and prestige, continued his policy of watchful waiting.

It was a policy of drifting, of shirking responsibility, of dodging the duties Mr. Wilson had sworn to fulfill. It was a policy which, as every one now can see—now that it is too late—could lead only to disaster and dishonor.

It lead directly to the massacre of May 7.

It led directly to the loss of more than a hundred Americans, to the death of one of the most unselfish, most helpful, most gallant gentlemen it has been my privilege to know, Justus Miles Forman. It led to the death of such good men and stanch Americans as Charles Frohman, Alfred Vanderbilt, Lindon Bates, Jr., and Herbert Stone.

And I cannot see that for the taking of these lives the policy of Von Tirpitz was any more responsible than was the policy of watchful waiting.

For three years in Mexico wandering bandits and cattle thieves murdered Americans and spat on the American flag, and the only help Mr. Wilson offered American citizens in that country was to advise them to stay at home. When the great war came and all the rules of warfare, even those that concerned neutrals, were by Germany disregarded, Mr. Wilson sought safety in inaction, in silence, in mild remonstrance.

When the American ship Frye was sunk, when bombs were dropped upon the American ship Cushing, when the American ship Gulflight was torpedoed and in consequence the lives of three Americans were lost, instead of indignant action, Mr. Wilson asked for time to think, and begged that while he thought no one would rock the boat.

When we took Slidell and Mason from an English ship, Great Britain mobilized her war fleet. When Germany attacked the Frye, the Cushing, and the Gulflight, Mr. Wilson anchored our ships off Riverside Drive, and sent the crews to baseball parks and the movies.

And thus, encouraged by our inaction and timidity is it any wonder the high-born officers of the German Emperor deemed it safe, without warning or mercy, to massacre American women, men and babies.

THE TIMES of this morning says editorially, "men are turning to the President. They await from him the right word, the just action, and from him they know they may expect wisdom with firmness."

I regret to disagree with THE TIMES, but I submit there is in the record of Mr. Wilson little to lead us to expect either. He has been obstinate, not firm; and his wisdom is the wisdom of "facing a crisis by turning your back on it."

If Mr. Wilson had a son and his son told him, "The man next door says if I go past his house he'll turn the garden hose on me," Mr. Wilson would not go to his next door neighbor and say, "What d'you mean you'll turn your hose on my boy?" Instead, he would say, "My son, tomorrow on your way to school, go out the back gate, and down the alley."

For three years that is the advice he has given us. He has let us out the back gate and down the alley. And, for one, I am sick of his advice. Why not rock the boat? If the man at the helm is asleep, he is incompetent, if he is steering us straight to disaster, why not rock the boat?

Why should we turn to any one man for advice? Why should we continue to allow Mr. Wilson to hypnotise us into the false security of drifting? When we elected Mr. Wilson President did we also elect him Pope and keeper of our conscience? Did our votes endow him with supernatural power, insight and wisdom? He is just what he always was, a schoolmaster, an intellect unwarmed by imagination, a man without a capacity for friendship, nor one who feels the lack of it. Indeed, it is because he is without friends, because he consults with no one, and on every question with his own judgment is so entirely satisfied, that he is most dangerous.

Nor by the humanity which makes men kin is he deeply moved. When last Saturday morning the entire nation was waiting with horror for the lists of those massacred, Mr. Wilson motored to the Columbia County Club and played golf.

I suggest that at the moment of this great crisis Mr. Wilson is out of touch with the feelings and wishes of our people. And that longer to bow down to his advice can lead us only to disasters still greater than those that already have befallen us.

This is no time for the American people to sit still and say, "Hush, our President is thinking!"

This is the time for them to think for themselves, and to express their sovereign will to the President, who is neither their ruler nor their spiritual adviser, but merely the vehicle appointed to carry out their wishes.

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

THE PRESIDENT'S PART.

People Will Stand by Him, but He Must Stand by Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The American people have always stood by the President. But they expect the President to stand by them. The dignity of the flag and the honor of the nation are in his keeping. It is a supreme trust. While the people expect him to be deliberate, they do not expect him to waver and hesitate. While the responsibility is great, they expect it to be met unflinchingly and borne cheerfully, as weightier responsibilities have been borne by his predecessors.

Of course, we must have the facts. But the question is, haven't we got the facts, and good and plenty? Admission is the highest form of proof. The material facts as to the calculated, deliberate, and purposeful sacrifice of American lives, contrary to every treaty obligation, every principle of international law, and every dictate of humanity are officially admitted, and are the occasion of unconcealed jubilation in Berlin.

Bernstorff's advertised warning declared the existence of a war zone in direct conflict with the attitude of the United States on this subject.

It was as flagrant a breach of propriety as the appeal of Citizen Genet to the American people over the head of our State Department in the early part of the last century. I do not believe the opinion I have seen expressed by weighty legal authority, that it is a breach of our neutrality, to be an extreme view. The status of this rather tight-laced and hectic exemplar of Prussianism in our midst is something that should receive very prompt consideration.

There is no quibble about the facts. They are boastfully admitted. They should be put up squarely to Germany, with a demand for their instant disavowal, in so far as they constitute a continuing program. We should also demand suitable expressions of contrition for this disaster and a promise of full reparation and amendment of conduct in the future.

This is the only alternative to Germany's "strict accountability," which we have already proclaimed, for the sacrifice of human lives. It is a rather sad commentary upon the conduct of our foreign relations in the recent past, that the country today is pondering just what the phrase "strict accountability" means officially. The words have a sturdy ring. Have they been uttered with any mental reservation? Do they shroud some intention that falls far short of strict accountability?

The utterance of Attorney General Wickersham is a sane and patriotic expression of American feeling today. I heartily acquiesce in it. The convening of the World's Court Congress in Cleveland on Wednesday of this week is highly opportune. At a moment when many believe that the foundations of international law have crumbled and Germany proclaims herself bound by no law except necessity, a calm affirmation of the American belief in law as the foundation of justice among nations is timely and significant. The speeches of ex-President Taft and Judge Parker, to be delivered before the Congress on Wednesday, will be awaited with great interest in this critical juncture.

The editorials of yesterday and today in THE TIMES are in keeping with the best traditions of American journalism. I think they accurately reflect the feelings and the thought of the nation.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY.

New York, May 10, 1915.

WANTS ALL THE FACTS.

An Appeal for Time Carefully to Weigh the Evidence.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Because you do so much toward molding public opinion, you must also wish to keep in touch with it. For both reasons I am writing you concerning the disaster of yesterday. In wartime the sea is part of England's line of communication for her army, and supplies of war on this line must be attacked by her enemies if possible.

If the Lusitania carried war supplies, or had been habitually carrying them, her sinking was an act of war, even though the lives of non-combatants were put at stake. This act, is comparable to firing upon an enemy army advancing under cover of women and children driven before it.

This being Germany's obvious necessity, why cannot England carry war supplies in ships devoted to this purpose and carrying no passengers; or why at least do not innnocent persons refuse to stake their lives with the safety of munitions shipped to a country at war? Had the Lusitania been a passenger ship simply, her sinking would have been simply murder. Being a ship carrying war supplies, her destruction became a military necessity. If the German submarine commander could have accomplished her destruction without loss of life to the passengers, we may then condemn that act as piracy. We have not yet sufficient ground for such condemnation. The presence of any craft capable of attacking the submarine while the Lusitania's boats could have been put off, or the probability of the Lusitania carrying guns in her own protection, would have jeopardized the military end necessary to be accomplished, and at least mitigated the atrocity of an attack without warning.

Technical arguments on the historical status of a blockade are foolish. This war is being fought on a new scale and with new weapons. History cannot furnish a binding precedent for such unexampled conditions.

Germany has been made to appear in this country as a treaty-breaker, a marauder of the nearly defenseless, a savage in warfare, and now a murderer. The evidence on which these charges rest cannot have been sifted and weighed. If we give them credence, it behooves us to demand that our Government bring to us such evidence as will substantiate or repudiate these charges; for more than our opinion of the German nation is at stake. If true, they condemn Germany as the foe of all humanity, as an irresponsible and savage tyrant among nations. If true England's battle is our battle, and it would be both cowardly and foolish for us to stand aside while this issue is decided. Let us demand that our Government get and give us facts, sufficient to form the basis of a firm decision and if necessary of decisive action.

W. B. CIST.

New York, May 8, 1915.

Heine on German Joy of Battle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the fact that survivors of the Lusitania horror declare that no rescue ships appeared for two hours after the sinking, we may conclude that the German submarine Captain could, with perfect safety to himself, have given the crew and passengers an hour to leave the ship; but then he would not have had the satisfaction of killing. This trait of the German character was thoroughly appreciated by the German poet and seer, Heine, as in the following passage from his writings:

> Christianity—and this is its highest merit—has in some degree softened, but it could not destroy, the brutal German joy of battle. When once the taming talisman, the cross, breaks in two, the savagery of the old fighters, the senseless Berserker fury of which the northern poets sing and say so much, will gush up anew. That talisman is decayed, and the day will come when it will piteously collapse. Then the stone gods will rise from the ancient ruins and rub the dust of a thousand years from their eyes. Thor with his giant's hammer will at last spring up and shatter to bits the Gothic cathedrals.

It will be seen that Heine fully realized that German Christianity is but skin deep, but as long as it obtained credence among the rank and file of the nation it acted as an effective check and, as Heine himself says, "a taming talisman" to hold back the natural savagery of a still only half-cultivated race.

Trusts President to Keep Peace.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We feel sure that our rarely expedient President can be trusted not to involve a nation of innocent human beings in devastating war in avenging a few foolhardy individuals who, through their own shortage of average common sense (or egoism,) were overtaken in the recent disaster at sea.

PEOPLE WANT REPARATION

Too Late Merely to Require That Germany Change Her Methods of Warfare—Bryan's Bad Taste.

By WILLIAM WINTER.

New Brighton, May 10, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you afford to me, as an American citizen, space in your columns to register my protest against the cowardly, hideous crime committed yesterday by the German Imperial Government, in its deliberate murder of the helpless passengers on board the steamship Lusitania, and also against the supine tolerance with which some American officials (such as Senator William J. Stone of Missouri) and some American newspapers seem disposed to regard the unspeakable atrocity?

Your editorial judgment as to the course which our Government should now adopt toward Germany is, perhaps, not fully and rightly understood by me; it certainly has not yet been declared with your characteristic blunt plainness and decision, or with the power which some, at least, of your readers have naturally expected. No loyal American will complain of your wish that our procedure as a nation should not be "unreasonable or hasty," but, on the contrary, that it should be "the firm, wise course which justice, right, and honor demand." Many of your readers, however, of whom I am one, must feel amazement at the tone and drift of some parts of your editorial comment and protest this morning. "A demand must go from our Government," you say, "that the Imperial Government at Berlin shall no longer make war like savages drunk with blood, that they shall cease to seek attainment of their ends by the assassination of non-combatants and neutrals."

What have we, now, to do with "demands" that murders of our citizens should "cease"? Will all the demands in the world bring back life to those stark forms in Queenstown? An American vessel, the Frye, was sunk by a German naval officer, without reason or excuse; the American vessel Cushing was attacked by the German Government; an American citizen was murdered by the German Government in the sinking of the steamship Falaba; the American vessel Gulflight, flying the American flag, was torpedoed and partially wrecked by the German Government, and American citizens were thus slain. Now, scores of other American citizens have been murdered by Germany, in the utterly indefensible sinking of the Lusitania.

The Secretary of State, with a levity as shocking as it is vulgar, has stated that "the American people do not need to be told that this is not a time to rock the boat." The American people wish to know—and to know at once—whether the Government to which they have intrusted the administration of their national affairs does or does not intend to exact the utmost reparation (and poor, indeed, it must be at best!) for the inexpressible outrage which has been committed upon the persons of our citizens and for the arrogant insult to our national honor. That President Wilson's action in this crisis will be calm, judicial, firm, and in exact accordance with what he conceives to be the right and feels to be his duty nobody who knows his record will for a moment doubt. But there are millions today who wait in anxious expectation to have that conception of right and duty declared, in order that they may judge whether or not it conforms to what they require.

It is right, it is essential, that the formal communications of our Government to the German Imperial Government should be reasonably deliberate and diplomatically regular; but the essential facts in the present emergency are already known to the American people, and there can be no doubt as to what the meaning and the spirit of those communications should be.

Germany's answer to any protest, any "demand," we may make, in the premises, has already been made. She has denied our right to freedom in our relations with friendly powers—with Great Britain, France, Russia, and Belgium. As to the specific crime committed yesterday, there is no possibility of misunderstanding. The German Imperial Ambassador to the United States has already used the newspaper press of the United States as the medium of a threat—in itself amounting to a crime—notifying the American people that they exercise their inalienable rights on the sea at their own personal, individual peril, and without any chance of redress from the consequences of German barbarity. That insulting "warning" of danger from impending monstrosities appears again, this morning, in the New York press. Is our answer, in this matter, to be still words, words, words, signifying nothing?

Not very long ago, a man named Rosenthal, a gambler, was shot down in a street of New York, by paid assassins, for disregarding warnings that he must not dare to do what he had a perfect right to do. His murderers, actual or accessory, did not venture to plead, in extenuation, that he had been "warned." Yesterday, scores of innocent, reputable law-abiding American citizens, women as well as men, little children, and infants in arms, all supposedly secure under the safeguards of civilization and humanity, were deliberately, ruthlessly, murdered by the German Imperial Government, off the coast of Ireland. Would a hundred thousand German warnings of intention to murder our citizens be accepted as justification, or as excuse, for the commission of that unparalleled crime?

A few months ago an obscure, subaltern officer, in a half-civilized, guerrilla-like military force, offered an insult to the flag, and thus to the honor and dignity of the United States, and thereupon, though the act was disavowed by his superiors, United States military forces were—as rapidly as our wretchedly unprepared state permitted—landed in Vera Cruz. Yesterday, no insult was offered to the symbol of our honor and dignity, but our citizens were murdered by the score, snuffed out like vermin, by the proclaimed, authorized, acknowledged, and today, in Berlin, the celebrated and extolled act of the German Imperial Government. Mexico is weak; Germany is strong—as well as uncivilized and brutal. For years we, as a people, have boasted our freedom, our prowess, and our courage, till, at times, we have been insufferable. Yesterday, several dozen little American babies were drowned, like blind kittens, by Germany—and this evening the insufferable Ridder tells us that the dastardly crime by which they and more than a hundred of our men and women were slaughtered, "might become the great penetrating lesson for the American people." Are we to content ourselves with "demands" that such murders "shall cease?" Or are we to exact reparation and inflict punishment? Where does the Government of the United States stand today? By all means, let us have no national or individual flurry, but deep and burning anger, steadfast resolution, and celerity of action are not in the least incompatible with self-control and calm.

Where do the so-called American citizens of German origin or German proclivity stand on this matter? Every word that is uttered in justification or excuse of this German outrage, this cowardly and villainous slaughter of our citizens, is an intolerable insult to every honest American. Is it to be Germany, or the United States, that governs here?

In the old play of "The Rivals," Sir Lucius O'Trigger, contemptuously dismissing Acres, whose pusillanimous character he has discerned, ejaculates, "Why, Mr. Acres, y' are little better than a coward!" "Coward!" repeats Acres: "Coward? Gentlemen, you heard him: 'Coward' was the word—" "Well, Sir?" asks Sir Lucius. "Wel-l-l, Sir," says Acres. "I—I—I don't mind the word 'coward'; no, not at all. But if you had said 'poltroon'—" "Well, Sir?" again queries the resolute Irishman. "Wel-l-l," rejoins Acres, moving away with the best assumption of dignity that he can muster; "Wel-l-l, then I should have said, 'Sir Lucius O'Trigger, you are not the gentleman I took you for!'" Is the United States of America to become the Bob Acres of nations?

WILLIAM WINTER.

TO SEE IT THROUGH.

Restraint Must Not Wear the Guise of Cowardice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With you, as well as with executive officers of the United States, the state of public opinion upon our relations with Germany can hardly fail to be of interest. May I take the liberty of expressing my own opinion, therefore, and that of a number of intelligent men with whom I have talked in the last few days?

The recent series of provocations of the United States by Germany—the latest being the Lusitania's destruction—involving breaches of international law and of specific treaties, are growing intolerable. They can be explained only by a desire on the part of Germany for war with the United States or an utter indifference to whether or not they may provoke war. Germany is an outlaw; and outlaws are indifferent to public opinion.

Our Government must meet the present crisis firmly and promptly. Otherwise the Falaba, Cushing, Gulflight and Lusitania cases will be but the prelude to similar happenings. While it is well to discuss such a situation in a spirit of restraint, we ought not to shut our eyes to the facts or refuse to consider what is necessary to be done now. On the contrary, sober but frank consideration is most necessary at such a time. To discharge its duty to the American people, so as to secure their persons and property and to prevent a recurrence of such attacks upon Americans and their property, the least the State Department can demand is an undertaking that such attacks will not be made hereafter. This is the least the American people will be satisfied with. It is the least their duly constituted authorities can ask them to be satisfied with without betraying the trust which has been reposed in them.

Is there any great likelihood that Germany will accede to such a demand? To concede such contentions would involve a serious impairment, if not a total abandonment, of the whole scheme of the so-called submarine blockade of England. Can we think that any such about-face will be executed by Germany?

Our demands (to make which we are committed both by our note to Germany of Feb. 10, 1915, and by our duty to protect our citizens and their property in the lawful enjoyment of their rights of travel and trade) will probably then be refused. How they can be enforced after such refusal save by escorting our ships, and English and French ships, carrying American passengers, by our own naval forces, which will of course attack any German naval forces they may meet, it is hard to see. This is war.

These perfectly obvious considerations are not advanced for any other purpose than to show you what I and thousands of other Americans are thinking. And I can assure you—and you can assure the country—that we will not shrink from war if that is the only effective course to secure our rights. Our ancestors began war upon England in 1812 for no greater—probably much less—injuries than those now being inflicted upon us by Germany.

There rests upon us all—and especially upon the great newspapers of this country—the duty at this moment of assuring the Executive of the United States that he will have the fullest support in all necessary steps to abate once and for all the menace of German illegal naval operations. Much as we abhor war, the Government of this country should be assured that we will fight for our rights and that we prefer seeing them maintained by force to seeing them abandoned or compromised.

Nothing would be more shameful than submission to the tyranny which is now being attempted by Germany. Restraint of expression in your editorial columns is never more admirable than at such a moment. But it must not be a restraint which may be construed by other nations as cowardice—which may on that very account hasten a decision by the Government of Germany to reject the demands we shall presently make. Neither must you, by too cautious comment, cause the authorities of the United States to doubt the courage of the American people and their determination to see this matter through at any cost.

I respectfully submit that this is a most opportune time to announce that if our forthcoming demands are refused in any material particulars the authorities of this country can count on the warmest support from its citizens for a recourse to arms to enforce our rights, and may equally expect the condemnation of all Americans if they fail to protect by force the lives and property of their fellow citizens.

ALEXANDER GORDON.

FIRM ASSURANCE!

Of What Use to Ask and of What Avail to Accept It?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I must dissent from the general position taken in the last paragraph in your leading editorial of Monday. We have Germany's official pronouncements—in her declaration concerning the "war zone" around Great Britain and Ireland, in her reiteration of it in reply to our "protest," in her sinking of the Falaba with an American—whose death we suppose the Administration is still "calmly considering" a month after the event—in her attack on the Cushing, in her sinking of the Gulflight, in the threat issued officially by the German Embassy under guise of a "warning," and in the ruthless ferocity of the Lusitania horror. In the name of humanity, how can THE TIMES, in face of these facts, ask for "firm assurance from Germany," etc.? THE TIMES knows that no such assurance as it asks will be given. The latest impudent note from the German Government to ours, the justification of the slaughter of Americans offered by the military attaché of the German Embassy, the attitude of the German Ambassador himself, the continued "breathing of threatening and slaughter" by that insolent and undesirable alien Dernburg, the insufferable defiance of American sentiment by Ridder et al. are all indications to which THE TIMES cannot afford to be willfully blind.

Here are three facts:

1. The world-peril is not yellow, nor Slavic, but Teutonic. Germans in Europe and America are even counting on and threatening civil war in America if we defend our own citizens' lives.
2. In a "friendly" country the German Embassy issues official threats against the citizens of that country under guise of "warning" and justifies the execution of those threats by the fact that they had been issued.
3. Our Administration complacently permits the threats, even calls them "humanitarian" (if Mr. Bryan is correctly quoted), and three days after the atrocious deed is still "calmly considering"!

This is no time for calm consideration. The need is for sharp, decisive action. We cannot parley with an outlaw—individual or nation. The German Embassy should be closed by the instant issuance of passports to its members. Mr. Dernburg should be deported as a mischievous and wicked alien. And to "hyphenated Americans" generally it should be made clear that treason to the land of their adoption will not for them be well.

We can "support the President" only as he guards the lives of Americans and protects national honor, and does it without unnecessary procrastination.

AMERICA IS URGED TO SPEAK OUT NOW

TIME TO STAND FOR RIGHT

By A MEMBER OF THE JUDICIARY.

New York, May 10, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In discussing the sinking of the Lusitania, let us all distinguish between the transaction and its incidents. That there were American citizens among her passengers was an incident merely; they happened to be there, they might have been elsewhere. The transaction would be precisely the same legally and morally if every one of her peaceful passengers, men, women, and children, was a British subject.

First, then, as to the transaction: Reference to any and all elementary textbooks on international law shows that it was contrary to the laws of war as they have been accepted for generations by all nations who were civilized but not yet kultured. Germans will assert that it was a lawful act of war, but just at present they are in such a frame of mind that their judgment upon a legal proposition is of no especial intellectual value. We have proof of that this morning. Dr. Dernburg is a man of brains; even those of us who, having read every one of his published deliverances during the past few months, are satisfied that he is an unfair controversialist, admit that he has brains, plenty of them, and well-trained brains, too. Nevertheless he passes out to us the silly proposition that the Lusitania was an armed belligerent cruiser, and as such might properly be sunk at sight.

That the transaction is one abhorrent to most of us in this country one need not waste ink to set forth. But unlawful, wicked, and abhorrent though it be, it was not a bolt out of a clear sky. It is merely the culmination of a succession of transactions equally unlawful, wicked, and abhorrent which have been presented to us since the beginning of last August. Perhaps one should not say "culmination"; what other novelties in slaughter the war lords may have yet to exhibit no one can tell.

Now, except for China, we are the largest neutral nation and—potentially at least—the most powerful. For years we have been in the forefront of every effort to promote peace, and, if wars must come, so to mitigate their terrors that they might be confined so far as possible to a trial of strength between armed forces. When this series of transactions began to unfold itself before the eyes of the world, there were many of us who felt that from the neutral nations there should come some prompt denunciation of all efforts to thrust the world back to the abominations of past centuries; and that this country was the natural spokesman.

Why any such suggestion should alarm our peace-loving fellow-citizens I for one could never understand. Righteous indignation may make it one's duty—that is, if one really stands for progress in civilization—to condemn and reprove, without necessarily having to slip off one's coat and undertake physical correction.

The spokesman of our country, however, concluded differently; in his opinion, carefully thought out and conscientiously formed, silence seemed the better course. The transactions took place thousands of miles from our shores, they affected our people only indirectly, and so from this nation, as a nation, there came no word of righteous indignation, and the rest of the world has been left to form its conceptions of where we stand, what are our conceptions of right and wrong, what we consider righteous warfare and what unrighteous and abhorrent—from tabulating the deliverancies of individual newspapers.

This time, however, and when the Falaba went down, (the Gulflight presents a different question,) our citizens have been directly affected by the transaction. What is to be done about that is a matter on which no suggestion is here advanced; it is a problem for the Administration to determine—wisely, we all hope. But surely now the time has come when we should proclaim in no uncertain terms what we as a nation—the nation we love, the nation of our pride, the nation we fondly hope to see always in the foremost files of civilization, progress and humanity—what we think of transactions which indicate a reverter to barbarism. Let us speak out now, or else hereafter ever hold our peace.

THIS COUNTRY'S POWER.

What Its Enormous Industrial Resources Would Mean in War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Polled of London writes: "As far as the military conduct of the war is concerned, America's belligerency can affect it but little; * * * her coming into the war could not protect other Americans, nor can she do much to avenge the outrage."

Mr. Polled lacks imagination. I can see every rolling mill in these United States turned over to the single purpose of producing big guns. I can see every pound of available machinery utilized for the full twenty-four hours of each day, and every day. I can see Germany's best and biggest artillery duplicated a hundred times over, not for defense, because Germany is as powerless to invade us as she is to invade the north pole. I can see great ships that once flew the German flag delivering American ordnance on French, Belgian, Dutch, Danish, Italian, Norwegian and Swedish soil in such overwhelming quantities that a steel wall will be built around the Germanic empires—with the Germans inside.

How long would outraged Norway and Holland and Denmark remain out of the world movement to stamp out a world menace, once America initiated such a movement? Possibly thirty minutes, but probably not that long.

Germany complains that we are prolonging the war by furnishing arms and ammunition to the Allies. Compare the picayune quantity that individual American manufacturers are now selling, with the enormous output that would result from a great, united, national operation; an operation that would discontinue for the time being the manufacture of rails, bridges, structural steel, locomotives and touring cars and would instead turn out nothing but guns and ammunition. No longer could Germany complain that we are prolonging the war. It would be over rather promptly.

Says British Were Reckless.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Titanic disaster was due solely to British recklessness. So also upon the British Government must rest the responsibility for the loss of American lives in the Lusitania disaster.

The American passengers were warned collectively and individually of what was to happen to the Lusitania upon this voyage. They persisted on their journey, not with wanton disregard of their lives, but because of their reliance upon British assurances. And now we read in The London Times that there was no convoy or possibility of a convoy. The British have met the submarine with the same fatuous recklessness with which they met the iceberg, and with a like result. Upon the British must now be visited the responsibility which they have assumed by their wanton misrepresentations.

WHY GERMANY DARES.

Mr. Nichol Says She Thinks We Have Fallen Low.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The most ostentatious and dastardly murder in history has just been committed in the torpedoing of the Lusitania—the most shameless affront flung in the face of heaven and of men. What is to follow?

Germany has undertaken to reimpose on the civilized world, whose conscience ages ago revolted from it, the ferocious and immoral dogma that in a time of war helpless noncombatants—belligerents and non-belligerents alike; men, women, and children; priests and laity—may be lawfully butchered in cold blood, singly or wholesale, to illustrate power or impress terror. Is the civilized world prepared tamely to assent to this? Is America?

America, the greatest of the neutral nations, has, as the tale of her dead witnesses, an interest beyond all others in the answer.

If there be one thing more amazing than the blind brutality of such a doctrine and such a crime it is the insolent assurance with which it is justified to the fellow-countrymen of the victims. Because Germany, intrenched at Washington in the inviolable sanctuary accorded by man from the beginning to a foreign embassy, deigned to forewarn American citizens that unless they abandoned that neutrality which their President's proclamation enjoined and became active participants in Germany's interest by boycotting British shipping Germany would torpedo them. Therefore, forsooth, they must take their torpedoing calmly, since they disregarded the warning! In any case—deny it who dares—"These red hands are clean!"

Could cynical insult to a friendly nation go further? Is not Germany coolly assuming that this great-hearted nation, who freed its slaves with its blood, has fallen low enough to amerce the lives of its murdered free citizens in dollars—mayhap, split cents? And will she? And what of the world at large?

Throughout this war, and especially in this latest outrage, Germany has remorselessly trampled under foot the law of nations, the law of humanity, and the law of God. What sentence for her remains but the ban of outlawry—proclaimed in every tongue under heaven?

Whether the civilized world—that old entity, the orbis terrarum—still exists; whether she has the courage and the power to promulge and enforce such sentence, remains to be seen. If not, then, indeed, civilization is dead and will, if the world lasts long enough, have to be rebuilt, not only de novo—afresh, but ab radice—from the very roots. Which will be a long task!

WOULD ISOLATE GERMANY.

A Correspondent Thinks That Would Soon End the War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The act of destroying a merchant vessel on the high seas, in which the lives and property of neutrals were wantonly destroyed, is equivalent to a declaration of war against these neutrals. They are justified in seeking redress, independent of the belligerents now engaged in war and without espousing their cause.

The most effective way of doing this and also of terminating the war and compelling Germany to sue for peace is by an agreement between all neutral countries who alike have been and are affected by this barbarous procedure on the part of Germany:

(a) Sever all diplomatic relations with Germany; hand its Ambassadors their passports and recall the respective neutral representatives in Germany.

(b) Ask Germany to appoint some other country to represent it in belligerent countries, and if it does not, refuse longer to represent Germany in such countries.

(c) Prohibit the importation from or exportation to Germany of any article of commerce whatsoever, whether contraband or non-contraband.

(d) Prohibit every person, male or female, from going to Germany from any neutral country.

(e) Prohibit any person, male or female, except citizens of neutrals, from going to any neutral country from Germany.

(f) Permit no mail of any kind to go to or come from Germany to any neutral country.

(g) Permit no cable or wireless messages to be sent to or to be received from Germany.

(h) Destroy any wireless station now communicating with Germany.

In other words, completely isolate Germany and Austria from every intercourse or communication with any neutral country. The belligerents will of their own accord pursue the same course. The effect of this will bring Germany to terms and end the war in a few months.

THE USE OF GOOD COUNSEL.

A Suggestion That the President Summon the Nation's Wise Men.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As simply one of a great number who have come to look to your editorial page for that quiet mind, and that broad sympathy expressed in your leader of today's issue, entitled "Stand by the President," may I secure your influence in bringing to the notice of the President a suggestion which must be everywhere in the minds of the people without regard to political preferences. He is confronted by a perplexing problem which is almost without parallel. It is not his private problem. It is not his party's problem. It is the problem of the whole people. It calls for a wisdom, a force, and a restraint, which are seldom to be found in any one man. It involves the fortune of a nation—as well as the fortunes of 100,000,000 individuals.

Could the President more entirely enlist the sympathy and support of such a multitude with such a variety of interests, than by calling into consultation men who have already proved themselves capable in meeting international problems, irrespective of party affiliations! One need "name no names."

Whatever the decision of those in authority may be, it ought to voice the will of the whole people, and it must derive its chief effectiveness from that fact. The democracy of England and the democracy of France have established such a precedent, in calling even the opposition into their councils.

IF THE WORLD SUBMITTED.

That Would Be for Civilization to Invite Its Doom.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Germans' claim that they were justified in sinking the Lusitania, in the way they did, because she was carrying a cargo of arms and ammunition, will not hold water. They knew that the ship was crowded with innocent passengers, including many Americans; they knew the name of every person aboard; they knew that there were hundreds of women, and scores of children and infants among the passengers, since they were perfectly aware that their warning had not been taken seriously because nobody, in this age of the world, could believe that it was seriously meant, and yet, with the heartlessness of savages, they executed their awful threat! When they aver that it would have defeated their purpose to give warning before launching their torpedoes, and that, under the conditions of submarine warfare, it was impossible for them to take off non-combatants before sinking the ship, they condemn their own system by showing that it cannot be put into practice without violating every law of human intercourse, including the laws of war itself! If the civilized world permits these late-come Huns to destroy, for their own ruthless purposes, the safeguards of peaceful humanity, then the civilized world will simply invite the doom which Prussian militarism meditates for it.

DEFENDS GERMANY FOR RETALIATING

Advocate of Teuton Warfare Says We Have Grievance Against Britain.

INNOVATIONS ON BOTH SIDES

New Conditions Have Caused Great Conflict to be Waged in Ways Hitherto Unknown.

New York, May 10, 1915.

There can be no doubt that the American citizens and other persons who took passage on the Lusitania had ample warning of what was going to happen to them. The action taken by the German Ambassador to save them from their fate was so strenuous that it brought down criticism on the Embassy as officious. Yet THE TIMES and other New York papers represent the destruction of the vessel as without warning. It may have been unlawful, it may have been inhuman, it may have been, as THE TIMES has it, "assassination," or as The Herald has it, "wholesale murder," but whatever it was, it certainly was not without warning.

The people who took passage on this boat had their own reasons for disregarding the warning. THE TIMES may be presumed to have inside information as to what the reasons were or rather what the reason was, for it assigns but one reason, that these people did not believe that the German Government meant what it said through its Ambassador: "Travelers sailing in the war zone on ships of Great Britain or her allies do so at their own risk;" in other words, that they took the proclamation of warning as empty bluster, as a bluff.

I do not believe that they were the victims of any such delusion, that they had any illusions as to the inhumanity with which this war is being waged. I believe that they expected the Germans to sink the British vessel if they could, but that they counted or gambled on the Germans not being able to do it.

Our people chose to disregard the warning, just as they disregard warnings againts stepping on and off cars when in motion, against riding on platforms, against speeding in motor cars, against going to sea in threatening or dangerous weather, &c. It is their sporting instinct that makes them have their way in such things; and that quality will, I confidently believe, keep us from unseemly resentment against Germany for the shocking, tragic loss of the Lusitania.

As to the law of war in the case, Germany and the United States do not agree. Germany asserts the right to sink British vessels within the war zone, at the risk of drowning non-combatants, British or neutral, who, being warned of the danger to which such vessels are exposed, may be on board of them. The United States, I understand, denies or questions that right. Neither party to this difference can be regarded as disinterested or impartial. The issue is of greater importance to Germany than it is to the United States, and so as between the two, the one to decide it, if either is to decide it alone, would seem to be Germany.

In endeavoring to decide it for ourselves, it will not do to say that the view taken by Germany is unprecedented, a departure from all known rules of war. This war is unprecedented in many respects. Not only is it grander in the forces deployed and the interests at stake, it is technically more different from the war preceding it than any other that we know of. As a consequence, it has produced more innovations than any other war. Great Britain, for instance, has adopted the practice of taking ships into port for search instead of searching them, as heretofore, on the high seas; she arrests civilians on neutral vessels as reservists and takes them off as prisoners; she seizes mail packages that contain contraband of war; she intercepts contraband going to a neutral port and no other; or going to the civilian population of a country not blockaded; and makes a "military area" of the North Sea. These innovations we accept or submit to, as developments of so-called international law.

Now, when Germany makes a new departure in the conduct of war by declaring a war zone about the British Islands, are we justified in saying that she should not do it because it has never been done before?

Whatever may be said against the killing of non-combatants without warning, there is little for denouncing such action when ample warning has been given. A law of war prohibits the poisoning of an enemy, but it allows the poisoning of a well, provided that notice of the poisoning is posted over it. The same principle may be applied to the sinking of ships by mines and submarines in naval war zones.

Germany is doing to Great Britain what Great Britain is doing to Germany, trying to starve the whole population of the country—men, women and children; just what we or any other nation who should be at war with Great Britain would try to do, and what Great Britain for at least half a century has been expecting any nation with which she might be at war to do to her. It is the foundation of her traditional two-power naval policy.

So, on the ground of humanity as well as on that of so-called international law, if we have a grievance against Germany, we have at least as great a one against Great Britain.

No wonder the President is reported to be taking solitary walks pondering on the problem of the Lusitania. We may expect that he will find a peaceful and an honorable solution of it, provided he does not try to deprive Germany of the effective use of her submarines; in other words, to tie her right hand behind her back.

IMPOTENCE MAY GRIEVE.

Therefore, Says Agnes Repplier, Appoint a Day of Mourning.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Should not a day of mourning be observed for the murdered passengers of the Lusitania? If we may not express resentment, we may voice at least our sorrow and our sympathy. Hitherto we have borne the misfortunes of others as tranquilly as even Mr. Wilson could desire, but now our placidity is jarred. We are, as our German friends laughingly remind us, "impotent," but even impotence can grieve. And if we seek for comfort we shall not find it in unconcern, but in the recollection of a truth derided by victorious Germany: "It is better to be Abel than Cain."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Suppose that Japan, having announced a Monroe Doctrine—Asia for the Asatics—declares that the United States should give up the Island of Guam to her because it lies nearer to the coast of Asia than it does to our own coast, and her demand results in a war between the two nations. England, as Japan's ally, also declares war on the United States. England blockades our ports and augments her base of supplies at Halifax by the importation of large quantities of war material from France, a neutral country, on board of her own auxiliary steamers commanded by naval reserve officers, the vessels, for the time being, carrying passengers. A number of the citizens of Holland take passage on board of one of the ships in spite of a warning not to do so. Shall the United States be debarred from using her submarines to sink one of these vessels, the only recourse left her, because it will endanger the lives of neutral noncombatants?

FACING IT SQUARELY.

It Were Better to Suffer Like Belgium Than to Accept Dishonor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is the business of the President of the United States to act in accordance with the direction of the people. In a crisis such as now exists, it is the function of the press to learn and to express the sentiments of the people.

I believe there is in the country a deep undercurrent of feeling among quiet and thoughtful people that our honor is in need of vindication and that the United States should do its part toward re-establishing in the world the principles of civilization as we know them and as all civilized peoples have recognized them until recently. It is for the press to learn if this be true and, if true, to express it, to the end that the nation be not misrepresented.

Let me speak of the subject merely as one of many million men who together constitute the nation.

We, in this country, respected the German people. We saw their sturdy qualities as represented by our German citizenship. We had no political or commercial rivalry with them. We wished them well.

At the outbreak of the war, we learned that underlying all sense of justice and humanity, the force called "military necessity" controlled. Germany broke her word for "military necessity." She exterminated a nation against which she had no grievance, and asked the world to accept it because of "military necessity." When Germany was whipped at sea by the superior naval strength of England, instead of accepting an honorable defeat, she propounded rules of warfare of her own making, and directed us to accept them because of her "military necessity." Up to this point, we tried, in friendship, to accommodate our point of view to that of Germany, but we could not succeed. We kept ourselves aloof from action against Germany by holding tightly to the position of neutrality. But we were not blind and we have judged Germany by our standards of integrity and found her wanting. We do not break our contracts. We do not exterminate weaker nations for our own advantage. We have a standard which respects an oath and calls murder by its right name.

We are now face to face with a question which neutrality will not permit us to escape. Either one hundred of our people have been murdered by direction of the German Government or we are compelled to recognize as a new law, that when German "military necessity" requires it our conception of murder must be revised.

By all means let us consider the subject quietly without undue haste and free from the first burst of passion which follows a tragedy. Let us avoid the hysteria which led us to begin the Spanish War. But let us be insistent and relentless in reaching our conclusion. It is of comparatively small importance that our people have died. But it is of vast importance for ourselves and our children that we should not permit our honor to be stained or the civilization which we have worked and fought for to be overthrown. We have peace, prosperity, comfort. Thus far, we have had an honorable standing among nations. But I would rather see the country suffer the fate of Belgium than accept the dishonor which Germany has put upon us.

NOT A LUSITANIA HOLIDAY.

German Schools Always Close on Saturday Afternoons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In connection with your publication of a dispatch from Geneva to the effect that a half-holiday from school was given to German school children in celebration of the sinking of the Lusitania, it may be of interest to your readers to know that there have never been school sessions on Saturday afternoons in any part of Germany, and that therefore, the news of the sinking of the Lusitania, which could only reach Germany on Saturday (the ship sank on Friday afternoon) could scarcely have been celebrated as reported in the schools. The Saturday afternoon school holiday in Germany has obtained for generations; there is a popular doggerel in which Frederick the Great is mocked by a schoolboy whom he told to go to school, because:

> Der alte Fritz will Koenig sein,
> Und weiss noch nicht zu dieser Frist
> Dass Samstags keine Schule ist!
>
> (Old Fritz would be King,
> And does not know even at this late day
> That there is no school on Saturdays.)

I call this error to your attention lest it be misinterpreted by some blind folk as another intentional attempt of THE TIMES to "poison public opinion," instead of being attributed simply to the unreliable "news with a purpose" that occasionally finds its way from Geneva, Constantinople, and some other European capitals on both sides of the mess.

HOLDS GERMANY BLAMELESS

Americans Said to Defy Danger in Sailing on British Ships.

Just a few lines to answer your foolish article on the first column of Page 11 of THE TIMES of this morning.

People who enter the war zone around England and Ireland are in precisely the same position as though they undertook to ride in an automobile between the trenches of the belligerents with an English flag over them.

Any American sailing on a British ship into this zone defies the danger and deserves no more consideration than a man who insists on going to the front as a non-combatant.

Although your paper may be subsidized to help mold public opinion, its articles are so flimsy that you are hardly earning the money. The willingness seems to be present but the ability to write a sensible article seems to be lacking. The paper should be able to hire a man whose reasoning is more logical to be convincing.

"Erste Streich."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In The German Journal this morning I saw Dr. Dernburg quoted as calling this the "erste Streich." Those who are familiar with Busch's humorous classic of the two bad boys, Max and Moritz, will find in that allusion a peculiar brutality. It is like turning a ragged-edged knife in a wound. To speak of this wholesale murder blithely as the "first prank" and intimate that the second will follow immediately is cold-blooded beyond relief. (Max and Moritz, as many of your readers know, is an account of the seven pranks performed by these famous young imps. As each "Streich" is concluded the author tells us that the next one "follows immediately." The seventh prank ends disastrously for Max and Moritz and they meet a poetic justice in their unlamented end.) Does Dr. Dernburg mean his allusion to be taken prophetically? Are we to have "seven" of these "pranks" before Germany is stopped?

A Defective Warning.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Dernburg says the Lusitania was a British auxiliary cruiser. If that was the case, why did not the German Embassy protest to the United States and cause the internment of the big Cunarder? He also says the Lusitania carried munitions of war for the Allies, which undoubtedly she did. But, if that was Germany's sole reason for sinking the Lusitania, why did not the German Embassy make its warning so specific that prospective passengers would really have been warned?

SAYS GERMANY GOT TIP ON CONTRABAND

DEFENDS TORPEDO ATTACK

Old Rule of Giving Notice to Captured Ships Now Impracticable, It Is Held.

Carl L. Schurz, son of the late General Carl Schurz, in a statement he gave out yesterday, news of which came to the newspaper offices through the German Information Service, asserted that when the Lusitania sailed from New York a week ago last Saturday on her last voyage, "the German Government was informed that the liner had on board contraband of war." How this information was transmitted to the Berlin authorities, whether by wireless or by cable, he did not disclose, nor did he give his authority for this statement.

Mr. Schurz's statement was an attempt to justify Germany's act in torpedoing the Cunarder. Germany cannot be held responsible, he argues, for the great loss of non-combatant lives as a result of the sinking of the liner, since the passengers were fully warned and, therefore, in his opinion, took their lives in their own hands when they embarked. The lawyer, it was stated, gave out his interview at the request of the German Information Service of 30 East Forty-second Street.

"The facts of the sinking of the Lusitania," said Mr. Schurz, "so far as they have reached us up to the present time, are briefly these:

"The Lusitania, a British steamship, was sunk off the coast of Ireland, and within the waters declared by Germany to be a war zone, by a German submarine. A large majority of her crew and passengers perished—among the latter a number of Americans.

Contraband on Board.

"It is established that she had on board a large amount of absolute contraband, consisting of 5,471 cases of ammunition and cartridges, 189 packages of military goods and considerable quantities of contraband metals. Moreover, according to a statement of Dr. John Braun, a chemist of Pittsburgh, she had in her holds 250,000 pounds of tetra-chloride, a chemical used for generating asphyxiating gases.

"The German Government was informed that the Lusitania had absolute contraband on board when she sailed from this port.

"According to the established rules of international law, a belligerent is justified in destroying an enemy's merchant vessel, carrying contraband of war, if he is unable to bring her into a friendly port. If there is doubt as to whether the cargo is contraband or not, the attacking vessel has the right of search; but this is a right not an obligation that need not be exercised, if the nature of the cargo is known.

"Another rule, generally recognized up to the present war, was that the attacking vessel give warning to the merchantman before destroying her, in order to give the passengers and crew sufficient opportunity to save themselves. It is, however, very doubtful whether, in view of the contention of the belligerents that the modern weapons of warfare made a change of the old rules unavoidable, this particular rule can still be said to hold good at present.

General Blockade Order.

"The first move of importance in the direction of such a change was made by Great Britain when, last November, she established a general blockade of German ports—not a 'close' or 'effective' blockade, confined to specific German ports, in accordance with the established rules of international law, but one extending to adjacent seas. She claimed a right to this action by reason of the changes and the conditions of modern warfare. In this new form of blockade our Government has, practically, acquiesced and has put itself on record, in an official utterance, as inclining to the view that a strict adherence to the old rules is, in some respects, no longer practicable:

> The Government of the United States is, of course, not oblivious to the great changes which have occurred in the conditions and means of naval warfare since the rules hitherto governing legal blockade were formulated. It might be ready to admit that the old form of 'close' blockade, with its cordon of ships in the immediate offing of the blockaded ports is no longer practicable in the face of an enemy possessing the means and opportunities to make an effective defense by the use of submarines, mines, and air craft.

"Great Britain thus arbitrarily and deliberately violated one of the formerly recognized principles of international law in order to make more effective her avowed purpose of preventing the importation of foodstuffs into Germany and of thereby starving out the German nation.

Inference Was Clear.

"It is only natural and reasonable that Germany should retaliate; and this she did, in February, by declaring the waters around the coasts of Great Britain a war zone and by giving notice to the world that it was her intention to sink all enemy ships encountered in these waters. The warning was accompanied by the assurance that every effort would be made to spare neutral lives and property, but the inference was perfectly clear that occasion might arise when that would be impossible, and that, therefore, neutrals would themselves assume the risk of traveling or shipping merchandise on ships of German's enemies traversing the said war zone. * * *

"Since then both countries have consistently continued acting in accordance with their respective plans of naval warfare. England has maintained the hitherto unknown condition of a general blockade. Germany, on the other hand, has pursued her submarine campaign against her enemies' war and merchant vessels. Her general warning that her submarines would sink enemy vessels encountered within the proclaimed war zone without any further notice has been followed by almost daily reminders of her serious intent and of the imminent peril to those on board of such vessels.

End of the Old Rule.

"The neutral world was thus fully aware that the old rule of giving notice to captured enemy vessels in each particular case, now impracticable because of the particular nature of submarine warfare, would no longer be adhered to by Germany, having replaced it by her general announcement. Moreover, the German Embassy in Washington has published broadcast notices in which the danger of sailing on English ships was once more specially emphasized.

"It can, therefore, not be questioned that the passengers of the Lusitania were fully warned, first by Germany's official note of February last, then by each separate example of the seriousness of her intention, and, finally, by the notice of the German Embassy. If, in spite of all this, they trusted to the speed of the ship and to the protection of the British Navy against a probable German submarine attack, they did so at their own risk.

"If it is true that Germany has deviated from the old rules of international law, by substituting a general warning for a special or individual one, did not England change the rules first in the case of her proclaimed general blockade? And if the act of the one nation is regarded with complaisance, is it fair that the act of the other be unreservedly condemned as inhuman, because, most unhappily, American lives were lost?

"Now is the time when, above all else, we should not permit the shock that so great a loss of life must inevitably cause, to cloud our judgment, or let sorrow or resentment lead us to acts or utterances which may have most serious consequences. On the other hand, it seems imperative that we should earnestly endeavor to prevent the recurrence of such a disaster, and does not the solution lie in the consummation of the plan of mediation proposed by our Government to England and to Germany when the rules of international law were first changed by them? We should not meekly acquiesce that the Declaration of London is a dead letter, but see to it, if necessary, in concert with the other neutral nations, that all the belligerents live up to the rules of that declaration."

LEGISLATURES ACT ON NATION'S DUTY

Texas Senate Pledges Support to Wilson — Tennessee Also Trusts the President.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10.—Six resolutions were introduced today in the Texas Legislature on the Lusitania, one Senate resolution suggesting severance of diplomatic relations with Germany. The others expressed confidence in President Wilson. Action on all the resolutions was delayed until tomorrow.

The Senate, in which five resolutions were introduced, including that for diplomatic severance, compromised by adopting a resolution pledging support to President Wilson "in any course he sees fit to take to uphold the dignity and honor of the United States."

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 10.—Both houses of the Legislature this afternoon adopted a joint resolution on the sinking of the Lusitania after warnings had been given against "rocking the boat." The resolution finally adopted by both houses originated in the Senate and replaced a resolution originating in the House, where Representative Clyde Shropshire, former Consul to Paris, told the excited Representatives that the President of the United States should know that the State was behind him in any crisis. The Senate's resolution was of a milder type than the Shropshire resolution, which first received consideration. The later resolution follows:

Whereas, The people of the State of Tennessee and the whole nation have been shocked beyond all manner of expression by the dastardly deed of Germany in murdering the citizens of the United States, defenseless men, women and children, aboard the unarmed mercantile ship, an act so cruel and cowardly that the premeditated murderer who kills from ambush stands out in comparison like an honored hero, and

Whereas, This God-fearing and peace-loving nation that "remembered the Maine" will not forget the Lusitania, but with patience and fortitude will calmly meet and do her full duty in the face of such hideous and diabolical piracy; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Tennessee, the Senate concurring, That we renew our allegiance to Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, in full confidence in his wisdom and patience, pledge the people of Tennessee to abide by whatever course his calm judgment dictates, knowing full well that, guided by an all wise Providence, he will act with all fairness in keeping with the time honored prestige which has always preserved and maintained the honor and dignity of this great nation.

HARRISBURG, Penn., May 10.—This resolution was introduced in the House of Representatives tonight. No action was taken:

Whereas, On the 7th day of May the Lusitania, a transatlantic passenger vessel, carrying neither guns or other weapons of war, was attacked by a submarine belonging to the German Nation, and without warning or opportunity to escape, sent to the bottom of the sea many hundreds of defenseless men, women, and children, and among them more than one hundred American people, and

Whereas, Such a deed unknown to the laws of war or the principles of civilization constitutes a personal affront to the American Nation and calls for such action on the part of this country as will secure the speediest reparation and a guarantee against recurrence; therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, That this House condemns the action of the German Nation as a dastardly deed worthy of none save but a barbarous and uncivilized people; that the detestable act being a personal affront to this nation calls from the President of the United States the most drastic action in securing from the German Nation an apology for its barbarous conduct, reparation to the fullest degree for the destruction of the American lives and property, and an unconditional guarantee that its heinous conduct manifested in this cowardly deed will never again be permitted to occur; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States.

5,000 FROM AMERICA TO SUBMARINE ZONE

NO HALT TO COMMERCE

Careful estimates by shipping men show that there are now more than 100 ships from American ports at sea, bound for destinations that will take them within the range of German submarine activity.

On these ships there are about 2,350 passengers. The crews will total as many more, so that within the next fortnight nearly 5,000 persons from the United States will be exposed to German attack.

The announcement that the Cunard Line intends to put the Mauretania into service between Liverpool and New York shows that those who wish to risk the crossing are to be accommodated. The announcement was posted yesterday in the Anchor Line office that the Tuscania, the best steamship of the company's fleet had sailed on Sunday from Liverpool with 36 saloon, 130 second, and 75 third class passengers.

Neutral Flags Popular.

One effect of the sinking of the Lusitania is the increased popularity of vessels flying the neutral flags. The American liner Philadelphia left on Saturday with 410 cabin and 500 steerage passengers. She will probably reach the war zone early on Saturday morning. The Transylvania of the Anchor Line will pass through the war zone on Sunday. She left here on Friday, after the sinking of the Lusitania had become known. She is bound for Liverpool and has 117 saloon, 310 second and 452 third class passengers. The Espagne of the French Line is bound for Bordeaux, a course which will take her out of immediate danger, but not out of the possibility of meeting a German submarine. She left on Saturday and has on board 80 first, 60 second and 110 third class passengers.

No Effect on Freights.

The activity of German submarines will have little influence on over-sea freights, a shipping man said yesterday. Whatever the effect may be on passenger trade, he said, supplies are urgently wanted in Europe, and with war-risk insurance and the British merchant marine to carry it there will be no blockade of freight.

The 100 ships now sailing on courses that will take them within the sphere of submarine activity are bound out from every large American Atlantic port. They are loaded to capacity with supplies of every description. With the opening of the St. Lawrence there will also be great shipping activity through the ports of Quebec and Montreal.

The Cunard liner Carpathia passed Nantucket yesterday bound from here to Montreal, where she is to be used as a troop ship. She follows the Cameronian of the Anchor Line, which was recently released from service between New York and Liverpool. Another big vessel withdrawn from the passenger trade to carry troops is the White Star liner Megantic, which is in Montreal loading men and supplies.

The Leelanaw, American, for Gothenburg, is on her way from Galveston with a cargo of 6,000 bales of cotton for transshipment to Vladivostok, valued at $358,000. This is the first shipment made by this route, and is regarded as an experiment. From the same port the British steamship Meltonia is carrying cotton to Liverpool. The steamship Nirlan, of the Leyland Line sailed from Boston on May 7 with 500 horses intended for the British Army. Her destination is Manchester. She had also 16,000 bushels of wheat and a general cargo. The Warren Line steamship Bay State is bound across the war zone with a large general cargo, which includes forty-seven auto trucks. She is going to Liverpool.

Heavy Cargoes of Cotton.

Bound from Galveston are the Miguel de Larrinaga, British, for Manchester, with a large cargo of 12,300 bales of cotton and a miscellaneous cargo, valued at $708,800; the Alden, British, for Liverpool with a cargo of 12,000 bales of cotton, valued at $636,000; the Atholl, British, for Liverpool, with a cargo of 12,800 bales of cotton, valued at [illegible]; 9,468 plates of spelter, valued at $45,417, and 14,245 pigs of lead, valued at $57,478; the Pythia, Norwegian, for Gothenburg, with a cargo of 1,400 bales of cotton, valued at $75,847, and 34,637 bags of cottonseed cake in transit, valued at $159,198; the Nefeli, Greek, for Gibraltar, with a cargo of 226,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $377,420.

The Russian steamship Herakles is on her way from Boston to Manchester with a cargo which includes 94,200 bushels of wheat, 10 tons of machinery and 6 auto trucks. The Saxon Monarch, Boston for London, had between decks an 8,500 ton cargo. This includes 50,000 bushels of corn, 400 tons of provisions, 950 tons of flour, 22,000 boxes of apples, 2,900 tons of lead, 19,913 sacks of flour and 15,500 bundles of binder twine. The Norwegian steamer Rigi for Copenhagen left with a cargo of general freight and her sailing marked the opening of business for the Interocean Steamship Company.

The Dutch steamship Sloterdyk sailed Saturday from Baltimore for Rotterdam with a cargo of grain, and the Aldebaran, (Swedish,) for Copenhagen, also loaded with grain.

Three big freight carriers sailed from New York yesterday and will travel through the war zone. They are the Saxoleine, (British,) for Havre; the Gardanus, (Dutch,) Havre, and the Quebra, (British,) Liverpool.

THE CYMRIC TO SAIL FRIDAY.

Big White Star Liner Sticks to Voyage as Scheduled.

The agents of the White Star Line stated yesterday that the sinking of the Lusitania would not affect the sailing of the Cymric for Liverpool next Friday at noon, with passengers and cargo. She was a British ship, and carried an ordinary commercial cargo, they said, and Captain Beadnell was prfectly willing to take her over to the other side.

So far the Cymric has 40 cabin passengers booked and 300 steerage, and it is expected the number will be increased before sailing time. She is one of the biggest carriers out of New York, and probably will have about 18,000 tons of cargo when she leaves for Liverpool.

At the Cunard offices no instructions had been received from Liverpool regarding the sailings of its steamers from this port and no cancellations had been made. The Orduna is due to arrive on Friday and leave next Tuesday, followed by the Tuscania on May 21, the Transylvania on June 4, and the Mauretania on June 12.

DISMISSES GERMAN CLASSES.

Instructor Unable to Teach Ideals of Goethe and Schiller Now.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 10.—John F. Coar, Professor of German in the University of Rochester, declined this morning to hold his classes, explaining to the students that he felt unable to do so because of the sinking of the steamship Lusitania by a German submarine. He also declined to teach on Saturday morning. To one class Dr. Coar said:

"I do not feel able this morning to teach the ideals of Goethe and Schiller, so incompatible with the present conditions. I am inexpressibly unhappy that this should be so, but after what has happened it cannot be otherwise."

Dr. Coar refused to be interviewed this afternoon. He confirmed the report of what he had said to the students in the morning. He said he might make a statement at a later date. He said he did not intend to give up teaching the ideals referred to, but rather felt that they should be taught all the more strongly at the present time.

TRACING VOYAGERS AS REPORTED HERE

When the Cunard offices were opened at 8 o'clock yesterday morning nearly a score of relatives and friends of Lusitania passengers were gathered to await the news that had been received by cable from the head office in Liverpool during the night.

As soon as the offices were opened an additional list of survivors was read aloud to the crowd by one of the clerks. Then he read the first official list of identified dead sent over by the Cunard Line, which contained forty names. As the list was read over several persons gave way to grief on hearing the names of persons they had hoped to find on the list of survivors.

Cannot trace E. Blish Thompson.
No report yet of Mr. Papadopoulo.
Two Myers reported saved. One without initials. Probably Herman A.
Mrs. M. Baker saved.
Mrs. F. S. Hammond saved.

Thomas Adelson of 40 West Thirty-second Street, who made the inquiry about Herman A. Myers, his son-in-law, said that relatives of Mr. Myers had received a cablegram saying that a Mr. Myers was in a hospital with broken ribs. A later message said that this was probably J. L. Myers. Mr. Adelson was informed that two men of that name had been saved and that in all probability his son-in-law was one of them.

William S. Bennet, former Congressman, called at the Cunard office at noon to inquire if any word had been received of Lindon Bates, Jr., a very dear friend. He was told that the name had not appeared in any of the lists.

The mystery as to the fate of E. Blish Thompson of Seymour, Ind., when a cable was received from Mrs. Thompson saying that she could not find any trace of her husband, although T. S. Blish, an uncle of Mr. Thompson, had received a cablegram saying, "Maudie saved and I also." The message was unsigned, but Mrs. Thompson's name is Maude, and Mr. Blish was sure that the cable was from his nephew. He was surprised later when Mr. Thompson's name did not appear on the list of survivors. The Cunard officials are tracing the message. Mrs. Thompson cabled that she would await developments in the Hotel Savoy, London.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Hammond of this city are trying to find out whether the Mrs. Hammond reported saved is the New York woman or Mrs. S. Hammond of Toronto. O. H. Hammond is reported among the survivors.

A cable message received in the afternoon at the offices of Austin, Baldwin & Co., exporters, 44 Whitehall Street, announced that hope had been abandoned for Henry Bradley Baldwin, the head of the firm, and Mrs. Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin left for a business trip and Mrs. Baldwin was to stay in London while he was in France.

The London branch of the company chartered a steamer to go to the scene of the disaster and sent four men to the coast of Ireland to search the shores for the bodies. Mrs. Baldwin was Mrs. Mary McCauley of Cincinnati. Mr. Baldwin's three brothers, Joseph, William, and Lansing, are aiding in the efforts to learn something of a definite nature.

While the Cunard office was filled with people seeking information of those who presumably had gone down, a cable dispatch was received from the Cunard office in Liverpool that the Tuscania had sailed at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon for New York with 36 first, 130 second, and 175 third class passengers and mails. This is the first large British passenger steamship to pass through the danger zone since the Lusitania was sunk.

Reports reached the Cunard office that unscrupulous persons were offering to sell information about passengers to relatives and friends. The company issued a statement that it would gladly furnish all information without cost, and that relatives and friends would be notified of any official information at once. The office was closed at 9 o'clock.

What ordinary soaps do to the skin

ORDINARY toilet soap makes your skin look white and clean to the naked eye—but look at it through a magnifying glass. You will find that the "free" alkali, which ordinary soap contains, has roughened, irritated and parched your skin; and this may in time cause blotches, pimples, blackheads and other skin troubles.

Resinol Soap
cleans, soothes and protects the skin

You need a soap which not only cleans your skin, but also soothes, heals and protects it—that is why you should get a cake of Resinol Soap from your druggist. This pure and delightful toilet soap contains the same medication as Resinol Ointment, the standard prescription for skin troubles. It therefore affords an antiseptic protection to the skin, which merely pure soap does not do. Resinol Soap keeps the skin in a clean, healthy condition and insures a clear, natural complexion.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For trial size of each free, write to Dept. 7T, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

BROOKLYN MUSTERS AN AMAZON ARMY

THEY HAVE REGULAR DRILLS

Sometimes the Corps Turns Out Five or Six Strong on Good Nights —Home Defense Its Aim.

New York has a woman's army. Its General is Mrs. J. Hungerford Milbank of Freeport, L. I. It is the Army of "Columbia," or to call it by another of its names, it is the "International Order of Military Women." It is really a Brooklyn army, whose next appearance on parade will be on Memorial Day, and in spite of its international name, Manhattan does not know it, and it is only the Long Island coast which will be kept free from invading foes by the amazons.

Yesterday General Milbank came over from Long Island to talk at the Government Club, of which Mrs. Harry Hasting is President. The General did not come to talk about war, but the notices read that "J. Hungerford Milbank, head of the International Order of Military Women," would speak and all those who received notices flocked to the Hotel Astor, where the meeting was held, to see "Mr." Milbank, who had organized a woman's army.

The head of the woman's army didn't look in the least like a man or a soldier, or even a lady amazon. She was a "fine figger of a woman," to quote some one or other, with an aureole of rich auburn hair, a much-befeathered hat, and richly gowned in purple and fine linen, only the linen happened to be silk.

Find General Milbank Wears Skirts.

"Will Mr. Milbank, head of the International Order of Military Women, be at the meeting?" asked a reporter of a woman who was writing quietly at a small table.

"I am J. Hungerford Milbank," said the woman, lifting her head. It was the lady of the aureole of auburn hair and General of the Brooklyn army. The army was organized in 1913. It is "registered" in Albany, said General Milbank, and she is very proud of it.

"Think what it would have meant to those Belgian women," said the lady General, "if they had had a sabre and known how to use it! Don't you think they would have been able to protect their children?"

But it was not to use the sabre in case of invading enemies that the women's army was organized. General Milbank says that women need broadening. They don't get anywhere if they stay at home all the time and think only about home things. Then they need to learn obedience. That they get in the army. They drill and drill and drill and it is a long time before they get promoted and are able to say a word, and all the time they must obey orders. But if the army is not first and foremost organized for defense neither is it organized in opposition to the home.

"I'm a wife and mother first of all," says Mrs. General Milbank. "My home duties come before everything else. If it wasn't for that I should be able to go about and organize branches of the army. I suppose we have perhaps 150 women in the State, and I have had a great many letters from abroad. The German women were more interested than any of the others. They and the Russian women were most interested, and I have heard from the women of Holland and from French women, and since the war from the English women, but not before.

All Due to a Mathematical Mind.

"I have a mathematical mind. I think that was what first interested me in guns down in North Carolina. I asked a General down there if there were other women with mathematical minds, if he would drill us and teach us about guns, and he said yes. 'Shake hands on it,' I said, and he shook hands."

But it was in New York that the army really came into force and took out its incorporation papers, and now it marches in processions two squads strong. The army drills every Tuesday night at the Fourteenth Regiment Armory, Eighth Street, Brooklyn, under Colonel John F. Foute.

"General" Milbank gets her title of "general" from her army. The "girls" call her "general," but the men at the armory call her "colonel."

Would she go to war? she was asked.

"We should be ready to do anything that we were called to do," replied General Milbank, with patriotic fervor. "Dr. Frank Sears, head of the Medical Reserve, did talk of taking us to Mexico at one time in the trouble there, but women would be best for home defense, I believe."

The army has a smart khaki uniform, the plaited skirt, four inches from the ground, coming a little below the high-laced tan boots. The coat is in the form of a Norfolk jacket, with natty lapels turned back to reveal a cravat. There is a three-cornered Colonial hat and a regular military service cap is also worn.

"Oh, yes," said Colonel Foote of the Fourteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, "the women drill at our armory. Come over and see 'em some Tuesday night."

The army is out for a drill sometimes five or six strong, it is said, on a good night. General Milbank is not a suffragist, because, she says:

"No one of any special political affiliation could have the use of an armory for which the whole city pays."

Reception at Sailors' Institute.

The American Seamen's Friend Society held a reception and tea yesterday afternoon at the Sailors' Home and Institute at West and Jane Streets. Admiral Fletcher, who was to have been a guest, was unable to attend, but he sent the band from the Delaware to play. Talks were made by Daniel Barnes of 76 Wall Street, the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, and others. Mrs. Finley J. Shepard was on the Reception Committee.

CLARA TICE LIGHTS GUIDO BRUNO GARRET

PURPLE HAIR ON ONE GIRL

While all the world outside is full of wars and rumors of wars, art still rules in Greenwich Village. Yesterday there began in Guido Bruno's Garret, at 58 Washington Square South, the first of a series of exhibitions by village artists —exhibitions designed for the lover of art, for the epicure in points of view, for the man or woman concerned with the constant factors of existence, and with original interpretations of such, rather than with special problems of the moment.

The host of the exhibitions, Guido Bruno, an Americanized Serb with an Italian name, who has been a war correspondent in Turkey and a reporter in Chicago, and is at present a translator, publisher and research expert in the history of Greenwich Village, is one of the few cosmopolites who have still kept the world point of view that used to distinguish artists before last August. His garret, at the eastern corner of Thompson Street and Washington Square South, is described by him as the "most forlorn-looking two-story frame building that can be found in New York."

On the ground floor is an Italian soda fountain and candy and cigar store; above are the rooms where the Bruno Chap Books and the semi-monthly magazine, Greenwich Village, are published; and the big front exhibition room with a view, across the fountain and under the Washington Arch, of the lower reaches of the avenue.

"The house," says Bruno, "was the tool house of a city undertaker, the residence of Governor Lucius Robinson and a stage house where the stage coaches stopped and waited until the mail was delivered and new mail taken on. It was a roadhouse where people used to come to spend their Sunday afternoons, and then in quick succession a saloon and an inn."

And now it has become a home for the drawings of villagers which do not appeal to more commercialized tastes. Business considerations are extruded; persons of apparent intelligence who displays a taste for art welcomed, but there is a legend that a rich man from Fifth Avenue, who came down in a limousine with the object of purchasing the collection wholesale, was gently but firmly refused admission.

Clara Tice Is Tacked.

The artist whose works were chosen for the first display is Clara Tice, an 18-year-old resident of West Tenth Street. A catalogue in black and yellow announces the exhibit: "Two hundred and fifty-eight drawings by Clara Tice expressing her own conception of the follies and frolics of her contemporaries, male and female. Tacked from the 10th to the 20th day of May, 1915, on the walls of Bruno's Garret, situated at 58 Washington Square, opposite the bus station."

Bruno writes as a foreword: "Clara Tice pictures through the colors and movements of her drawings the follies and foolery of all of us. One movement (quicker than a flash) can portray the characteristics of an age. Delicate but vigorous. Graceful but strong. Lean and lazy, but lots of latent power. Cats, women, flowers, jewels, delicate shades of colors, strong streams of light, black brutes, white giants, girls with red and golden and black hair, prayers, tears, laughter, dance. Harmony and peace hover over everything. Soundless tunes of an unplayed sonata of Mozart's diffused through the air. Our lives!"

As colloquial persons might phrase it, they are some drawings. The line work, according to those who know, is marvelous; no less the color to those who have a feeling for it—colors such as one rarely sees with the outward eye, the physiological organ; colors that the artist has sensed with the inward perception. Orange, cerise, and purple are the most striking of the shades that flash on the walls of the garret.

Some thirty-an forty of Miss Tice's drawings hung not long ago on the walls of Polly's, the restaurant affected by the exotic of the village. Their fame spread, and early one morning there appeared persons who said they were sent by Anthony Comstock to remove the offenses. They removed practically all of Miss Tice's work, and along with it a poster advertising a white sale of one of the big department stores. The poster depicted a lady in a perfectly respectable nightrobe, and had been displayed in all the Subway and elevated stations of New York.

Splashes Show the Hair.

No such fate is feared for the present collection. The artist excels in the delineation of the female figure, but there is nothing of the offensive. A typical drawing by Clara Tice is a line, line and a half or two lines, to show where the figure is supposed to be, and a splash of cerise or Bavarian blue to indicate the hair.

A large number of the drawings on exhibition are illustrations of various stories of the Arabian Nights. The rest depict the follies, outdoors and indoors, of the present day; and there is plentiful attention to those favorite animals of the exotic painter, the serpent, the peacock, and the cat.

Another prominent feature is a near-nude descending a staircase. The stairs are indicated by transverse strokes of green. The central figure is a lady clad in an old-rose centrepiece, sliding down stairs headfirst toward a black snake spitting scarlet venom.

On the opposite wall an unclad girl is gazing up ecstatically at two peacocks parading along a rampart. Just beyond one sees a dancing girl with purple hair and cerise eyes, attired in a green and gold blouse and trousers, slashed with red, green, yellow, practicing some new steps before a black and gold snake, which displays great admiration.

8 RIPPER SUSPECTS IN POLICE DRAGNET

In Brownsville Bluecoats Fought to Protect Prisoner from Infuriated Crowd.

TRY TO BREAK INTO STATION

Detectives Patrol District Where Letter Writer Said Third Murder Would Take Place.

The district from Fifth to Eleventh Avenues, and from Fiftieth Street to Fifty-fourth Street, in which a note purporting to come from the supposed murderer of Leonore Cohn and Charles Murray, said that the third crime would occur today, was patrolled yesterday by scores of detectives and policemen in plain clothes, and uniform men drawn from the West Forty-seventh Street Station, the First, Second, and Third Detective Branches, and the staffs of Inspectors Morris and Dwyer.

No attempt to carry out the threat was reported in this neighborhood, or in any other part of the city. The feverish excitement of many mothers and children and the extreme activity o fscores of detectives on the case, however, resulted in a large number of arrests in all parts of the city. Throughout the city there were few children on the streets unless their parents or relatives were with them. The scare also had its effect in cities in New Jersey near here, where several suspects were arrested.

A typical case occurred in Brownsville. Policemen Peto and Kraft of the Liberty Avenue station broke through a big crowd near Alabama Avenue and Sutter Street and rescued a supposed "ripper" who was being beaten. As soon as they had lifted their battered prisoner to his feet the crowd attacked the policeman.

At the station the prisoner, who said he was Walter Recordon, 22 years old, of 941 Rockaway Avenue, Brownsville, said he had stepped into a doorway to light a cigarette, when some children there shouted "The ripper," and fled. In a few seconds he was set on by the crowd. Recordon was well known, but for his own protection from the crowd outside he was locked up on the charge of causing a crowd to collect.

Etta Eisenberg, a little girl of 2,661 Pitkin Avenue, who had come to the station with the crowd, said that she had been attacked in the hall at Public School 64 at Atkins and Belmont Avenue. Sophie Margolies of 805 New Jersey Avenue, also said she had been attacked. Recorden was fined up with twenty-one other men, but Sophie picked out another man.

F. Fizi was arrested at Twenty-second Street and the East River by Sergeants McCullen and McGough of the Second Branch on the charge of attacking Mary Manning, 13 years, on Sunday night in the hallway of her home at 257 Avenue C. Mary Manning identified the man as her assailant, but her sister Helen, 14 years old, who had seen the assailant, said that the prisoner was not him. Fizi is being held, anyway.

G. Grammes of 211 Avenue A, a florist, was arrested after he had been seen giving oranges to children at his place of business and taken to the Second Branch. Another man, whose name was not given, was arrested last night by detectives, who found him under a doorstep with one shoe off. At the Second Branch the man said that he was getting out of sight while he smoothed out a wrinkle in his stocking, which hurt his foot.

In the afternoon Andrew Goroher, a brass worker, 50 years old, of 162 East 109th Street, who was carrying $101, was arrested by Policeman Daly of the East Fifty-first Street Station in front of St. John's Parochial School, at Fifty-first Street and First Avenue. Later Frank Lopreete, a piano maker, of 262 First Avenue, was arrested on the charge of acting suspiciously in front of 265 Avenue D.

David Goldenberg, 25 years old, a clerk, of 159 East 108th Street, was arrested after it was reported that he had been tossing pennies to children in front of 508 West Forty-sixth Street. Policeman Grow had to use his club to keep the crowd back while he took the prisoner to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. Magistrate Corrigan held Goldenberg in $1,000 bail for Special Sessions.

Henry Pelis, 32 years old, of 205 East Nineteenth Street, was sentenced to fifteen days in the workhouse by Magistrate Simms in the Men's Night Court last night after Margaret Brady, 14 years old, of 222 East Twentieth Street, had testified that he had invited her to go to a moving-picture show.

After arresting Frank Farrell, a printer, of 262 Twentieth Street, Brooklyn, on the charge that he had tried to entice two little girls into a building, Policeman Haber of the Herbert Street station, had to fight off a crowd.

Arrests were made of suspects in Paterson and Newark and there were scares in other New Jersey towns.

Louis Stamper, who was arrested under suspecion, was discharged in the Yorkville Court by Magistrate Ten Eyck yesterday. Edward Richman, arrested two weeks ago on suspicion of having written the "ripper" letter to Mrs. Anna Cohn, was discharged for lack of evidence yesterday by United States Commissioner Houghton.

WIRELESS FROM HERE TO GERMAN ADMIRALTY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 11.—The Berne correspondent of The Morning Post sends the following dispatch:

"It seems as if the news of the sinking of the Lusitania had been expected in Germany, for bulletins with huge headlines were distributed broadcast.

"From trustworthy information obtained there is no doubt that the German Admiralty received a wireless message from New York, giving the date of the Lusitania's sailing, and that a number of submarines were told to torpedo her at any cost.

"When the news of her sinking reached Germany, the German censor sent telegraphic instructions to all German newspapers to refrain from comment, but to express the hope that not many Americans were on board, adding that Germany could not be blamed, as her Ambassador had warned Americans not to travel by that boat.

"An American, who spoke to a high German official about the Lusitania, was answered that the Lusitania was the reply to America for supplying ammunition to Germany's enemies. The American then asked:

"'But did not Germany supply ammunition to England during the South African war?'

"To this no answer was vouchsafed.

"This American afterward remarked to me:

"'This latest German outrage upon innocent civilians ought to arouse England and make her Government introduce compulsory military service for every able-bodied Briton.'"

BARON NATILI DEAD.

Diplomatist of the Southern Pacific Was Nominally Station Agent.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 10.—Baron Randolphe Natili died this morning at his home, Morgan City, La. Baron Natili was almost as well known in New York and Washington as in Louisiana. Wherever the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had important business there Baron Natili was prominent, for he was what might be termed the diplomatist of that road for many years. Nominally he was station agent of the road at Morgan City, but in reality he was its general agent, and wherever the interests of the company were in danger the Baron was immediately dispatched to the scene.

An admirable recanteur and a gourmet, with especial reference to terrapin dinners and a "mixer" par excellence, the Baron Natili, when the railroad company had a hot corner to turn, was in great demand. His abilities early attracted the attention of the late Charles Whitney and A. C. Hutchinson, local magnates of the road, and they brought his talents to the attention of Colis P. Huntington, one of the builders of the Southern Pacific and its President until the death, who became his friend. Several times he took the Baron to Europe with himself and his family.

A quarter of a century ago, and less, Baron Natili was on the most intimate terms with every prominent public man in the State. The station agent at Morgan City, one of the unimportant points on the Southern Pacific Road, was always welcome in any circle.

There was much mystery connected with the Baron in unimitiated quarters, but those "in the know" were aware that his salary as station agent at Morgan City was $25,000 annually, and that the railroad company allowed him a very elastic expense account in addition.

Baron Natili made his home at Morgan City, but the office of station agent there did not give him much concern. He left the business of the post in the hands of his assistant and kept his valises packed, awaiting a telegram that might come at any moment.

Baron Natili's illness overtook him in New York a few days ago. His brother-in-law, Dr. Charles Chassaignac of this city brought him home. The Baron did not long survive the return journey.

BLOCKS STATE'S LOAN.

Point of Law Ties Up $6,000,000 on Deposit.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—While the $6,000,000 which Controller Travis wishes to borrow for payroll purposes, in anticipation of taxes, has been on deposit with the Commercial National Bank since Saturday, it was learned tonight that a hitch had arised which ties up the money temporarily.

The loan was made by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York City on the note of the Controller. The rate of interest was to be 2% per cent. It is understood here that the loan was arranged subject to the approval of the lawyers representing the trust company.

The lawyers, it is asserted, have asked for further time in which to consider the question of the constitutionality of the loan, raised by Stewart Browne, President of the Real Estate Owners' Association. Mr. Browne contended that any loan of more than $1,000,000 must be submitted to a referendum.

A representative of the Attorney General's office said tonight that he did not believe there would be any complications which would block the proposed loan on short time notes in anticipation of revenue.

ITALY'S TIME LIMIT TO AUSTRIA UP

Report to Paris from Rome Says It Expired at Midnight Last Night.

MAY DECLARE WAR TODAY

PARIS, May 10.—"The Government of Italy today awaits the final reply of Austria," says a Rome dispatch to La Liberté. "In the interim the publication of important decrees which were signed at the last meeting of the Cabinet has been withheld.

"I learn from an excellent source that unless the Austrian answer arrives before midnight tonight, or if the reply is unfavorable, Italy will consider the negotiations terminated."

The Temps today published a dispatch from Rome saying that the Council of Ministers has decided to ask the Italian Parliament for further powers in dealing with the foreign and military policies of the country. Parliament meets May 20.

BERNE, Switzerland, May 10.—It is estimated that 10,000 Germans from Italy crossed the Swiss frontier Saturday and Sunday. Four thousand arrived at Lugano alone.

Italy will declare war today, according to advices received here privately yesterday. This declaration that Europe's most powerful neutral nation had determined to join the Allies came in the form of a private cablegram of warning from Count Don Carlo Dentice del Frasso, a close friend of the Italian Premier, Marchese Salandra.

It was received by equally close friends of the Count, who had accepted an invitation, long since given, to spend the Summer at Count del Frasso's Summer home, and who were to have started for Italy at once. The cablegram said:

"Do not start. Italy will declare war tomorrow."

The message was received last night and was dated yesterday. Its recipients and those to whom the message was shown here, and who know Count del Frasso well, are satisfied that his warning was inspired by his close relationship with the Italian Premier.

Premier Salandra, has been known from the very beginning of the war to be privately in favor of intervention, not only because such have been the constantly expressed sentiments of a paper, The Giornah d'Italia, for which he formerly wrote the politics, economical articles, but because The Idea Nazionale, a paper which is practically dedicated to intervention, is under peculiar obligations to him. At any rate, The Idea Nazionale has very often anticipated Government action and has, from the first of the interviews between the German Ambassador or Prince von Bülow and Premier Salandra and his colleagues, in regard to the negotiations pivoting on Trieste and the Trentino, shown itself to be perfectly informed as to what was taking place.

Mourning for John Harvey Page.

The Mark Cross Company establishments in New York, London and Boston were closed yesterday in memory of Vice President of the company John Harvey Page, who met death on the Lusitania. He was an American by birth, descent, interest and education. He had charge of the English factories, and interests, but remained throughout twenty years residence in England an American citizen. No trace of the body has been found.

MORGAN KINGSTON WRITES OF

"That which the musician accomplishes only through years of arduous practice, your Flexotone achieves in an hour. It is the musical marvel of the age."—
Morgan Kingston.

When Mr. Kingston heard the Flexotone he was amazed and delighted, as all music lovers and musicians have been who have heard its marvelous performance.

The Flexotone is a surprisingly simple device which may be made part of your own piano right in your home, without altering the case. It makes of your piano not a player piano, such as you have always heard, but an instrument of musical self-expression which enables one untaught in music to play as brilliantly as a trained pianist.

We cordially invite you to hear this great instrument demonstrated.

BIG ALLIED DRIVE MAINTAINS GAINS

BUT ADVANCE ON THE COAST

They Take 162 British Prisoners and Renew the Bombardment of Dunkirk.

LONDON, May 10.—Since the battle of Neuve Chapelle and the German reply to it on the Ypres Canal, there has been no such important movement by the British and French armies in the western arena of the war as now is in progress; and, according to the official communications of both General Joffre and Field Marshal Sir John French, the Allies are carrying it out successfully.

The German Headquarters report says that the Allies have brought up at least four fresh army corps (160,000 men) for the attack upon the German lines north of Curas and have gained a lodgement in the first line of the German trenches, from which the Kaiser's forces are still fighting to expel them.

The substantial advance already recorded by the Allies between Carency and Sanchez is taken by military experts here as promising that the present operations will be pushed home. The British and French are attacking along a front of twenty-six miles.

Sir John French reports that five German attacks in the neighborhood of Ypres have been repulsed with heavy loss, and that his troops hold the east of the city to which they fell back when readjusting their positions on May 4.

Dunkirk Bombarded Again.

The Germans announce that they have made progress on the coast near Nieuport and have taken 162 British prisoners at Verlerenhoek. They have renewed the bombardment of Dunkirk.

Engagements elsewhere on the Western front appear to have been for the most part unimportant.

The Paris commiqués are as follows:

(Night Report.)—To the north of Arras, in spite of several German counter-attacks, we have maintained all our gain of yesterday, and we have enlarged it at certain points, notably between Carency and Sauchez.

Our success is developing. The total number of prisoners at 3 o'clock today exceeded 2,000. Among these were about 40 officers, including a Colonel.

We have captured in the last two days more than ten cannon and fifty machine guns.

At Berry-au-Pac a German attack has been repulsed, as well as one in the Forest of Le Prêtre.

(Afternoon Report.)—Three new German attacks to the north of Lombaertzyde were repulsed yesterday.

To the east of St. Georges our marine fusilliers took possession of the Union Farm, very strongly fortified by the Germans, and also of a position further to the east. They made about thirty prisoners.

Dunkirk was again bombarded this morning at about 6 o'clock, two shells being thrown.

In the region to the north of Arras we have maintained all the important gains reported in the communication of yesterday evening.

Along the rest of the front, particularly in the Argonne and in Alsace, at Sillakerwasen, there was a continuation of the artillery fighting.

Germans' Attacks Cost Them Dear.

Field Marshal Sir John French, Commander in Chief of the British forces on the Continent, reports no change in the general situation today. His bulletin to theh War Office says:

Our line to the east of Ypres, in spite of repeated attacks by the enemy during last week, is substantially the same as that to which we withdrew on the night of May 3. During the fighting in this quarter yesterday the enemy made five unsuccessful attacks, and his losses in these failures were very heavy.

On the front of the First Army the fighting today has been confined to artillery actions.

While the Germans assert that they gained ground in Flanders and inflicted heavy loss upon the Allies in the grand assault made by the latter in the Arras region, they admit that the German line was pierced near Carency, and that they are still engaged at that part of the front. The Berlin report follows:

We made progress on the coast, in the dunes, in the direction of Nieuport, taking several of the enemy's trenches and machine guns. A counter attack by the enemy during last night advanced as far as Lombaertzyde, but was completely driven back.

Admit Allies' Gains at Carency.

In Flanders we also gained more ground. We took 162 British prisoners at eVrierenhoek. Southwest of Lille a freat Anglo-French attack, anticipated as a reply to our successes in Galicia, was begun, and directed itself against our position situated to the east of Fleurbaix, to the east of Richebourg, to the east of Vernnelles, and at Ablain, Carency, Neuville, and St. Laurent, near Arras. The enemy, French as well as white and colored British, brought at least four new army corps into the fight, besides the force which has been employed in this line for some time past. Nevertheless, repeated attacks have been nearly everywhere repulsed, with heavy losses for our opponents. This is especially so in the case of the British attack. About 500 prisoners have been taken.

Only in the region between Carency and Neuville did our opponents succeed in penetrating and establishing themselves in our foremost line of trenches. A counter-attack is now proceeding.

South of Steinbrück, in the Valley of the Fecht, the enemy, who had settled himself during a thick fog immediately in front of our position, was driven back by a counter-attack, and his trenches were destroyed.

Stop Racing on British East Coast.

LONDON, May 10.—The Jockey Club has decided to stop racing at Newcastle, Stockton, Redcar and other places in that district at the request of the North-east Coast Armaments Committee, who have declared that such sports hinder armament work.

ZEPPELINS BOMBARD ESSEX COAST TOWNS

Drop Bombs in Early Hours of Cloudy Morning — Fires Started, 2 Persons Hurt.

LONDON, May 10.—Zeppelin airships dropped bombs on Westcliff-on-Sea and South Knud seaside, resorts resorts in Essex, near themouth of the Thames, on the east coast of England ,and at other places in the neighborhood early this morning. Warning of their approach was given at 2:33 A. M. The weather was cloudy.

Bombs struck houses in various parts of the South End. One man and his wife were badly burned in a fire started by an incendiary bomb. One resident told of three bombs dropping near his home, none of which caused damage.

It is estimated that about sixty bombs were dropped at South End, but most of them fell on the beach or in other open places, where they exploded harmlessly. One bomb dropped near a ship on which were 1,200 German civilians who had been interned.

A British aeroplane went in pursuit and drive the hostile aircraft out to sea.

A report was received from Romford, near South End, that a Zeppelin had been seen in that neighborhood, apparently in difficulties, but whether in consequence of an unfavorable wind or of having been hit was unknown.

It is reported that several shops were burned at Leigh, near South End. Four Zeppelins are said to have dropped forty or fifty bombs there.

BERLIN, (Via London,) May 10.—The German War Office announced today: "One of our airships bombarded the fortified towns of South End, to the south of the Thames, this morning, with a few bombs."

OSTRACIZE PEACE WOMEN.

German Council of Women Bars German Delegates to Peace Congress

THE HAGUE, (via London,) May 10.—The German delegates to the recent International Women's Congress received notice on their return home that they had been boycotted by the German National Council of Women owing to their having participated in peace discussions. It is said the council had refused to join the congress.

Miss Julia Grace of Wales, Wisconsin, has been appointed Secretary of the women's embassy which is proceeding to Scandinavia and Russia to intercede with the rulers of those countries to plead for peace.

GERMANS AGAINST JEWS.

Persecutions in Russia Attributed to Teutonic Influence.

The statement that persecution of Russian Jews is to be contributed to German influence in Russia is made in The Jewish Chronicle of London of April 23, just received here.

"We support this country in her struggle," it says, "because the loyalty we feel impels us—we know the value of England to humanity. But we know, too, that it is the German influence in Russia to which is attributable the whole policy of Russian persecution of the Jewish people.

"We do not forget and we will not forget that Germany was the cradle of anti-Semitism. We do not forget and we will not forget that in the worst of the pogroms—Kishineff and Mohileff—the Bureaucratic Administration responsible was a German, or of immediate German descent. We do not forget and we will not forget that there is nothing in the Slav character that is necessarily of a persecuting nature; that in Servia, which is Slav, the Jews are excellently treated, as they are in Bulgaria, and that in Rumania they are not well treated, and the reason is not far to seek when we recollect the political connection that has existed between Rumania and Germany for half a century past.

"We believe that as German influence has progressed during the last forty years, so there has been a constant rise in persecution in Russia, and we believe that with the elimination of German influence upon Russia—the weakening of the German power which has menaced Russia—the better elements in the Slav character will assert themselves. We eblieve that when the influence of German Bureaucracy in Russia is overthrown our people, like other subject races of the Czar, will enter into freedom.

"We rest our belief not on any promise of the Czar or any hope held out by any Minister. We rest it upon something much more valuable than human promises. We rest it upon the logic of events that is bound to follow the victory of the allied arms, the logic of events which even an autocratic Czar cannot avert, set back, or control.

"We look away from the past, and beyond what is happening today, to the future as it will be shaped by victory for the Allies, and then we can see clearly and unmistakably that no power will be able to resist the wave of freedom which will sweep over Russia.

"Nor have we watched in vain at another point—at what has been occurring in Poland. There German influences have been at work for years. There has been a constant endeavor to stir up revolt and revolution in Russian Poland, and we note the anti-Semitism that is prevalent.

"Hence our support, our wholehearted support, of England's cause is not prejudiced—if anything, it is accentuated—by the fact that Russia is one of England's allies."

JAPANESE CRUISER SAVED.

The Asama, Which Caused Turtle Bay Incident, Is Refloated.

TOKIO, May 10.—The Japanese armored cruiser Asama, which ran ashore on the coast of Lower California, Feb. 4, has been refloated, according to an official announcement made here today.

The Asama probably will be docked and repaired at San Francisco.

The efforts to refloat this cruiser caused a rumor, which gained with circulation, that the Japanese had landed in great force at Turtle Bay, in Lower California, and were erecting a naval base there. The Navy Department ordered Admiral Howard of the Pacific fleet to make an investigation, and he found that the rumors were false and that the Japanese were merely salvaging the cruiser.

RUSSIANS RETREAT 30 MILES IN GALICIA

GERMANS HALT TO REFORM

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Col. Colejevski Military Attaché o fthe Russian Embassy here, issued the following statement tonight:

During the last week of April very considerable Austro-German forces assumed the offensive between the Vistula and the East Beskid range of the Carpathians.

Supported by considerable heavy artillery the Austro-Germans, after a stubborn resistance by our troops on the second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth days of May, succeeded in crossing the River Dunajec and in establishing themselves between the latter and the River Wisloka.

The main Austro-German attack was developed in the direction of Tuchow-Biecz-Jasio, which for a while threatened the flank of some of our detachments to the southwest of Dukla. These troops, consisting of the Forty-eighth Division, commanded by General Kerniloff, after desperate bayonet fighting, cut their way through the enemy and rejoined their corps on May 7.

The result of the enemy's advance is the withdrawal of the right flank of foru forces in Galicia for a distance of about thirty miles and the recrossing of one of our divisions from the Hungarian slope of the Carpathians into Western Galicia. The rest of our line in the Carpathians as well as in the Trans-Carpathian region is being maintained without any changes.

First Stage of Battle Concluded.

PRESS HEADQUARTERS OF THE AUSTRIAN ARMY, WESTERN GALICIA, May 10, (via London.)—The first stage of the battle of West Galicia has been virtually concluded. The victorious troops under the lead of the German General August von Mackensen, after successfully breaking through all three fortified lines of the Russian front, are assembling and reforming for a new offensive.

They are bringing forward supplies left behind in their rapid advance, and also are using the interval to gather the captured Russians behind their present front, and seek for abandoned guns and other spoils of war in the mountain forests.

Seventy thousand prisoners already have been brought in. The number of prisoners in this part of the battel in Galicia will be increased, it is estimated here, by 30,000. Between 60 and 70 guns have been captured, but as was the case in the battle of the Mazurian Lakes in February, it is believed it is only a small part of the guns left behind in concealed places.

The second stage of the operations is beginning further to the east, the second Austro-Hungarian Army having stormed the crest of the Carpathians and the northern slopes between Lupkow and Uzsok Passes and driven before it with the bayonet the Eighth Russian Army, under General Brussiloff.

Every advance of the Austro-German forces shortens the battlefront, thus liberating troops for use elsewhere, and at the same time, increasing the confusion along the Russian lines of retreat.

Capture 12,000 More Prisoners.

BERLIN, (via London,) May 10.—The following statement was issued today by the German General Staff:

Notwithstanding all attacks of the enemy for the purpose of delaying our pursuit, by means of forces brought up hastily by rail and by foot marches, the allied troops forming the army under General von Mackenzen yesterday drove back its opponents from position after position and took more than 12,000 prisoners and much war material. The number of prisoners captured by this part of our army alone since May 2 is thereby increased to more than 8,0000.

Our advance guards have approached a branch of the Stobnicka and have reached the Brzesanka and also the lower Wisloka. The pursuit continues.

Fake Dentists Indicted.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 10.—It was reported here today that the Westchester Grand Jury had indicted many dentists accused of having registered illegally and of having run "dental parlors" where illegal practices were employed. Assistant District Attorney Fallon said that the investigation would be continued until the "fake" dentists had been driven out of business in this country.

BRITISH PLAY WOODEN HORSE TRICK ON TURKS

DARDANELLES, (via Constantinople,) April 15.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—History has duplicated the tradition of the plains of Troy, for by a ruse as ingenious as the wooden horse which gave the crafty Greeks entrance into the City of Troy, the British succeeded in getting their first landing party ashore for the land operations against the Dardanelles.

On the day preceding the landing the Turkish patrols noticed a huge collier, her decks piled high with coal, drifting in apparent helplessness toward the sheals lining the shores near the plains of Troy. Finally the big boat struck bottom, and in the twilight which was falling the crew was seen to take to the boats and row hastily toward the sea, where other ships were evidently cruising.

Feeling certain that the stranded vessel was safe for the night, the Turks made no attempt to board her, but when the patrols approached again in the morning they were met by a sharp fire from 2,500 British troops, strongly intrenched and supported by a battery of field artillery. These troops had landed under cover of night from the apparent derelict, where they had been concealed below decks.

Then the mist off shore rose and disclosed a long line of transports from which troops were pouring into small boats, which, under cover of the landing force, reached the beach with comparatively few casualties.

The Turks summoned reinforcements with feverish haste, and for a time the small landing detachment was in peril of extinction; but the intrenchments were too strong to be taken by assault, and when the Turkish batteries got into action enough troops had been safely landed to consolidate the position won by the strategic ruse of the collier's human freight.

APPROVES TRANSIT BILLS.

Governor Signs Queens and Bronx Park Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—Two bills affecting transit conditions in New York City were signed today by Governor Whitman. One is the Patten bill, giving the Public Service Commission power to enter into an agreement with the Long Island Railroad Company whereby subway trains of the Queens extension may be run over the Long Island tracks from Corona to Bayside and Whitestone Landing.

The Governor also signed the Hoff bill, which permits the Public Service Commission to take in exchange for land outside of Bronx Park, but adjoining it, a strip of park land twenty-one feet wide and about ten city blocks in length. The land is wanted for the completion of the new subway line into the Bronx, which is to be operated by the Interborough. The bill has the approval of the Public Service Commission. William T. Hornaday, Director of the Zoological Garden, withdrew the objections raised by him before it was known that the Interborough had no intention of using the strip of park land for the storage of idle subway cars.

NEW BRITISH LIQUOR BILL SUITS ALL PARTIES

Passes Second Reading—Dealers to be Compensated for Losses.

LONDON, May 10.—The House of Commons this evening passed the second reading of Lloyd George's bill to amend the Defense of the Realm act. The bill originally was designed to place a heavy surtax on wines, spirits, and beer, but under pressure from the Irish Party its provisions were amended to giving the Government control of the sale of liquor in areas in which munitions of war were being made.

Under the bill a central committee will be set up for Scotland and England. It will act on the recommendations of local committees of employers and workmen in the districts affected.

Mr. Lloyd George has promised to appoint a committee to inquire into the charges of drunkenness among workmen, and all parties, including the Laborites, have expressed their satisfaction with the bill.

The Government will absolutely control the sale of liquor in selected districts, including that dispensed in clubs and grocery stores. A commission under the Chairmanship of Lord Dunedin will deal with the question of compensation to the liquor dealers for their losses.

GERMANY AT FAULT FOR DUTCH SHIP'S LOSS

THE HAGUE, (via London,) May 10.—It is officially announced that the German Government has expressed sincere regret for the sinking of the Dutch steamer Katwyk, which was blown up off North Hinder Lightship on April 14 by a German submarine. Germany explains that the act was in no wise intentional, and undertakes to make compensation.

"A communication from Berlin," says the official announcement, "states that the German Government, after having compared the report of the Dutch crew of the vessel with that of the commander of one of the German submarines, has arrived at the conclusion that the torpedoing was done by a German submarine.

"The commander of the submarine was of the opinion that he was dealing with an enemy ship, as the distinguishing marks used by neutrals had not been illuminated on the side which was struck by the torpedo."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 10.—In an article entitled "Europe's Revolution," Georges Clemenceau, editor of L'Homme Enchaîné, discusses "Europe's League, Now About to Become Universal, for Freedom from German Barbarism." After alluding to Italy and other neutrals as likely to enter the war he continues:

"Some neutrals still hesitate. History will wonder that the most notable among them have not dared to protest against the violation of Belgium's neutrality, apropos of which President Wilson, following the Pope's example, gravely consults his law book authorities to know if right has not been outraged."

STORM TURKISH POSITIONS.

Russian Army of Caucasus Continues Its Advance.

PETROGRAD, May 10.—The following official statement from the headquarters of the Army of the Caucasus was issued today:

In the direction of Olti our troops have dislodged the Turks from their positions and have driven them back to the southwest. In their hurried retreat the Turks abandoned a large quantity of tents and munitions.

In the direction of Tabriz the Turks have been driven from the South Pass, and we occupied villages there.

Holds That "Corruption" Colonel Charged May Have Been Mere "Impropriety."

ROOSEVELT SHOWS DELIGHT

Testimony as to Bipartisan Understanding to Go to the Jury—Colonel Wins Many Points.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 10.—A ruling of Justice William S. Andrews at today's session of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial, now in its fourth week, gave the Barnes forces a heavy blow and materially changed the aspect of the case in that it may be necessary for the plaintiff to call more witnesses than he had intended.

In deciding upon what testimony he should strike out of the record, Justice Andrews held that the term "corruption" as employed by Colonel Roosevelt in his alleged libelous article might not mean anything more than an impropriety and not pecuniary corruption at all. As the case stood at present, the court said, there was sufficient proof to go to the jury on the question whether or not an improper alliance existed between the Republican and Democratic organizations.

The Roosevelt forces could not conceal their joy over the Justice's definition of terms, as they believe they have presented enough evidence to show that an improper alliance did exist between the heads of the two political organizations, if not between Mr. Barnes and Charles F. Murphy individually. William M. Ivins, head of the Barnes legal forces, quickly grasped the significance of the ruling, and he will make a hard fight tomorrow to have Justice Andrews reverse himself. The Barnes lawyers admit that if the decision stands, the whole case has simmered down to a simple question of ethics.

Justice Andrews's decision came at the close of the day, after the defense had rested its case and the plaintiff's counsel had made motions to have the testimony of many witnesses stricken from the record. Even in the matter of having this testimony stricken out, the Barnes counsel lost heavily, for the Judge denied all the motions except one. This one exception related to the testimony given by ex-Senator George B. Agnew regarding the election of J. P. Adds to the Senate leadership. The Roosevelt counsel have contended that a corrupt alliance existed between Barnes and Murphy to elect Adds, but Justice Andrews ruled that whatever Mr. Agnew testified to on that subject must go out of the record, as no evidence was presented to show that Mr. Barnes was in any way connected with that election or had used any influence to bring it about.

The points won by the Roosevelt counsel on the motions to strike out were these: That the testimony of ex-Senator Agnew regarding Mr. Barnes's alleged connection with the defeat of the Hart-Agnew antiracing bills was competent as bearing upon Mr. Barnes's alleged dominance in the Republican Party; that the testimony of Major Jacob J. Dickinson, who testified to a conversation he had with Mr. Barnes regarding the same subject, was likewise competent, and that the testimony regarding the alleged conspiracy between the Democratic and Republican machines to bring about the election of William F. Sheehan as United States Senator in 1911 should also stay in the record. The Barnes lawyers did not ask the court to rule upon the testimony of William Loeb, Jr., regarding the same matter.

All the testimony relating to the United States Senatorship contest is considered of vital importance by Colonel Roosevelt, and the Judge allowed it to stay in the record, connected with the fact that opposing counsel did not ask for a ruling on the Loeb testimony, was considered by the Colonel to be a big victory.

The Barnes lawyers also asked Justice Andrews to throw out all the testimony given by ex-Senator Hinman, Frederick M. Davenport, Josiah T. Newcomb, Henry C. McMillan and Walter T. Arndt regarding the defeat of the Hughes direct primary legislation, and although the justice did not make a final ruling on the matter, he indicated that he would let it stay in the record. He will give his decision tomorrow.

The Barnes lawyers will ask the Justice to strike out much other testimony when court opens in the morning, including all the matter relating to printing. The printing testimony is one of the vital elements in the case, and the Justice did not indicate whether he would eliminate it or not. It is the general impression that he will allow most of it to stay in.

After two or three witnesses had given further testimony regarding State and Albany County and city printing contracts, John M. Bowers announced at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon that he rested the case of Colonel Roosevelt. The jury was excused for the day, and Justice Andrews announced that he would hear arguments upon motions to strike out some of the testimony which the defense has presented in the past three weeks. Counsel for both sides said they had marshaled all their testimony according to the justice's instructions of Friday. Henry F. Wolff, associate counsel with Mr. Ivins, made the motions. His first motion was that the court strike out all the testimony of ex-Senator Agnew as to the election of Botham F. Adds as leader of the Senate, as well as the Hart-Agnew anti-racing bills. Taking up the latter evidence, Mr. Wolff said: "It has not been shown here that there was the slightest evidence of corruption at any time in regard to this matter."

"It seems to me that the evidence is competent," replied Justice Andrews. "I will agree that so far as Mr. Agnew's testimony is concerned there does not seem to be any proof of fraud or corruption, but I think the testimony is competent as bearing upon Mr. Barnes's dominance in the party, and I will allow it to remain in the record for that purpose. It does not cast any reflection upon Mr. Barnes's connection with race track legislation."

There was considerable discussion of the testimony ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman had given regarding the deadlock over the election of a United States Senator in 1911. Mr. Wolff said he would ask that all this testimony, as well as that of ex-Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt on the same subject be stricken out, but that he would not make any such request regarding the testimony of William Loeb, Jr.

"Assuming that Mr. Barnes had an arrangement with Mr. Murphy," said the lawyer, "it was nothing more than an arrangement that Mr. Barnes was not to interfere with the election of a Democratic Senator. If such an arrangement did exist, there is nothing to show that there was anything corrupt or wrong about it. There is nothing to show that a corrupt arrangement existed between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy."

"I mean," replied the lawyer, "that the record absolutely fails to show any corruption or even impropriety. There is no evidence to show that he took any steps even to hold the Republican organization intact for Senator Depew. Mr. Barnes even wrote a letter to the Democratic and Republican leaders of the Senate advising that an independent Democrat be elected. I also move that the testimony of Franklin D. Roosevelt on the same subject be stricken out."

"I will deny the motion," said Justice Andrews. "While there may be nothing corrupt about it, I think that there is prima facie evidence that an agreement existed between the heads of the Republican and the Democratic organization so as not to interfere with the election of William F. Sheehan. I think I do not confine the word corrupt to mean pecuniary corruption," the court explained. "As it stands there is proof to go to the jury on the question of an improper alliance."

Colonel Roosevelt, who had been following the argument closely, making many notes and whispering to Mr. Bowers, grinned his delight at the decision. Mr. Barnes shot a severe glance at the Colonel and frowned.

Thoroughly taken aback, Mr. Wolff passed on the testimony of ex-Senator Hinman. There was no evidence of a corrupt alliance, he said, because some Democrats voted with the Republicans to defeat the direct primary legislation. Mr. Wolff asked that the court couple with Mr. Hinman's testimony that given on the same matter by Messrs. McMillan, Davenport, and Newcomb. As he closed his argument Mr. Ivins arose.

"Your Honor," he said, "I would like to have your definition as to the word 'corruption.' I would like to submit the opinion of some authorities on the matter."

"I don't think I will define anything," Justice Andrews broke in. "I don't have to. I am not bound down by any definition as to the word 'corrupt,' but I can deny the motion to have the evidence stricken out."

Mr. Ivins said that before the Justice made a final ruling on the matter he would like to make a further argument, and the court announced an adjournment until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Mr. Ivins said later that the court's ruling was decidedly unexpected, and that he would fight hard to get an opinion as to the exact meaning of the words "corruption" and "improper." He said that no witnesses would be called by him to testify as to any of the testimony ruled out by Justice Andrews. He will call many witnesses to refute the testimony given by the Colonel's witnesses on the subjects that will go before the jury. Two of these witnesses will be August Belmont, who is expected here tomorrow, and ex-Senator James J. Frawley, who arrived here today.

At the morning session Charles M. Winchester of the J. B. Lyon Company was recalled to the witness stand for the ninth time to give further testimony regarding printing contracts his firm had had with the State. William M. Richards, a representative of the City Controller's office of Albany City, the next witness, was questioned about printing work that had been given to the Albany Journal Company and then turned over to the Argus Company.

BELMONT ON THE WAY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 10.—August Belmont of New York, former Treasurer of the National Democratic Finance Committee, who is here at his stock farm with a party of New York friends, left on a special train this afternoon in order to arrive in Syracuse tomorrow in time to take the witness stand in the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit. Mr. Belmont would make no statement regarding the case.

PROBING BITTER'S DEATH.

Grand Jury Investigating Auto Accident That Killed Sculptor.

An inquiry into the death of Karl Bitter, the sculptor, who was fatally injured at Broadway and Fortieth Street on April 9 by an automobile driven by Edgar K. James, an electrical contractor, of 338 Madison Avenue, was begun yesterday by the General Sessions Grand Jury. The jury will report its findings today to Judge Wadhams in General Sessions.

James was exonerated from any blame by a Coroner's jury before Coroner Heilenstein. District Attorney Perkins then took up the case and conducted an independent investigation. During the investigation the car which James drove was tested to see in what distance it could be stopped by the brakes while going at different speeds.

The evidence gathered by the District Attorney's staff was placed before the Grand Jury yesterday by Assistant District Attorneys Embree and Follette. There were eight witnesses, most of whom had testified before Coroner Heilenstein.

Mrs. Marie Bitter, the widow, who was with her husband when he received the injuries which resulted in his death, and who herself was injured, was a witness yesterday. Mrs. Bitter did not appear before the Coroner.

NURSE A SUICIDE BY POISON.

Takes Bichloride of Mercury Tablets in a Brooklyn Hospital.

Miss Elinore Coffeen, 21 years old, a nurse employed in the Kingston Avenue Hospital for Contagious Diseases, Brooklyn, died yesterday in the Kings County Hospital, a suicide. Early yesterday morning Miss Coffeen entered the room of another nurse at the Kingston Avenue institution and said:

"I am dying. I have just swallowed some tablets of bichloride of mercury."

The other nurse summoned the house physician, who had Miss Coffeen taken to the Kings County Hospital. In the girl's room there was found a note which read:

"Good-bye to everybody. I am tired of life."

Miss Coffeen came from Watertown, N. Y., and was graduated from the Nassau Hospital at Mineola, L. I., in 1914. No one at the hospital could give any reason for the girl's act.

SERVE SCIENTIFIC MEALS.

Health Board Menu for Employes Shows Nutriment Value of Foods.

To promote a knowledge of how to eat cheaply and to get the greatest value in nutriment from the smallest amount of eatables, the Board of Health has started a luncheon room for its employes at its headquarters, 139 Centre Street. There the guests, as they look at the bill of fare, find recorded the number of proteids, carbohydrates, and fats that the food contains.

Acting Mayor McAneny and Borough President Marks were the guests yesterday of Commissioner Goldwater at the first meal served in the dining room. Mr. McAneny spoke of the constructive policy now being pursued by the board, and said that in spite of all it was accomplishing there was no better example of city economy than the way it went to work.

F. M. Warburg to Lay Cornerstone.

Felix M Warburg will lay the cornerstone of the Yorkville Jewish Institute and Talmud Torah on Sunday, May 16, at 3 P. M. The institution is designed to look after the religious education of youth in that section of the city from Seventy-second to Ninety-sixth Street, from river to river. The building will cost about $140,000 of which $50,000 has aready been subscribed. The grotto of the instftution is "Judaism and Patriotism."

10,000 Girls in Central Park.

The eighth annual park fête of the Girls' Branch of the Public School Athletic League will be held this afternoon on the Central Park Sheep Meadow. 10,000 girls taking part. In case of rain the fête will be held at the same place and hour on Thursday. The combined bands of Fort Hamilton and Fort Totten will furnish the music.

Starts at Appropriations with Pruning Knife—Hint of Axe Later.

KILLS ONE DEPARTMENT

Strikes Out Allowance for Support of Salary Commission—Department Heads Protest in Vain.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—After approving the McDonald bill which provides that a referendum vote shall be taken on a proposed new bond issue of $37,000,000 for Barge Canal construction purposes, Governor Whitman by liberal use of the pruning knife today succeeded in cutting $71,458 out of the $5,000,000 Supply bill.

The Governor's action was a distinct shock to the Department heads affected. Governors of the past have never given too close scrutiny to the Supply bill, even though it has been known as a measure covering a multitude of sins in a patronage way.

Among the departments to suffer in this instance are the reconstructed Court of Claims, which loses $21,911 of appropriations available at once, the Excise Department, which loses $48,192; the Commission on the Classification of Salaries, which loses $2,200, and virtually is wiped out, and the Civil Service Commission, which had $800 cut from its budget. Most of the cuts affected appropriations made to cover deficiences in last year's budget or money that would have been available in the next four months.

"The Governor used the pruning knife today; before the week is over he may use the axe," one of Governor Whitman's advisers said tonight.

In Administration circles it is predicted that eventually a round million may be cut from the appropriation bills. The big cuts are likely to come when the General Appropriation bill is taken up. As it was, the Governor today with a stroke of his pen wiped out one department which has outlived its usefulness, for when he learned that the Salary Classification Commission held only two meetings a year and spent $2,200 for the purpose he quietly cut all the money appropriated for it out of the Supply bill and the Appropriation bill.

In the Court of Claims budget the eliminations were: For hire of clerks and stenographers, $11,602; for judges' expenses, $4,800; for office expenses, $4,313.

Here are items cut out of the Excise Department's appropriation: Legal expenses, $10,000; office expenses, $5,000; special investigations, $25,000; furniture, $3,941; enumeration, $2,260.

The department heads who were questioned today protested against the eliminations. Excise Commissioner Farley, Democrat, who relinquishes his office to a Whitman appointee on Oct. 1, explained all of his items, most of which represented expenditures already incurred, and said that only by dropping some of the work of the department could there be any cutting down.

"Well, I guess we could stand for a curtailment of the business of your department," said the Governor. Then he pounced upon an item for furniture. Commissioner Farley explained that it had been put in to cover the expense of refitting the offices of the department when it is removed to new quarters.

"Well, you are not going to move for a while yet, so we'll cut that out," said the Governor.

It was observed that throughout the hearing today none of the legislative leaders who had prepared the budget appeared in the Executive Chamber.

17-Year-Old Girl Had Sued Dental Student for $10,000.

Alice Bennett, 17 years old, testified yesterday before Justice Deland of th Supreme Court and a jury, in her suit for $10,000 against Louis Chayes, a dental student, whom she accused of kissing her by force in his office at 248 East 18th Street, on Feb. 16, 1914. She said that she called on the defendant seeking work, that he had engaged her, giving her fifty cents for her carfare, and had then kissed her. She said, amid tears, that she had hastened home and complained to her mother.

The defendant denied the story and his testimony was sustained by Miss Lillian Smith, who used to be his office manager. After a short deliberation the jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for $250.

C. L. JORDAN WED IN JERSEY.

Motors to Hackensack with Mrs. Bevans to Get License.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 10.—Clark L. Jordan, Jr., a lawyer at 154 Nassau Street, New York, living at 51 Rutland Road, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Nell J. Bevans, 35 years old, who admitted she was a divorcee, were married here last night by the Rev. Dr. Albert von Schlieder of the First Reformed Church. The couple autoed over from New York on Saturday and obtained a marriage license from Registrar Edward M. Johnson. With them was Lawyer Alex. G. H. Maidment of Hackensack, who asked the Rev A. Peter Tulp of the Christ Episcopal Church if he would marry the couple Sunday afternoon. He declined because Mrs. Bevans was divorced. This morning the Rev. Dr. von Schlieder announced that he had married them at his home.

KILLED IN SAVING HIS HAT.

Samuel Goldblatt's Legs Cut Off by a Subway Express.

As a northbound express pulled into the Wall Street Subway station shortly before noon yesterday the hat of a man standing near the edge of the platform on the uptown side was blown from his head, and in trying to recover it he fell to the tracks in front of the oncoming train. Two cars and the front trucks of the third passed over him before the train could be stopped by the emergency brakes. The man was still conscious when Policeman Eugene O'Connor of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station and the train crew extricated him. Both legs had been severed at the ankles and his head was injured.

At Volunteer Hospital it was learned that the victim was Samuel Goldblatt and that he was a real estate agent, 38 years old, living at 50 West 125th Street. He died at 6:30 o'clock.

Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, told the Baptist Ministers' Association yesterday at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, Madison Avenue and Thirty-first Street, why she did not think women should be enfranchised. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw spoke for the suffragists last Monday.

Miss Chittenden made prohibition a feature of her remarks. She said woman suffrage and prohibition were not synonymous and that until last November only one State in which the women had been enfranchised—Kansas—was a prohibition State, and that had gone "dry" twenty years before it gave women the vote. She declared even the suffragists acknowledged that Montana and Nevada, the latest suffrage States, were the "wettest" and reminded them that California, after it became a suffrage State, had voted down prohibition and that New Zealand had recently voted against prohibition.

Miss Chittenden closed by saying that while she had felt that many of her hearers were against her, she was exceedingly pleased with her reception. The ministers asked many questions, one being about the relation of feminism to suffrage.

"All suffragists are not feminists," she replied, "but all feminists are suffragists, because they believe that that will be the gateway to unlimited freedom for women."

RIGGS BANK SUIT MOTIONS.

Government Files Three Asking That Action Be Dismissed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Government today filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia three motions to dismiss the suit brought by the Riggs National Bank against the Secretary of the Treasury, the Controller of the Currency, and the Treasurer of the United States. The motions, which were filed separately for each of the defendant officials, were purely formal. They will be made in court on Wednesday morning, before which time extended replies on the merits of the case will have been filed.

The motions are identical as to their major reasons, with a few variants in each. The general reasons are that the suits, though brought nominally against individual officers, are directed against them purely in their official capacity and affect solely the property of the United States, which cannot be sued without its consent; that the plaintiff bank has a plain remedy at law, if it has any remedy at all, and that no cause of action recognisable in a court of equity is set forth in the bill of complaint, and that the actions complained of in either commanded of the defendant officials by law or are included within their proper discretion.

Counsel for Mr. McAdoo demurs further that as to specific points, such as the assessment of fines and the selection of reserve cities, the Secretary of the Treasury has no power whatever, all of it resting in the Controller of the Currency. Mr. Williams further demurs that the prayer for injunction against the Controller of the Currency forbidding him from imposing further fines and demanding further reports from the bank is a suit begun prematurely, as there is nothing to indicate that he intends further fines or calling for further reports.

EXTENDING RURAL DELIVERY

To Establish New Routes Without Waiting for Requests.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Post Office Department announced today that every petition pending for the establishment of rural delivery service had been approved by the Postmaster General. Orders have been issued which will put all this new service into operation during the present fiscal year.

As the next step toward the expansion of the postal service on terms of equality throughout the United States, the Postmaster General has directed his Fourth Assistant to provide for the extension of delivery to all rural delivery patrons reasonably entitled to it, regardless of whether or not a petition for the service is on file in the department.

This introduces a new policy in the administration of postal affairs. The department hereafter will move for the extension of postal facilities without waiting for requests therefor. Investigation will be made to ascertain the localities where necessity justifies the establishment of new routes or the extension of old ones.

CALLS 6 JUDGES TOO MANY.

Justice Tompkins Is Defying Westchester Republican Bosses.

Because Republican politicians in Westchester County are trying to force Governor Whitman to sign a bill giving the Ninth Judicial District two additional Judges, Justice Arthur S. Tompkins of the Supreme Court, also an organization Republican, is defying the bosses by renewing his fight against the measure. In an open letter given out yesterday in Mount Vernon Justice Tompkins said the enactment of the measure would be prejudicial to the judiciary as a whole, and added:

"I have earnestly opposed this bill from the time I first heard of it, which was the day it passed the Senate, because I know that even one additional Judge is unnecessary and that two would put a heavy, unreasonable, and unnecessary financial burden upon the taxpayers of the district and for the further reason that it would tend to degrade the judiciary and bring it into contempt.

"If we are to have six judges to do the work that three or four, at the most, can easily do, we would justly be the subject of ridicule. My anxiety is to preserve the integrity of the judiciary and not to permit it to be made subservient to any political organization or to serve ulterior personal ends of any man or set of men."

Whitman to Give City a Hearing.

Governor Whitman has written in response to the request of Mayor Mitchel promising that an opportunity would be afforded to the representatives of the city to be heard in protest against the proposed direct tax. Leo Arnstein, assistant to the President of the Board of Aldermen, is in Albany now watching the hearings on the appropriation bills before the Governor, and on Wednesday or Thursday Acting Mayor McAneny will go up to Albany and take up the fight in person.

CITES THE DANBURY CASE

Ex-Judge Cullen Denounces Action of West Virginia at Hearing of Industrial Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Industrial Commission today entered on the consideration of views of prominent publicists on the general subject of law and order in industrial relations. The topics embraced in the hearings on this phase of the issues between capital and labor include the matter of free speech and the responsibilities of labor agitation, conspiracy, the boycott, the use of the black list, and the value of laws and courts to the workingman and the employer relatively.

The hearings along this line will continue through the whole week and many prominent labor leaders, well-known jurists, and writers are to be heard. Among them will be Eugene V. Debs, "Mother" Jones, William Hayward of the Western Federation of Miners; S. S. Gregory, President of the National Law School of Chicago; Police Commissioner Arthur Woods of New York, and Clarence S. Darrow, the labor lawyer of Chicago, who defended the McNamaras at Los Angeles for dynamiting The Times building in that city.

Albert E. Roe of New York, the former law partner of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, presented the case of the workingman in the courts and before the law in his statements to the commission today, and ex-Chief Judge of the New York State Court of Appeals Edgar M. Cullen of Brooklyn discussed the use of the State Military Commission in the West Virginia strike.

Mr. Roe called attention to the ground taken by the United States Court in two recent decisions in which it decided that it was unconstitutional for an employer to deny his workingmen the right to join a union. In discussing the opportunity of labor in the courts, Mr. Roe declared that the employer and the rich had by far the advantage over the employe.

Judge Cullen denounced the course pursued by the State of West Virginia in setting up a military commission to try strikers and rioters. He declared that this was entirely unconstitutional, and there was no legal right, under the Constitution of the State, that could confer on a miliary commission the power to try and punish, in time of peace, when all the constitutional safeguards of our form of government were in full function for the protection of citizens.

Justice Walter Clark, Sr., of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, made a bold and uncompromising appeal for the rights of the laboring man before the courts. He said that the decision in the Danbury hatters' case, in making the individual members of the union responsible for the payment of a large penalty, was biased in favor of capital.

As a rule, Judge Clark said, the courts throughout the country are slow and unprogressive in their views of the rights of labor, and nowhere has the laboring man an equal chance with his employer on the bench, and are tainted by the views they gained while practicing at the bar. The only remedy labor has is the slow process of forming public opinion."

Coming to the causes of social unrest, which the commission calls to the attention of every witness to secure views from the observation of all who are heard, Judge Clark said that he thought the injunction was one of the chief causes. "It is a cause," said the witness, "that will grow if not remedied. The usurpation of power by any branch of the Government is a justifiable cause of unrest."

Perhaps the most striking utterance of the North Carolina jurist was his disavowal of the authority of the common law. "I do not recognize the rigat of a man, or set of men, who lived in former centuries to tell me what to do. I am not bound to be ruled by the common law even as a Judge."

Judge Clark criticised lobbyists, and said they were not only in the corridors around Congress and the State Legislatures, but some were in seats as members of these bodies. He questioned if any man could allow himself to be elected to a seat in Congress or a Legislature by the aid of campaign contributed to by corporations, and large employers could avoid being influenced by consideration of what was desired in legislation by those who put him there.

Deputy U. S. Marshals Ousted.

United States Marshal McCarthy wielded the axe yesterday in the Federal Building and notified six of the Deputy Marshals, who were appointed by Marshal Henkel, that their services were no longer needed. Those who were removed were Harry G. Gay, Morris Levy, Harry Beatty, Michael J. McEnany, James Reed, and Henry Cunningham. Other changes in the Marshal's office are expected soon.

Suffrage Tea for Ball Players' Wives

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, will throw the ball which will open the game between the Giants and the Cubs on Tuesday, May 18, which will be Suffrage Day at the Polo Grounds, the women sharing in the proceeds. The Governor was invited by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, but he relegated the duty to his wife. The Rev. Billy Sunday and his wife have been invited to be guests at the baseball rally to be held at 8 East Thirty-seventh Street Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, when the wives of the baseball players will be entertained at tea.

Railway Employes to Give Exhibit.

An exposition designed and managed by railway employes to interest the public in the work of the men upon whom depends the safe operation of railroad service will be shown in the Grand Central Palace May 17-22. The exhibit will include signaling systems and safety devices. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, Dispatchers, Agents, and Signalmen has charge of the exhibit.

Mrs. Mary Whiteman of 1,916 St. Nicholas Avenue, who suspected her husband, Louis, of eloping with a woman whom he introduced as his wife at the office of the Prudential Insurance Company at Newark, N. J., so that he could borrow $400 on an endowment policy of $2,000, in which his wife was named as the beneficiary, was on Pier 49, North River, yesterday when the steamer Antilles of the Morgan Line docked, and pointed out her husband to detectives when he walked down the gangplank.

Whiteman was arraigned before Magistrate Krotel in Jefferson Market Court on a warrant obtained by the insurance company charging him with forgery. He was held for examination tomorrow. Whiteman, 34 years old, was a designer in a Fifth Avenue cloak and suit house when he disappeared fourteen months ago. Mrs. Whiteman said:

"I found that a woman employed in the same place and who had often been a guest at my house had gone away about the same time. It was the same woman who went to the insurance company, and, representing herself to be me, signed the cash voucher with my husband as 'Mary Whiteman.'"

The Burns Detective Agency alleges that Whiteman and his companion had been in California.

SUNDAY CALLED BY CHICAGO

"Ma" Thinks a Miracle Has Been Worked in the Big City.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 10—Chicago called Billy Sunday today, and he is pleased over the fact that the big Western city is going to give him a chance to show what he can do. While he would say nothing tonight about accepting the call, "Ma" Sunday wasn't so backward, and expressed herself as delighted. She said:

"It's only once in an age that a city the size of Chicago lines up like that for God. It's a miracle. It's God's work. We'll feel justified in keeping all other cities in which we're scheduled to campaign waiting."

Asked whether the call would be accepted, "Ma" laughed and said:

"It looks good, doesn't it?"

A delegation of Chicago people will arrive in Paterson in a special car on Thursday, and present their formal request to Sunday. In the party will be Bishop Fallows, the Rev. Charles F. Wishart of the Chicago Second Presbyterian Church, one of the largest churches in the country; the Rev. James E. Walker, and the Rev. William H. Carwardine. In addition, there will be a number of Chicago's most prominent bankers and business men.

Sunday also received a call from Bridgeport, Conn., today, but did not state whether he would accept it or not.

Mr. and Mrs. Sunday and their two boys and several other members of the Sunday party were the guests today of William D. Plumb, President of the Patterson Rotary Club, at his bungalow at Greenwood Lake.

CORNELL MEN ARRESTED.

One, a Brooklyn Student, Charged with Robbing a Restaurant.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 10.—Eugene Howe of Fleischmanns, N. Y., a sophomore in the College of Agriculture at Cornell University, was arrested here today on a charge of forgery. For three months local merchants have been victimized by spurious checks and in the arrest of Howe the police believe they have cleared up the case. It is said that Howe confessed his guilt.

The police today also arrested Robert L. Smith of Brooklyn, who, in February, as a sophomore, was "busted" out of the College of Civil Engineering at Cornell, charged with stealing about $800 from a cafeteria on Dyden Road of which he had been cashier. It is charged that $200 of this amount was taken at the rate of $8 a day and that the balance was stolen in a lump sum from a desk in the restaurant.

Removes Ban on County Building.

Supreme Court Justice Brady yesterday vacated a temporary injunction which he granted a week ago on the application of Adolph Hupfel, a taxpayer, restraining the City of New York from signing a ten-year lease of a building to be erected by William C. Bergen, a contractor, at Arthur and Tremont Avenues, the Bronx, before Oct. 1, for the Bronx County Court, jail, and county offices. Justice Brady said the need of adequate space for the County Court and offices is too urgent to waste time on injunction proceedings.

New York's Death Rate Lower.

There were 1,609 deaths and a death rate of 14.46 in New York City last week as against 1,607 deaths and a rate of 15.01 for the corresponding week of 1914, an increase of two deaths and a decrease in the rate of .55 of a point, which is equivalent to a relative decrease of sixty-one deaths. The causes showing an increased mortality were measles, scarlet fever, diarrhoeal diseases, and lobar pneumonia. The death rate for the first nineteen weeks of 1915 was 14.71 per 1,000 of the population, as against a rate of 15.41 for the corresponding period of 1914.

In Giving Hotel Clerk 9 Months Court Calls Him "Small Cog in a Very Large Wheel."

MAY TRY TANZERS IN JUNE

Rae Denies Rumor That She Had Recanted Story That James W. Was "Oliver."

Describing the prisoner as only "a very small cog in a very large wheel," United States Judge Hough yesterday sentenced Franklin D. Safford to nine months' imprisonment for committing perjury when he identified James W. Osborne as the man he had seen with Rae Tanzer in the Hotel Kensington, Plainfield, N. J., on the afternoon of Oct. 18, 1913. In addition to the prison sentence, which must be served in the New York County Penitentiary, Judge Hough imposed a fine of $1 on Sanford.

By thus exacting practically a minimum penalty from Safford, Judge Hough observed the recommendation for leniency made by the jury. The Judge said that he concurred in the opinion of the jury, chiefly because of Safford's relatively small part in the alleged conspiracy to defraud James W. Osborne and also because of the prisoner's age and circumstances. Before passing the sentence Judge Hough denied motions made by Safford's counsel asking for an arrest of judgment, and the setting aside of the verdict. Later he denied a motion for a stay of execution of sentence.

While in court Safford again affirmed his innocence of the perjury charge, and his attitude indicated that he intended to stick to his story, although there were unconfirmed rumors that he would recede from his position. The rumors, it was said by his lawyers, were without foundation, and simply the usual aftermath of a conviction.

Another self-circulating report that attracted much greater attention was that Rae Tanzer would once more "change her mind," and for the second time affirm that James W. Osborne was not the man she knew as Oliver. This rumor spread rapidly after it became known that Harold Spielberg, Miss Tanzer's counsel, had gone to see United States District Attorney Marshall, but Mr. Spielberg denied any knowledge of the rumor. When Miss Tanzer herself was questioned she said, "There's nothing to it." When further interrogations were put to her she said:

"I'm very sorry for poor old Safford. That's all I have to say. Please don't ask me any questions."

Mr. Marshall said that the next trial in the Tanzer-Osborne case would begin some time in June, but that he did not know whether the Tanzer sisters, the Slades, or McCullough would be put on trial first. Mr. Spielberg, it is known, wants the Tanzer sisters tried together, and it is probable thatthey will be after Rae has been indicted for perjury, as her sisters have been.

HETTY GREEN MOVES BACK TO HOBOKEN

HAS NOT PAID TEXAS HERE

Matthew Astor Wilks, Her Son-in-Law, Says He Doesn't Know Where She Resides.

Mrs. Hetty Green has moved back to Hoboken, thereby leaving to tax assessors and collectors the task of deciding whether she is a resident of New York or of New Jersey. Tax collections began May 1, and the name of Mrs. Green is not on the list of the great holders of property who have paid. Tax assessments began last month, and most of the work will be done in May, June, and July. Mrs. Green, who enjoys the reputation of being the world's richest woman, is said to be worth $100,000,000, and, consequently, her every movement is a matter of concern to tax officials.

Whether Mrs. Green intends to live the rest of her days or the rest of the summer in Hoboken or not, a reporter for THE TIMES ascertained that she spent the nights of Friday, Saturday, and Sunday at 1,211 Washington Street, Hoboken, in the apartments of the family of Jacob Van Twist, caretaker of the apartment house. The agent for the house, which is owned by the Hoboken Land Improvement Company, said that Mrs. Green had not leased an apartment. However, it is recalled that three years ago when Mrs. Green lived in the same block her apartment was in the name "Mrs. Dewey." Mrs. Green owned a dog named Dewey. Van Twist denied last night that Mrs. Green was then at his home.

Mrs. Green did not spend the night at her supposed home at 9 West Ninetieth Street. She moved from Hoboken to Manhattan several years ago when her daughter was married and took an apartment at the Plaza Hotel. She soon left there for the Ninetieth Street home. Number 5 West Ninetieth Street is the home of her son, Colonel E. H. R. Green. The caretaker of 9 West Ninetieth Street said last night that Mrs. Green occasionally came to the house, but that she neither slept nor ate there. He said she drove up yesterday morning in a cab at 9 o'clock and left at 9:30, not saying where she was going. He said this was the first time he had seen her in a month. He said he had not seen Colonel Green for several months. He advanced the information that the house was not furnished with the exception of a very small lot of furniture. The building is a small, three-story brownstone house.

Just what State can boast of Mrs. Green as a resident was not known by her son-in-law, Mathew Astor Wilks. Asked last night where Mrs. Green lived he replied:

"I don't know. She visits my wife occasionally. Outside of that I don't know where she lives. She might be in New Jersey and she might not; she might be in Manhattan and she might not. Good night!"

Mrs. Green has never made any secret of the fact that she just detests listers, tax men, tax assessors or collectors. While the tax on her realty was fixed last October, there is a large part of her personal property that may escape taxation if the collector cannot find her. And then after the assessment is fixed, if she can prove in court that she is a resident of New Jersey, the tax authorities will have to begin all over again.

Wherever Mrs. Green's home is—her office is at 111 Broadway—it is to be a game of tag with the New York tax men, and after they find her they may not have her after all, for she's living now in Jersey.

DROP ROOSEVELT PICTURES

Williamsburg Progressives Dislike Colonel's Remarks on Lusitania.

Dissatisfied with the attitude of Col. Roosevelt concerning sinking of the Lusitania, 200 members of the Fourteenth Assembly District Progressive Club at Driggs Avenue and South Fourth Street, Williamsburg, voted unanimously last night for the immediate removal of two pictures of the ex-President on the wall of the grill room of the club, where the pictures of all the Presidents are grouped. The pictures were taken down and locked in a closet.

Coroner Ernst Wagner, leader of the district, who suggested this as a rebuke to the colonel, said that although the majority of the members were foreign-born they were "all for America first." They resented the statements of Mr. Roosevelt, he said, on the ground that they tend to embarass the national administration.

Shortly after the pictures were removed a new sign was put up in front of the clubhouse from which the word "national" had been removed, indicating that the club had withdrawn from the National Progressive Party. Further intimation that the club intends to return to the Republican Party was shown by its reception of a speech by George W. Serenbetz, representing Jacob Livingston, chairman of the Kings County Republican Committee, advising the Progressives to fuse with the Republicans.

SMITH BEWAILS STATE TAX.

Tells Real Estate Men Only Extra Session Can Prevent It.

Alfred E. Smith, minority leader in the Assembly, was the chief speaker last night at a meeting of the Real Estate Owners' Protective Association called to protest against the levying of a $19,000,000 direct tax. Mr. Smith criticised the appropriation bills, many items of which, he said, should unquestionably be vetoed.

"The Governor signed one bill, that of the direct tax, too soon," said Mr. Smith, "and unless an extra session of the Legislature is called, no matter how many appropriation bills may be vetoed, reducing State expenses, the $19,000,000 direct tax must stand, because that was the only bill of its kind passed.

"There would be some relief if we could get the $18,000,000 excess now in the Sinking Fund, but under the Constitution that cannot be taken out. The subject is being considered by the Constitutional Convention, and I hope it may arrive at some means whereby this excess sum may be utilized in a legal manner for the needs of the State."

Joseph S. Schwab, President of the association, presided, and there was a large attendance.

Would Change County Government.

The County Government Association of New York State, which will recommend to the constitutional convention that amendments be made to the constitution in regard to the form of county government, held a meeting at the City Club last night and debated the question without reaching any definite agreement. Another session will be held next week. This executive committee was elected: J. M. Wainwright, Dr. Carroll Dunham, Otho G. Cartwright, three years; Wayne Heydecker, George S. Buck and William M. Baldwin, two years; G. L. Hubbell, Delancey Verplank and H. S. Gilbertson, one year.

VILLISTAS REPORT VICTORY IN SONORA

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Villa agency here has received this telegram, dated today, from Governor Maytorena, at Nogales, Sonora:

"Our troops have defeated a Carranzista column, commanded by Colonel Samaniego, at San Pedro de la Cueva. Their losses were 180 killed, among them one chief and ten officers. Our forces captured 150 horses, two machine guns, and a large quantity of arms, ammunition and supplies."

General Villa today advised his agents in Washington that in the fighting south of Leon the enemy lost 944 dead and 1,238 prisoners, according to revised figures. Villa makes the claim that his own forces captured eleven machine guns, five cannon, a trainload of arms and ammunition, and many horses. According to Villa, General Obregon retreated to Irapuato, where he is intrenching.

A message from General Carranza to his confidential agency in Washington said: "Our forces have reoccupied Panuco with great loss to the enemy." Panuco is in the heart of the Panuco oilfield, southwest of Tampico. The Villista agency made public a telegram which said: "The report of the recapture of the city by Carranzistas is untrue." The capture of Panuco by the Villistas was attended by heavy losses, these of the Carranzistas being the more severe, according to this dispatch, and General Urbina of the Villa forces reported that he took a large quantity of ammunition and war materials in the battle.

General Ignacio L. Pesqueira, accompanied by a technical commission composed of Manuel J. Urrea, brother-in-law of General Alvaro Obregon, and José Penedo, are in Washington on their way to New York, commissioned by General Carranza to purchase three transports for the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean.

The Carranza agency received a cablegram from Vera Cruz which said:

"First Chief Carranza has issued a decree allowing import and export duties and taxes to be paid in silver as well as gold, the peso being valued at 76 cents and the tostones at 53 cents. This is expected to bring into circulation much silver that is being hoarded. General Carranza also issued a decree removing the embargo on dynamite and powder further to assist mining throughout the country."

The agency says that the Villistas near Morelia have been dispersed and that the entire State of Michoacan is under Constitutionalist control.

"Villa forces have been pouring into Torreon since Saturday," says another telegram. "They say Obregon defeated them at Aguascalientes and Villa ordered their concentration at Torreon. Forces of General Ricardo Pena, ex-Federal, are also arriving after being defeated at Zacatecas by Generals Murguia and Dieguez."

ART IN ATCHISON.

Its History Is Told by the Pictures on the Walls.

In a town the size of Atchison it is not necessary to join an art study class to learn the history of art. It is written on the walls of the houses in the town. When an engraving of "Washington Crossing the Delaware" hangs on the wall, and a chromo of a woman with a shawl over her head stares over her left shoulder as though she were making a wish on the new moon, the house is ruled from kitchen to parlor by "mother," and she is between 60 and 70 years of age; and believes in the "old masters."

When Madonnas holding fat babies are on the parlor walls, and highly thin women in red robes tooting bright yellow horns which they hold to their mouths with wooden fingers, the lady of the house addresses art and knows how to pronounce Fra Angelica, Bondenoudenone, Rophael, and the rest. When these pictures are on the wall of a motherly looking woman, while father and the child look on, visitors at the house recognize the art that was born during the Chicago World's Fair, and when "Breaking Home Ties" became the rage. A little later period in the art history of the town is represented by pictures on the parlor walls of a fine, healthy-looking young man wearing a monk's habit, with the cowl slipping off from his thick hair. People posted on "art" know that is a picture of Hosea. When there are pen-and-ink sketches of square-jawed men and tall, bony young women in very low-neck evening dresses the rage of Gibson pictures, (now about extinct,) is represented.

When there are water-color pictures of girls with pink cheeks, lips puckered up as though ready to be kissed, and colored pictures of a chubby little girl under which is written "Innocence," with a scattering of funny pictures of gayly colored English ladies and gentlemen climbing in and out of buses, "modern art" is displayed, and the presiding genius of the house is a bride, and those pictures were wedding gifts.—Atchison Globe.

MILITARY BURIAL FOR STOLZ

Ensign Melvin Lewis Stolz, the United States navy aviator, who was killed at Pensicola, Fla., last Saturday by a fall of an aeroplane, will be buried with military honors from his late residence, 610 Riverside Drive, at 9:30 tomorrow morning.

Stolz was born in New York in July, 1888. He entered the Naval Academy under appointment of Senator Platt in 1904, was graduated in 1910, and saw service in Vera Cruz. He returned from Europe on the U. S. S. Jason about a month ago.

A detachment of 125 seamen with officers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard will accompany the body to Cypress Hills, where a salute will be fired over the grave. It is expected that several brother officers of Ensign Stolz, now with the fleet in the North River, will attend the funeral.

Wash Lines Broke Her Fall.

Mrs. Annie McGowan, 45 years old, of 428 West Fifty-second street, yesterday began to hang the clothes out on her line extended across the airshaft from her window on the third floor and lost her balance. As she fell screeming to the ground she carried other wash lines and family wash down with her. A Polyclinic Hospital ambulance surgeon found Mrs. Fecthig very angry and slightly bruised. He said the ropes had broken her fall but he took her to the hospital for examination.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—Headed by a brass band 500 striking employes of A. Hollander & Sons, fur finishers, marched to the plant at 143 East Kinney Street yesterday, where articles of "peace" were signed by the strikers and members of the Hollander firm, who will recognize the union.

NEWARK.—Among patrons of the Tinquer House, at 59 Court Street, damaged by fire yesterday, were Miss Bessie Foye and Miss Camilla Priestly, actresses appearing at the Orpheum Theatre, who were unconscious from smoke when rescued by firemen.

MONTCLAIR.—The Rev. Nassau S. Stephens, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, has tendered his resignation, to take effect June 1. Mr. Stephens said he is leaving Montclair because he feels that his work for St. James's is completed.

MORRISTOWN.—Owen James Adams, 22 years old, an attendant at the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, was drowned last night in Jugel Lake when a canoe which he was paddling capsized. Adams's home was in Madison.

RED BANK.—Three masked men bound and gaged three employes of the Monmouth Electric Company in the car barns at Shrewsbury yesterday and then blew open the safe. They obtained $500.

DOCTORS CALL HALT ON DRUG-HABIT LAWS

Disapprove Proposal to Duplicate Federal Narcotic Statute in State.

A PLEA FOR OPIUM USERS

Dr. Daniels Tells Society of Medical Jurisprudence That Family Privacy Is Attacked.

Further steps to curb the use of habit-forming drugs by the enactment of a uniform State law modeled after the recently enacted Federal narcotic law, were advocated by Charles Wesley Dunn, attorney for several pharmaceutical societies, at a meeting of the Society of Medical Jurisprudence at the Academy of Medicine last night. Mr. Dunn had scarcely finished reading his paper when several doctors jumped to their feet and voiced their disapproval of the idea. Dr. Frank H. Daniels was the first to protest.

"We seem to be approaching the time in this country," he said, "when privacy will be a thing of the past, and when even the secrets of family life must be recorded for inspection by some State department or commission. Many a person has innocently acquired the opium habit and takes daily a small quantity of the drug. Can it be said that this is any worse than the habit of chewing or smoking tobacco or drinking wine in moderation? These people, some of them aged, cannot or will not give up the habit, and really need the drug as much as the cardiac patient needs digitalis. And must they be listed as under the ban of the law?

"If these people, by virtue of the large doses of drugs taken, become a menace to the community, or, to use the language of the law, become addicted to the use of the drugs in a manner contrary to the public welfare, they certainly ought to receive treatment. But the mere fact that they take a small quantity of the drug and are harmless is to my mind no concern of the State officials and is a matter about which the public need not worry."

Dr. Daniels asserted that the Federal Narcotic law, which went into effect on March 1 last, merely "tagged doctors like so many automobiles." Some parts of it he said rivaled even the Sherman Law for complexity.

"The patent medicine joker in the Federal law and the Baylan law of this State," declared Dr. R. "shows goh pieces of legislation to be vicious.

Dr. Daniels said that if the uniform law ever was passed in this State every doctor would have to provide himself with a bok of duplicate order blanks, besides three separate books—one for recording drugs given to patients, one for drugs given to habitual users, and one for recording the quantities of cocaine ordered and dispensed.

"If any such law is passed," he added, "each physician will be entitled to the services of a private secretary at the State's expense."

FAVORS NEWSBOYS' CLUB.

Mrs. Philip Lydig Says New York Owes It to the Little Men.

Mrs. Philip Lydig is much interested in the campaign headed by Martin W. Littleton to raise $250,000 for the Newsboys' Home Club. She said yesterday:

"New York City certainly owes a well-equipped club to her 4,000 newsboys, and I hope she will pay the debt promptly. I cannot help feeling that if a boy who comes into life with a normal body and a normal brain grows up to be either a charge on the community or a menace to the community, the responsibility lies with those who withhold from him either deliberately or thoughtlessly the means for his proper development.

"Since they form a concrete group, why shouldn't the newsboys have a club of their own? It would give them a sense of esprit de corps. Boys are only little men, after all, and like men, they enjoy association with those who are pursuing lines of work similar to their own. There are lawyers' clubs, engineers' clubs, doctors' clubs, teachers' clubs, clubs of painters and musicians, and even press clubs. Why not a Newsboys' Club!"

Some Kansas English.

Judge Ruppenthal of Russell writes to The Lucas Herald: "One lawyer in this district often refers to a 'skintilla of evidence' in his argument; another calls people receiving county aid, 'indignant'; a third always wants every 'ingredient' of the charge in criminal cases proved. One or more object to the 'irrevelant' testimony."—Kansas City Star.

The Way of the Cartoonist.

Mosha Murphy notes our inquiry as to why a newspaper artist couldn't make a box without printing "SOAP" on it. He adds a few inquiries of his own, to wit: "Why can't a cartoonist draw a barber without a comb stuck in his hair?" And "Do all stews hold themselves up by means of lamp posts?" Also, "Why does a cartoonist always depict himself as wearing a flowing black Windsor tie?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wonder Why.

KILLED BY AUTO IN TOW.

After being treated at the Polyclinic Hospital for contusions of the body and chest, which he suffered when struck by an automobile yesterday, Charles Walcott, 32 years old, a salesman, returned to his home at 301 West Forty-sixth Street, and at 7 o'clock last evening was found dead in his bedroom.

Mr. Walcott was crossing Eighth Avenue and Fifty-third Street shortly after noon, when he started to walk behind a slowly-moving automobile owned by the Renault Automobile Company of 719 Fifth Avenue. He did not notice that the automobile was towing another at the end of a rope about ten feet in length, and stumbled over the rope. The second car, owned by the same company, struck him. He did not think his injuries very serious, and, after being treated at the hospital, insisted on returning home, where he ate an early supper with his wife and retired. It was his wife who found him dead soon after supper.

Charles Crowe of 87 Henry Street, Long Island City, was the chauffeur of the first automobile. He was examined by the police, but was not arrested.

An investigation of Mr. Walcott's death was made late last night by the Coroner's physician, Dr. McAllister, and it was learned that the victim of the accident had died from internal injuries and a fracture of the pelvic bone.

At Mr. Walcott's home it was said that he stated, on returning from the hospital, that he had insisted on coming home only when informed that his injuries consisted principally of a sprained back.

CONCERNING APPLAUSE.

Too Much of It and No Discrimination in Awarding It.

Applause is no longer significant in the concert hall. There is no discrimination. A pianist comes on the stage. He may be a familiar apparition or a questionable stranger, it matters not; he is greeted with applause. This is natural courtesy. He attacks a sonata. There is applause after each movement. Too often he rises and bows; thus the continuity of the sonata is destroyed. There is a group of small pieces. He may play a prelude abominably and the succeeding nocturne inimitably. The applause is the same. After each number in a group, there is the bowing in acknowledgment. He leaves the stage three or four times. Returning, he is again greeted with applause. And the applause is as hearty and without regard to merit for some stumbler or paragon as for the well equipped and poetical.

It is true that many in the audience are deadheads, but deadheads are supposed to be hypercritical and constitutionally ungraceful. Is it possible that the hearers are mindful of Dr. Edward Bradley's injunction: "Lend a hand"? Or are they nervous and eager to do something? The pianist need not feel obliged to rise frequently for the purpose of stretching his legs. A judicious use of the pedals will prevent his feet from going to sleep, and there is the exercise of leaving the stage and coming on again.

The chief objection, however, to applause is that it no longer means anything. It is not a compliment. Nor would it be safe to entrust the direction to any fugleman seated on the stage to wave a red lantern of disapproval or stand up and cheer.—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

STIR IN THE SCHOOLHOUSE.

"Why were you absent yesterday?" asked the teacher.

"Because they wanted to be, sure what was the matter with me," answered the little girl. "The doctor didn't know whether it was diphtheria or something else."

The teacher hustled the child to the school nurse, who sent her home. Then the telephone wire buzzed.

"No case of diphtheria at that address," the Board of Health reported.

The little girl came to school next day.

"What did you say was the matter with you?" the teacher asked.

"They weren't sure whether it was diphtheria or appendicitis."

"You go back home and bring a note from your mother," said the Principal.

Later in the day the child appeared with the following written message:

"Please excuse Maggie, as I kept her out because she had chilblains."—Newark News.

EGYPT AS RULER OVER NEW TURKEY

Sir William Ramsay Suggests Revival of an Old French Policy After the War.

COUNCIL OF ALLIED POWERS

LONDON, April 24.—Writing in The Manchester Guardian on "The Future of Turkey" Sir William Ramsay says:

"It is believed almost universally that, as the result of the present war, Constantinople must pass out of the hands of the Turks. Let us assume that this is so. What will be the consequences in Asia Minor, to which the Turkish officials and Government must retire? In the central region, extending right across from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean, there is a compact Moslem population, varied in race, but all looking naturally and contentedly—for the Turks are almost always content, whatever be their lot—to the Sultan as their lord. This population consists of Turks proper or Osmanli, the Western Kurds, (completely separted from the well-known Eastern Kurds of infamous repute,) the Turkomans, and several less numerous nomad races such as Yuruks, and the scattered refugee peoples, Circassians, and European Turks from Bulgaria, Roumelia, Bosnia, &c. These form a considerable body, and with a proper government might be made into a solid State; but they have never had a chance for many centuries. They may number anywhere between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000, according to the boundaries selected.

"The western coast lands, with the valleys of the Hermus, Caicus, Cayster, and Maeander, contain a considerable Greek population, whose numbers and property have increased greatly since the railways radiating from Smyrna were built. These all tend toward union with Greece, but in this region there are considerable districts where the population was purely and wholly Mohammedan in pre-railway times and remains still preponderantly Turk; the mountains are wholly Moslem, while the Greeks increase in the fertile valleys. The interlacing and yet separation of Moslems and Greeks would constitute a serious difficulty in respect of bounds. How much should go with the Central Sultanate, and how much would gravitate toward Greece? The presence of certain bodies of Armenians, generally prosperous and even wealthy, and of a considerable body of Jews in Smyrna need not cause any more difficulty than the existence of bodies of Europeans and of Levantine Christians in the cities; these are foreign, and remain so until they may be absorbed into a stable and rationally administered State. Turkish religion and law and the capitulations forbid them becoming subjects of Turkey. Such bodies of foreigners will become more numerous and influential also in the Central Sultanate when it is governed decently.

"On the northeast a protected Armenian State is a necessity. The same difficulty of interspersed Moslem population presents itself here as on the west, but justice and reason and history protest against the subjection of the industrious Armenians to the brutal Kurds and the lazy Turks. Freedom for Armenia ought to be a first and absolute condition. Unless diplomacy recognises this essential fact, it can do no good in Asiatic Turkey. Further south, Syria has no feeling of loyalty to Turkey, and still less has Arabia. In recent years it has several times looked as if Syria were about to split off from the weakening grip of the Young Turks. Syria speaks Arabic, but does not naturally coalesce with the Arabs of the desert.

"The existence of a Sultan in Egypt suggests the extension of his authority, though not in any kind of absolutism, over the Arab-speaking country, and it might even come about that the scheme fostered by the French in alliance with Mohammed Ali and Ismail Pasha, 1830-39, might at last prove successful, and an Egyptian Sultan might rule over all Turkey with guidance from European advisers and a European council; in which Russia, France, England, and Belgium should have a place, and possibly Italy, &c., might also be included. I name those four countries not because they are the four Allies at present, but by reason of the experience of the past forty years in Turkey. If, however, this council is to do any good, it should consist not of diplomats, but of men who know the country and its people and its history and social conditions—medical men, scientific men, historians, even lawyers. Let knowledge and science for once have a hearing in Turkey. If a council of diplomatically trained men, ignorant of the practical basis on which civilized life rests, regulates Turkey, the last state of the country will be worse than the first.

"It seems probable that the difficulties on the west side of Asia Minor may be lessened by the King's action in overthrowing Venizelos and breaking his agreement with the Allies. Constantine failed at the critical moment. None who knew the reputation that he used to have was surprised at this; it is exactly in accordance with all that was said and thought about his character. The success of the last war with Turkey rehabilitated his reputation, but there was little apparent ground for reversing the old belief in Greek regarding him, which I need not repeat. But the facts are known to the Asiatic Greeks, and they will put the blame where it is deserved. Will this stop the drift of the Aegean districts of Asia Minor toward Greece? People tend strongly toward a country that they can be proud of, as Greece for several years deserved; Venizelos did the work, and the King got the credit before the world.

"The same people who were moving toward Greece may set more toward Constantine. They may remember the fundamental fact of this case. In a country administered under European officials and a European council the Greeks of the Aegean littoral would have great power and full security. They would be the dominant influence in that new Asiatic Turkey which may after all be bounded by the Aegean Sea. I cannot doubt that they would be safer, happier, more influential in that Europeanized Turkey than in a Greece where Constantine rules; and they may realize this truth."

GREAT MEN OPPOSED WAR.

The Churchman Tells of Generals Who Deplored Conflict.

General Sherman's strong statement, much quoted, in regard to war, which has been denied, but which he actually did say in a letter to his brother, echoes the feeling of other war leaders. The Churchman, one of the organs of the Episcopal Church, in its last issue, in a column in which it comments on current events, has brought together the thoughts on war of a number of war leaders. Here they are:

"Napoleon said at St. Helena: 'The more I study the world, the more I am convinced of the inability of brute force to create anything durable.' The Duke of Wellington wrote to Lord Shaftesbury: 'War is a most detestable thing. If you had seen but one day of war you would pray God that you might never see another.' George Washington said: 'My first wish is to see this plague banished from the face of the earth.' Ulysses S. Grant: 'Though educated a soldier, and though I have gone through two wars, I have always been a man of peace, preferring to see questions of difference settled by arbitration. It has been my misfortune to be engaged in the murder of more than any other American General, but there was never a time during my command when I would not have chosen some settlement by reason rather than by the sword.'

The collection is completed with that classic by General W. T. Sherman:

"I confess without shame that I am sick and tired of war. Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have neither heard a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for more blood, more vengeance, more desolation. War is hell!"

A verdict for $15,000 against the City of New York was awarded yesterday by a jury in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to Mrs. Laura Fuller of 3,233 Church Avenue, Brooklyn, for the loss of her husband, who was killed on Jan. 2, 1913, on the Manhattan Bridge, when an exploding valve blew him off the bridge to the street, causing his death.

Former Controller of Internal Revenues Charles W. Anderson will be the guest of honor at a dinner this evening at Manhattan Casino to be given by the Colored citizens of New York.

KITCHENER MADE FRENCH KEEP PARIS

War Lord Said to Have Threatened to Withdraw Troops if City Surrendered.

UPHELD POINCARE'S HAND

French President Was Able to Overthrow Caillaux's Plans and to Send Him Into Exile.

A Parisian explanation of the reason for Lord Kitchener's flying trip to France in September, which was kept secret at the time and which has never been officially explained, is given in an article on "Paris in War Time," which appears in the current issue of the American Oxonian. The author is E. F. Porter, a Rhodes scholar from North Dakota, who gives the story as it is told in Paris, though, of course, devoid of official sanction.

"Every one will remember," writes Mr. Porter, "the English explanations of this move, which were quite wonderful—one that he had had a French General cashiered for failing to support the British at Mons, another that he had shot some high military official for traitorously suppressing certain orders, or allowing his German wife to steal them.

"In Paris one hears that when the German advance was rolling up the French and English forces before it and it became necessary to think of the defense of the city itself it was suddenly discovered that the ammunition in the forts was ten years out of date and that the forts themselves would be of little use before the recent developments in German guns. Panic seized on people. A faction in Parliament headed by a certain ex-Premier advocated the policy of non-resistance, of making Paris an open city after the fashion of Brussels, and allowing the Prussians to enter it. Caillaux, himself generously offered to go to the Emperor and make the necessary arrangements. Then Kitchener and French and Joffre came to Paris and informed the Cabinet that if this plan were followed the English troops would be withdrawn and the French left to fight it out alone. With this definite statement Poincaré was able to overthrow at once both Caillaux and his plans—which accounts for the vigorous preparations for defense—and the fact that Caillaux is now quietly in Brazil. The Prefect of Police and Military Governor of Paris, Caillaux adherents, were also removed."

In writing of life in Paris during the long period of waiting with the German lines but on the Aisne, Mr. Porter says:

"The Paris through which my taxi drove was not that of a year ago in brilliance of lights and busy, jolly crowds of people. But it was like the Great White Way at full blast in comparison with London. After the dense and heavy gloom which had settled over the Piccadilly of late, the atmosphere of Paris seemed joyous and exhilarating. The ratio between the gayety of the two capitals remains about the same. For while the French are talking the war with a calmness that forms a great contrast to the habitual attitude of the average Parisian, it is hard to imagine any circumstances which would reduce their city to the stolid and deadly level of seeming respectability which London presents.

"True, one misses nearly all of the external phenomena—the things which make it a center and give it the name of 'gay Paree.' The cafes are almost deserted, the theatres seldom open, the museums and art galleries closed. One finds but little of the usual animation on the boulevards, while the emptiness of the chairs and tables outside the cafes reminds one more forcibly than anything else that Parisians have now other uses for their time. I was told by presumably competent judges that the only part of the Paris underworld enjoying any measure of prosperity was the underground railroad. But under present conditions the difference between the two capitals is that London is London but more so, while Paris is Paris but less so. But a little less of Paris improves it, while any more of London is hopeless.

The writer also reminds Americans that all the aid they have sent to the French is trifling by comparison with the need, and that "the attitude of some people, who seem to have the idea that our military hospital was doing the whole work in Paris, or at least that it far exceeds any other in management and equipment, is comparable with that of some British papers which talk as if their small army were holding back the tide of German invasion, with some trifling assistance from the French."

FOSTER HOLDS YANKS SAFE IN THE PINCHES

Tris Speaker Snuffs Out Their Best Chance to Win by Great Catch with Two on Bases.

In the ninth inning of yesterday's game between the Yankees and the Boston Red Sox at the Polo Grounds the Yanks were at the bat with two men on the bases and one out. Boston was leading by a score of 3 to 0. Roy Hartzell, at the bat, jarred the ball on a torrid flight into deep right centre field.

You'd willingly mortgage the farm to get down a bet that this was a home run in the making, that he score would be tied, and the game would go to extra innings, and goodness knows what might happen. One of Uncle Sam's able-bodied seamen wanted to wager the whole Atlantic Fleet against a Subway ticket that Hartzell would knock a board out of the centre field fence.

This calculation would doubtless have been correct if it had not been for the fact that Tris Speaker was in Boston's centre field. Tris covers ground like a shadow, only more of it. He gets something like $17,500 a year for frisking other teams out of their deserved spoils, just as he wantonly robbed Hartzell of a home run yesterday.

He wished himself under Hartzell's Roman candle and nipping the ball out of space. He squelched the Yankee rally and permitted several citizens to get home to dinner in time to avoid being grilled brown on the pan.

Hugh High then made a single to left, and Duffy Lewis caressed the ball in his hands as if he owned it, and stood as silent as a wooden Indian in front of a cigar store, while Pinch Hitter Ray Caldwell scored with the Yanks' only run. The final reckoning was 3 to 1.

The sailors from the fleet didn't pour out to the park at the Yankees' nice invitation in the numbers expected. There was a brass band there to welcome them, but only a few hundred responded. The tars made enough noise for the whole fleet.

The sailors didn't see all of the game. They sat through the first inning, and during the second inning were busy in the department where lemonade is also sold. They saw the third inning, then skipped one and saw the fifth, and so on until the game was over.

The sailors were expected to fill the whole upper tier, but there was plenty of room for them downstairs. There is one occasion this month when that upper stand is going to be jammed, and that will be on May 18, when the suffragettes are going up there in all their beauty and fashion to root for the Giants against the Cubs. Bet the Giants will win.

The Yankees had plenty of chances to win yesterday's game, but George Foster pitched so well in the pinches that no safe slaps were forthcoming when Yankees sojourned on the pillows. On three different occasion—in the second, fourth, and sixth innings—Leslie Nunamaker ambled to bat with two men on the bases, but he failed each time to unload any of the bases.

Marty McHale didn't permit so many hits, but those which the Bostons did produce were long, extra-base clouts which were easily translated into runs.

In the first inning Hooper walked, went to second on Wagner's out, and scored on Speaker's triple to left centre. In the third, with one gone, Lewis singled, stole second, and scored on Scott's double to left. Then, in the ninth, with one out, McNally singled through first and counted on Thomas's triple to centre.

The Yanks had a great chance to wreck the game in the eighth. High doubled, and Pipp and Cook walked, filling the bases. Peckinpaugh dissipated all hope by hitting into a double play. Foster gave a nifty exhibition of the right kind of pitching in this round.

In the ninth Nunamaker was an easy out at first. Caldwell, hitting for McHale, walked. So did Maisel. Then Speaker's great running catch nullified Hartzell's almost home run. High singled to left, where Lewis held the ball, while Caldwell scored. The score:

MRS. WHITMAN TO TOSS BALL

Governor and Mrs. Whitman have been invited to be the guests of honor of the suffragists at the baseball game on May 18 at the Polo Grounds, when the suffrage cause will share the gate receipts from the game between the Giants and the Cubs. Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Chairman of the Baseball Committee, asked Governor Whitman to toss the ball into the field and open the game, but the Governor, who is not certain of being present, has delegated this part of the program to Mrs. Whitman.

"The woman suffrage game at the Polo Grounds Tuesday, May 18. The Giants and the Cubs will play. Buy your tickets now at McBride's, Tyson's, Alexander's, or from the suffragists at 8 East Thirty-seventh Street." This is the wording of the sandwich boards which will be paraded at noon Tuesday by the Baseball Nine through Wall and Nassau Streets. Among the paraders are Miss Abastenia Eberle, Mrs. Lila Wheelock Howard, Miss Agnes Morgenthau, Mrs. A. D. Martin, Miss Bessie Brainard, and Miss Emily Hooper.

The suffrage van will be stationed at Broad Street and Exchange Place on Wednesday to round up lukewarm fans. Mrs. A. D. Martin will speak at 1 o'clock.

On Thursday at 4:30 P. M. there will be a baseball rally at 8 East Thirty-seventh Street. Tea will be served, and the wives of baseball players will be guests of honor. Billy and "Ma" Sunday have also been invited to be special guests at this tea.

Tigers Beat Reds in Poor Game.

DETROIT, Mich., May 10.—Detroit defeated the Cincinnati Nationals, 10 to 9, in a poorly played eight-inning exhibition game here today. Griffith's muff of Crawford's fly after two were out, Veach's triple, and Kavanagh's single gave Detroit the winning runs in the eighth. Score:

BRAVES PLAY THREE NEW YORK PITCHERS

Champions Take Five Out of Six Games Played with Giants This Season.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 10.—The Braves made a runaway match of their final engagement with the Giants at Fenway Park this afternoon, beating them 14 to 9, lashing out fifteen hits against Tesreau, Schupp, and Ritter, and all afternoon tantalizing the New Yorkers by allowing them to get runs in every other inning or so.

It was the fifth beating in six games administered by the Braves to McGraw's team this season, and what disgusted the visitors most was that for the fourth time the champions were able to run their total runs into double figures.

The Giants played poor baseball aside from the fact that the pitchers had little or nothing with which to bother the home club, which apparently is getting into last season's stride. The Giants hit Tyler hard, getting twelve hits against him and finally, in the ninth inning, driving him from the box, but all the New York hitting was done while the Braves were pegging along under a comfortable lead.

For the Braves it was a nice day's work of hitting the ball into territory the New York fielders were unable to cover, while on occasions the Giants also had good luck. The Braves' six runs of the earliest inning hardly were enough to win, but they were the means of taking the starch out of the Giants, the least of whose troubles today was losing the last afternoon train for home. Tesreau beat the Braves the other day, and McGraw figured him to repeat. The team put Tesreau right by scoring a run in the first inning, which Burns opened with a single, later to score on Lobert's sacrifice fly.

Big Jeff, however, did not last even a full inning against the champions. Moran started things with a hit for the home club, and then after Brainerd had made a brilliant stop Tesreau passed both Connolly and Magee, filling the bases. Then Schmidt's right field single, Doyle's error on Smith's roller, which should have been turned for an easy double play to end the inning, and hits by Whaling and Tyler, following Maranville's strike-out, made, with a wild pitch by Jeff himself, the easy combination on which the Braves waded into the game with a 6 to 1 lead. Schupp displaced Tesreau when Moran came to bat for the second time in the inning, and he stopped things momentarily. Two innings later, though, the Braves got to Schupp for a cluster of two singles and a double, which, with an intermediate pass, netted three runs.

Soon after this the Braves got to Schupp again for a single and a double after he had hit Schmidt, and in the eighth and ninth innings Ritter, first through wildness and later because of his ineffectiveness, was made responsible for three more runs. Tyler, with the big lead behind him, marched through the game with little effort, the Giants getting runs in five different innings after their opening.

In the ninth, when the Braves were ahead, 14 to 6, Lobert, Fletcher, and Robertson each landed on the first ball served for a hit. This ended Tyler, and although a subsequent hit against Crutcher made three New York runs possible for the inning, the lead was too great, and the Giants' final effort ended as quickly as it had begun.

Several times it was up to Tyler to extend himself, and this he did in excellent fashion. He also was a very important figure in the attack of his team, for, coming to bat five times, he missed hitting safely only once. It was plain today that after the first inning McGraw had little hope of getting back into the fight. The New York club was sadly off in its fighting qualities, and the four errors which show in the score do not cover the general manner in which off-day baseball hit the club as a whole. Burns was in the game from start to finish, his two triples and two singles counting toward four of his club's nine runs. Murray's exhibition in centre field was weak, although he is charged with no errors. The score:

'BEANED' THE BASE RUNNER.

Star Bonehead Play Ascribed to Pitcher Rube Evans.

Probably the "boniest" bonehead play ever witnessed on the baseball diamond is that accredited to Rube Evans, a southpaw pitcher, who has pitched in almost every minor league of note in this country and earned a nation-wide reputation as a "squirrel." His most amusing stunt was witnessed when he was pitching for Portland a few years ago.

At that time the squeeze play was attracting considerable notice because of the manner in which the Philadelphia Athletics were successfully employing this intricate bit of baseball strategy. The opposing teams were using the play with such regularity and marked success that Manager McCredie was in a rage when runners were on third with none or one out.

Finally, after the squeeze play had been worked on Evans twice in one inning, McCredie said:

"The next time they try that play, bean him, (meaning, of course, the batsman.) That will stop them."

"There he goes!" was the cry set up by Evans's team mates. Imagine the surprise and excitement in the grounds when Evans whirled about and deliberately threw as straight as an arrow at the base runner. The pitcher's aim was perfect, and the ball struck the runner just back of the ear, stretching him unconscious on the base path. A riot almost followed, and Evans was lucky to escape without being mobbed.

On the way back to the hotel, Manager McCredie said: "What were you thinking of, you big lunkhead?"

"You told me to bean him, didn't you?" replied Evans. "Why didn't you say the batter? I thought you meant the base runner."

PHILS CAN'T STOP DODGERS.

Quakers Shut Out by Wheezer Dell—Errors Help Brooklyn Win, 5 to 0

The Dodgers gave the Phillies a farewell party yesterday afternoon at Ebbets Field, and the Quakers left with tears in their eyes. It was all because of Wheezer Dell, the lanky Westerner who, Manager Robinson says, is going to be one of the greatest pitchers in the National League. However that may be, he certainly made the Quakers have a mean opinion of themselves when they tried to snatch the deciding game of the series from the Dodgers. When nine men in nine innings manage to acquire a title to only three hits it is time to call the baseball doctor. That is all the Phillies got at the Brooklyn field yesterday, and as a result of Wheezer's stinted generosity the Dodgers shut out Pat Moran's boys by a score of 5 to 0.

There is something about that Brooklyn baseball club this year that fills one with wonderment. Defeat has been in past years such a constant occurrence that it seems like a miracle that the team can really play ball. If you had seen yesterday's game you would no longer be a doubting Thomas. Robbie's men go at it as if they had never been on speaking terms with defeat. Yesterday they shot right out in front and took advange to the fullest of the lax play of their opponents. Good old-fashioned slugging spelled out the Quaker defeat, and when you get that combined with a few glittering errors there is little more needed to win any game. The generous Mr. Whitted helped along two Broooklyn tallies, once by a poor throw to Mayer when he was covering the sack and again by a fumble of a grounder from O'Mara's bat. Both of the errors in fact came on the Dodger shortstop and he scored two of the Brooklyn runs.

When the Phillies say that they could not win by the usual method of heavy hitting, they tried the talk game and it brought the usual quick action. This started in the eighth. Up to that time there had been no general dissatisfaction with the work of Mr. Quigley in calling balls and strikes. When Niehoff came up to lead the Phillies' batsmen in the eighth he shot out a single to right field. That looked like a good start to the Quakers and they had wonderful visions of a tie score. Dell was getting a trifle unsteady and passed Paskert, but not before the Quaker City player had voiced his disapproval of two of the strikes that had been called. They call him praying Paskert and he did it yesterday to Quigley's disgust. Also he talked a bit to the umpire but the latter restrained himself and Paskert finally walked. Burns had taken Killifer's place in the third inning and he too tried the talk game when he was struck out. Dugey, batting for Mayer, also struck out, and the Phillies' opportunity crumbled when Stock was thrown out by O'Mara. The trouble had only started, however. The three men who felt offended kept up their comment and an instant later Mayer, Burns and Dugey were ambling from the field urged by Mr. Quigley's persuasive voice.

Actually the Quakers never had a chance. Only two men reached third. In the seventh Niehoff managed to get to that sack and in the ninth Bancroft was down beside Schultz, but neither one had an opportunity to get in. The ninth was really one of the hopeful innings for the visitors. Bancroft had drawn a pass and Becker sent one to right field for a base. With none out Pat Moran was beginning to have another vision of victory. It was quickly dispelled, however. Cravath succeeded in foul flying into Miller's hands and Whitted struck out. Then Niehoff raised a long lofter to Myers and the game was over.

In the second inning with two down Niehoff was safe on O'Mara's fumble of a grounder. Paskert tried to outdo himself and sent the opportunity away without even shaking hands. He singled to left and then proceeded to stretch the hit to a double. He ran Niehoff off and the latter was an easy out between the bases.

Brooklyn started things with the help of the Phillies in the first inning. O'Mara was safe when Whitted made a mess of Stock's throw to first. The Quaker first baseman, however, redeemed himself a moment later when he made a great stop of Daubert's hot one. O'Mara went to second on the play and took third on Stengel's infield out. Wheat doubled to left centre, scoring O'Mara and Wheat came in on a three-bagger to right by Cutshaw.

Neyland! Fordham Is Coming.

The work of reconstructing the Fordham baseball team was started by Billy Lush, the new Maroon coach, yesterday. With Notre Dame due at Fordham Field tomorrow and the annual game against the Army at West Point next Saturday, Lush is facing a hard task to pull Fordham out of its slump. As usual, the reservations for the West Point trip are nearly exhausted. Negotiations are now pending to hire another steamer to handle the exceptionally large crowd of Maroon rooters who intend to see Fordham attempt to break the Army's winning streak and especially defeat Weyland, the Army's great pitcher. The steamer Grand Republic has been hired already, while the bands of the Jersey City Police Department and the Twenty-second Regiment will be on hand to help the Fordham cheering sections at West Point.

Brookfeds' Anniversary Day.

Anniversary day, with enlisted men of the Atlantic fleet as guests, will be observed at Washington Park this afternoon when Joe Tinker's Chicago team will oppose the Brookfeds in the first game of the final home series prior to the Western trip which begins after the game on Thursday. R. B. Ward, President of the Brookfeds and Vice President of the Federal League, announced last night that the only special ceremonies in connection with the fact that Federal League baseball was first played in Brooklyn one year ago today would be left in the hands of Manager Lee Magee.

BENNY KAUFF WINS GAME FOR KAWFEDS

Brookfeds' Outfielder Throws Ball So Wild That Two Runners Score.

Benny Kauff, centre fielder for the Brookfeds, who was a member of the Giants for a few minutes two weeks ago, assisted Kansas City in winning yesterday at Washington Park by the score of 4 to 3 when he threw the ball from deep centre field into the visiting players' bench, allowing two runs to score. It was in the fifth inning that Benny pegged away the two runs. Gilmore, the first man up for the Kawfeds, had singled and Brown drew a pass. Packard flied out to centre and then Chadbourne poked a safety into centre. Kauff grabbed the ball and threw it toward second base. It whizzed its way past Holt at second and continued on its journey past third at a terrific rate of speed, finally bringing up with a dull thud against the concrete wall back of the Kansas City players' bench. Gilmore and Brown in the meantime had crossed the plate and stood around watching the progress of that wild heave. Chadbourne, whose hit caused Benny to fling the sphere wildly, scored a moment later on Rawlings' sacrifice fly.

Lee Magee was back in the game yesterday after several days enforced idleness because of an injured finger, and although the youthful manager started a rally in the sixth that nearly won the game, he could not put a victory across and the Kawfeds left town, taking two out of the three games of the series with them.

Kansas City's first tally came in the second inning. Kruger walked, but was forced at second by Kenworthy. The latter stole second, went to third on Gilmore's hit and scored on Brown's sacrifice fly. The other three runs came in the fifth, when fickle Benny performed so disastrously.

Although the Brookfeds had men on third and first in the second and third innings, Gene Packard, the Kawfeds' flinger, was stingier with his hits than a miser with twenty dollar goldpieces and the would-be runmakers languished on the bases. Lee Magee stepped to the plate in the sixth and decided that it was time to start something. He singled. Benny Kauff wanted to get back in the good graces of the fans after that disastrous error in the fifth, and he doubled. Steve Evans cracked out another double, scoring Magee and Kauff, and Steve scurried home when Westerzil sent a screamer into left field.

In the next inning, with two down, Magee singled and stole second. He slid into the bag in a cloud of dust and came up yelling, "Come on, Benny, bring me in," but Gene Packard was afraid Benny might do that very thing, and so gave him a pedestrian's ticket to first. Steve Evans tried hard to bring both men in again, but he was tossed out at first, Stovall to Packard. Again in the ninth, with two down, the Brookfeds' chances looked promising when Anderson walked and Magee sailed to the plate with his favorite stick in hand. Anderson tried for second, but was caught, and the game ended. The score:

St. Louis Wins in Fourteenth.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 10.—The closing game of the St. Louis series today developed into a fourteen-inning battle that went to the visitors, 5 to 3. Four singles, a sacrifice fly, and a bad throw to the plate by Downey netted St. Louis two runs in the fourteenth, and the Buffeds failed to score. Hits were credited to Johnson, Herbert, Vaughn, and Drake in the crucial inning. The score:

CORNELL PITCHER WEAKENS

Johnson Allows Notre Dame Two Hits Up to Eleventh, Then Loses.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 10.—A batting rally by Notre Dame in the eleventh inning this afternoon gave the Westerners a 5 to 2 victory over Cornell. Up to that frame Johnson had allowed the visitors only two hits, but in that inning a bunt by Wells and singles by Dugan, Lathrop, and Mills and a sacrifice by Bergmann netted the Indians four runs. In Cornell's half of this inning the Ithacans had three men on bases, but only one run was scored. Streble, batting for Johnson, was hit by a pitched ball and crossed the plate on Bills's grounder. An error by Keating and Mills's three-base hit gave Notre Dame one run in the fourth. Cornell scored in the first when Mullen came in from second on Wells's wild throw. The score:

Fordham Juniors Beat Seniors.

By a victory over the Seniors in their game at Fordham Field yesterday, the Junior nine tied the near-graduates for first place in the interclass baseball series. The score was 7 to 4. Malone, who has won all but one of the games he pitched so far, proved easy for the Juniors, giving ten hits. O'Brien's fine work in left field and the airtight support of Murray at shortstop for the Seniors choked off several sure scores. With the bases filled in the fifth Roy O'Connell, Assistant Manager of the Maroon 'Varsity, smashed a three-bagger, scoring three runs. Kane then came through with a single, scoring O'Connell. May succeeded Kane in the sixth with the bases full and one out, but he retired the next two batters on strikeouts.

FIGHT TO GET BOXING FILMS INTO STATES

Freddie Welsh, holder of the lightweight championship title, was scheduled to appear before Judge Hough in the Federal District Court in the Woolworth Building and tell how he won the title from Willie Ritchie in Olympic Hall, London, on July 7, 1914, but neither Freddie nor his lawyer put in an appearance, much to the disappointment of the gathering, who had hoped to hear the details of the famous contest.

Welsh's appearance in court was to have been made in an attempt to show that it was neither a "prizefight nor a pugilistic encounter" in which he had won the title from the American and so permit of the entrance to this country of the moving pictures of the battle.

George Considine brought 3,542 feet of motion picture film to the United States showing the two men in the encounter, but according to the Sims act passed July 31, 1912, "movies" of prize fights or pugilistic encounters are forbidden admission to this country and also forbidden carriage in inter-State commerce, so the films were detained by customs officials on the contention that they came within their category.

Mr. Considine through his attorney, Frank S. O'Neill, SState Boxing Commissioner, is attempting to show that the films do not come within the meaning of the act, but Assistant United States District Attorney John Walker's assertion is that they do, and yesterday he submitted a brief in which he gave dictionary derivations tending to show that a prizefight and pugilistic encounter are one and the same and the films should be barred. Frank S. O'Neil will probably submit a brief on the question today.

SAILOR FALTERS NEAR END.

Tommy Robinson of Fleet Only Gets Draw with Moody.

Tommy Robinson, one of the tars here with the Atlantic Fleet of the United States Navy, boxed six rounds to a draw with Charles Moody of Brooklyn in one of the main bouts at the weekly matinée of the Broadway Sporting Club yesterday. The sailor gave a good account of himself in the first three rounds, which were all in his favor, but he could not go the full route at his early speed, and Moody consequently evened the contest in the final three sessions.

In another feature bout scheduled for six rounds, Battling Waters of Brooklyn was knocked out in the second round by Young Gorman of Maspeth. Up to the time of the knockout blow the contest was all in Waters's favor. A right-hand blow to the jaw settled him.

As usual, there was a wealth of good boxing in the three-round semi-professional exhibitions, a few of which failed to go the limit. They resulted as follows:

Young Silva and Kid Whitey drew, Matty Baldwin and Young Spino were ordered out of the ring in the second round for stalling, Battling Joe and Frankie Foss drew in three rounds, Young Martin outpointed Young Fisher, Elmer Green knocked out Young Nelson in the second round, Kid Sehl stopped Charlie Chaplin in two rounds, Kid Addis knocked out Frankie Buck in the second round, Young Kramer and Young Daly drew, Pete White outpointed Battling Butts, Young Cooper and Young Nesk drew and Jack Kaufman and Young Spiegel drew.

Popular Boxers at 135th Street Club

The two ten-round bouts which will be staged at the 135th Street A. C. Tuesday night of next week are attracting considerable attention. The contestants are local boys and each one has a legion of followers. Charles Harvey, the crack Harlem lightweight, will box Leach Cross, the hard hitting east side dentist, in the final number, while Benny Leonard, the clever Bronx lightweight, will clash with Frankie Callahan of Brooklyn in the semi-final. It will cost the management of the club $2,800 to put on these two bouts. Cross is to receive a guarantee of $1,300, and Harvey, Leonard, and Callahan $500 each. It is one of the best local cards that has been arranged in many months, and it promises to produce some fine action. Harvey and Cross are battlers of the same stripe, both being rugged, aggressive, hard-hitting warriors. Leonard and Callahan are the more clever performers and are expected to give a fine exhibition of scientific boxing.

Kilbane at Broadway Club.

The Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn will present as its star attraction tonight Johnny Kilbane, the world's featherweight champion, and Mel Coogan, the fistic idol of Flatbush, in a ten-round bout which should fairly sizzle with action. Coogan finished training yesterday and is in excellent condition and at the required weight—129 pounds ringside. Kilbane is anxious to prove that he is capable of giving and taking punishment as well as being clever, and his manager, Jimmy Dunn, is confident that he will win by a "K. O." Young Gilbert and Johnny Clinton, Tommy Cox and Walter Hanson, Hack Wallack and Jack Navin will finish the fireworks in the six-round sessions to precede the main event.

Daly Defeats Coleman with Cue.

Maurice Daly last night began a series of exhibition matches in which he will oppose the leading amateurs of this city in competition at 18.2 balk line billiards at his academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway. Daly's opponent in the first match of the series was Hal A. Coleman, who last Winter won the national amateur Class B championship title, and after twenty-three innings of play, in which the veteran was not forced to extend himself, Daly was returned the winner by the score of 250 to 141.

Not all good cars are as yet covered with Pantasote tops—but you can always take Genuine Pantasote as the sure sign of a good car

It shows that the maker of the car is giving full value. It shows that the present price cutting competition in the automobile industry has not turned that maker toward a less expensive and less durable top material.

Genuine Pantasote is the top material that is recognized as without a peer—for perfect shelter, perfect appearance, longest wear and ability to withstand all weather conditions, folding and misuse.

In buying a big thing like a car, the top material may be considered an unimportant little detail, but just think about this for a minute. Consider that the top is chiefly responsible for the trim, new and clean-cut appearance of your car and your personal comfort in bad weather.

CON HOYT'S QUICK FLOP.

Sometime far back in history there was a boxer named Con Hoyt, and he was brought from his retirement last night to box Joe Woods of Brooklyn at the Olympic A. C. in place of Whitey Allen, who failed to put in an appearance. Hoyt was counted out about the middle of the first round, but it was not a knockout. oWods, a young giant, let hit veteran gently on the jaw, and Hoyt, after a few moments' hesitation, flopped to the floor, while Referee Billy Roche counted him out. The crowd very forcibly expressed their opinion of what was to have been a ten-round bout. Hoyt's weight was 168, and Woods weighed 172.

Gardner Brooks knocked out Johnny Kelly in the third round of what was to have been a ten-round go. In the opening session each boy scored a clean knockdown. Brooks was easily the better boxer of the two, and after the first round he kept away from Kelly's powerful left swing. Brooks cut his opponent up pretty badly and quickly wore him down, sending him to the floor under a shower of blows near the end of the third round.

Should anybody "drive up and ask you" why you spend $2, $3, $4 or $5 for a straw when they're all over town for a dollar—

Just remind him that a cheap straw is like a cheap suit; it looks good the day you buy it, but you'd rather pay a bit more and know it will stand up for service.

You come to us for your straw for the same reason you come to us for your suit—you're sure of the quality and you know you can get your money back if you grow the least little bit dissatisfied.

Splits, $2, $3, $4 and $5.
Sennits, $2, $3, $3.50 and $4.
Milans, $4 and $5.
Leghorns, $5 and $6.
Mackinaws, with roll or pencil curl, $3 and $4.
Panamas—young men's shapes as well as more conservative styles, $5, $8, $10 and $12.
Japanese pocket "Panamas," rainproof, $7.50.
Bangkoks, the lightest of all straws, $6.50 and $7.50.

There are lots of imitations but there is only one "Gymkhana" (Registered trade mark) and we alone have it.

METROPOLITAN WOMEN'S LAWN TENNIS TOURNAMENT STARTS—OTHER SPORTS

WOMEN PLAY FAST TENNIS FOR TITLE

The early rounds of the metropolitan women's tennis championship, played yesterday on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, L. I., brought out several brilliant matches among many of the best players in the Eastern States. Philadelphia, Boston, and other cities besides New York were well represented, while among the entrants from the metropolitan district were Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Norway, national indoor champion, and Miss Marie Wagner, former title-holder.

Miss Bjurstedt, who has recovered from her injury, was at the top of her form and her hard, low drives eliminated two strong contestants. In the first round the Norwegian expert disposed of Miss Lucille Weil, 6–0, 6–1, and in the second she defeated Mrs. A. G. Miles, one of the leading players in New Jersey. Miss Bjurstedt lost but three games in the four sets she played.

The first appearance of Miss Wagner on the outdoor courts was signalized by a clever victory over Miss Hartley. Miss Wagner's long absence from competition was apparent in the first set, when her opponent forced her to a deuce set. The former champion gradually improved, and allowed her opponent but one set in the second set. Miss Gertrude Della Torre defaulted to Miss Wagner in the first round.

Miss Anna Sharp of the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston showed splendid form and promises to be a dangerous contender for the title. She defeated Miss Darch in straight sets, and although she was not required to show her best form her playing carried a finish of execution that stamps her a player of unusual merit.

One of the surprises of the day was the victory of Miss Ina Kissel over Miss Florence Ballin. It was the most contested match of the tournament and required forty-one games to reach a decision. Two of the sets went to deuce. Miss Kissel played a steady, effective game and captured the first set, after a brilliant rally at 8-6. The pair alternated in the lead in the second until sixteen games had been played, when Miss Ballin broke through her opponents' service and then won her own with the score 10-8. Miss Ballin appeared in difficulties in the third set and Miss Kissel won with very little effort.

Mrs. Marshall McLean, the clever New Jersey player was the only woman to qualify for the fourth round, defeating in succession Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Miss Helen Bernhard. Mrs. McLean played a clever game, in spite of her many duties as head of the committee.

The double tournament will start today promises to be exciting. Miss Bjurstedt is paired with Miss Ballin. Miss Myer is to team with Mrs. Theodore Cassebeer and Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Barger-Wallach should prove a strong combination. The mixed doubles will start tomorrow. The summary:

Women's Metropolitan Championship Singles, (First Round.)—Miss Carona Winn defeated Mrs. Percy Tilbury, 6–4, 6–0; Miss C. N. Beard won from Mrs. T. Cassebeer, by default; Miss Helene Pollock won from Mrs. A. Humphries, by default; Mrs. E. C. Lindley won from Miss Bessie Holden by default; Mrs. Barger-Wallach won from Miss Adele Cragin, by default; Miss Edna Shepard defeated Miss Helen Cousins, 4–6, 6–0, 8–6; Miss Marion Vanderhoef defeated Miss Helen R. Punnett, 6–0, 6–0; Miss Hartley defeated Miss Alice Kortright, 6–4, 6–2; Miss Marie Wagner won from Miss Gertrude Della Torre, by default; Miss Ina Kissel defeated Miss Florence Ballin, 8–6, 8–10, 6–3; Miss Anne Sheafe defeated Miss Darch, 6–1, 6–1; Miss Clare Cassel defeated Miss Miriam Blagden, 6–3, 6–1; Mrs. de Gersdorff won from Mrs. Huff, by default; Mrs. A. G. Miles defeated Mrs. E. S. Knapp, 6–1, 6–1; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Miss Lucille Weil, 6–0, 6–1; Miss Hilah French won from Miss Claire Seldenburg, by default; Mrs. Robert Le Roy defeated Miss Marshall Taylor, 6–2, 3–6, 6–1; Miss Alberta Weber defeated Mrs. W. H. S. Voss, 6–3, 6–2.

Second Round, (first round byes.)—Miss Stella Grossman defeated Miss C. Mordecai, 6–3, 6–3; Mrs. R. A. Pope defeated Miss Elsa Kahn, 6–2, 6–3; Mrs. H. Briggs defeated Miss Katharine Force, 5–7, 6–4, 6–4; Miss Carona Winn defeated Miss Louise Witherbee, 4–6, 8–6, 6–2; Mrs. Beard defeated Miss Pollock, 4–6, 6–0, 6–4; Mrs. Barger-Wallach defeated Mrs. Lindley, 6–3, 6–2; Miss Marie Wagner defeated Miss Hartley, 8–6, 6–1; Miss Cassel defeated Mrs. de Gersdorff, 6–1, 6–2; Miss Malla Bjurstedt defeated Mrs. Miles, 6–0, 6–2; Miss Maud Jaretzki won from Miss Weber by default; Miss Helen Simpson won from Miss Cornelia Delafield by default; Mrs. Marshall McLean defeated Mrs. J. W. Jenkins, 6–1, 6–4; Miss Helen Bernhard won from Mrs. Herbert Carlesbach by default.

Washburn Surprises Pell.

Watson M. Washburn, the Harvard tennis expert, sprung a surprise on Theodore R. Pell in the semi-final round of the Class A men's singles of the West Side Tennis Club yesterday on the club courts at Forest Hills. Washburn was at his best, and outplayed his opponent in two short sets. Pell failed to get his stroke, and scored but three games in the two sets. Washburn winning 6–1, 6–2. The second semi-final match will be played this afternoon, and an effort will be made to stage the final tomorrow.

Columbia Freshmen Win at Tennis.

Columbia University freshmen won from the Poly Prep tennis team yesterday, three matches to two. The losers were easily outclassed in the singles, but they put up a stubborn fight in the doubles. Summary:

Singles.—Kimbardt, Columbia, defeated Raymond, Poly Prep, 6—1, 6—2; Ruckgabes, Poly Prep, defeated C. Hollander, Columbia, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2; Knox, Columbia, defeated Francis, Poly Prep, 6—3, 6—3.

Doubles.—Kimhardt and Knox, Columbia, defeated Francis and Noyes, Poly Prep, 6—3, 10—12, 3—6; Ruckgaber and Raymond, Poly Prep, defeated Katz and Boyce, Columbia, 3—6, 6—3, 9—7.

Springfield Beats Tufts at Net.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 10.—Springfield Y. M. C. A. defeated Tufts in tennis today, 5 to 1. Tufts won one doubles match.

Arrangements for Specialty Show.

At the monthly meeting of the Boston Terrier Club of New York, which was held last night at the Hotel Gregorian, arrangements were made by the Bench Show Committee for the specialty show, which will be held at the Gedney Farms Hotel, White Plains, on Friday, June 18. Mrs. George H. Pell, the Secretary, notified the members that she had already received a large number of entries, and that the specials offered by members and friends were unusually numerous.

TENNIS PLAYERS ADVANCE.

Four Contestants in Bronx Championship Tourney Win.

Three players reached the round before the semi-final in the tennis tournament for the Bronx County championship in men's singles yesterday on the courts of the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club at Mosholu Parkway, which brings half of the round to a completion. Arthur M. Lovibond, the Seventh Regiment crack; Allen Behr, cousin to Karl H. Behr, and J. H. Steinkamp were the trio of players to join S. Howard Voshell, who qualified on Sunday. J. H. Steinkamp and Behr had easy victories, the former winning from E. M. Behar and the latter defeating E. Nolan. Both matches were decided in straight sets. Lovibond found unexpected opposition in G. H. Croley, who forced the military player to three hard sets to win, at 6—3, 3—6, 6—2. Lovibond had previously won from Abraham Basaford, Jr., 2—6, 6—2, 6—3.

King Smith, another member of the Seventh Regiment team, won two matches. In the second round Smith blanked E. H. Hooker in the first set, but was carried to 8—6 in the second. The second match was brilliant, Ingo Hartmann being Smith's opponent. The left-hand service of Hartmann bothered Smith considerably, but an aggressive attack carried Smith successfully through. The second set went to deuce several times before Smith won at 11—9.

The summary:

Bronx Championship, Men's Singles.—Second Round—Arthur M. Lovibond defeated Bernard Wisether by default; Eugene Nolan defeated A. Mandelskamp by default; J. L. Woodruff defeated C. G. Burroughs by default; King Smith defeated E. H. Hooker, 6—0, 8—6; Ingo Hartmann defeated Norman Johnson, 6—3, 6—3; G. A. L. Dionne defeated Allen Tobey, 6—1, 6—4.

Third Round—Eugene Nolan defeated J. L. Woodruff by default; Arthur M. Lovibond defeated Abraham Basaford, Jr., 6—4, 6—2.

8—3; King Smith defeated Ingo Hartmann, 6—3, 11—9; Charles Chambers defeated M. E. Fox, 6—0, 6—1.

Fourth Round—J. H. Steinkamp defeated E. M. Behar, 6—1, 6—3; Allen Behr defeated E. Nolan, 6—3, 6—1; A. M. Lovibond defeated G. H. Croley, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2.

MISS RAMSAY GOLF VICTOR.

English Woman Defeats Miss Margaret Curtis at Brookline.

BROOKLINE, Mass., May 10.—Miss Vera Ramsay of England, a runner-up in the British woman's golf championship in 1911, who is now in this country in connection with Red Cross work, astonished the gallery at the Country Club in an open team competition today by defeating Miss Margaret Curtis, a former United States woman's champion, by 3 up and 1 to play. Miss Ramsay outdrove Miss Curtis at every hole, and approximating three holes turned in a medal score of 87.

Harry Vardon Goes 18 Holes in 64.

The wonderful score of 64 has just been accomplished by Harry Vardon, the famous English professional golfer, on his own course at the South Herts Club at Totteridge. Vardon, who was 45 years of age last Sunday, has been playing brilliantly of late, which promised splendidly for his arranged tour of the United States, now abandoned. On the occasion of his latest performance, Vardon went out in 31 and came home in 33. His only mistake was an over-strong putt, which resulted in a 4 at the shortest hole on the course. He tried for a 2, so as to be out in 29.

Inwood Opens Golf Season.

The Inwood Country Club formally opened its schedule over the week end with an eighteen hole medal play handicap. There were ninety starters and the high wind kept the scores more on the high side than usual. Harold A. Stetiner, the club champion, won the gross cup with 90, while the net fell to N. Fried for his card of 105—83—73.

NEWS FOR THE ATHLETES.

Current gossip in athletic circles of the University of Pennsylvania has it that Dr. Alvin Kraenzlein will be the successor to George Orton, who will resign at the expiration of the present athletic year as trainer of the Blue and Red track and field men. Orton announced a short time ago that he will have to give up his trainership through pressure of more important business.

Pennsylvania alumni are of the opinion that their Alma Mater owes the position of trainer to Kraenzlein. He was one of the most noted athletes ever turned out from the Philadelphia institution, knows many of the tricks of the game that Mike Murphy used in developing his numerous stars, and incidentally was responsible for Meredith and several other of the present Pennsylvania track leaders. Kraenzlein was trainer at Mercersburg Academy when Meredith was developed into one of the world's greatest athletes.

Following Mercersburg, Kraenzlein took a position with the University of Michigan, and established such a name for himself that he was engaged for a number of years to teach Germans how to train their athletes. Just before the war broke out last year the dentist-trainer received intimation that it would be safer for him in this country than in Germany, and Kraenzlein took his leave of the empire. He expected to return to Germany, but he has changed his opinion recently, and would willingly take up where Orton leaves off.

"Old Harry" Grumpelt will be active again this Summer, scoring points for the New York Athletic Club in the running high jump. The veteran jumper, who has been in the game for almost fifteen years, wrote Paul Pilgrim yesterday that he would be ready to take part in the senior metropolitan championships, which undoubtedly will be held next month. Last year, his fourteenth in competition, Grumpelt finished third to Oler and Jennings in the Mets.

Before going to Princeton on Friday night Johnny Mack, coach of the Yale track team, had a talk with Paul Pilgrim in the New York A. C. clubhouse, and the result probably will be the addition of several Yale men to the Mercury Foot squad next month. Mack has a lot of good material on his squad this year, and he always desires to place his men in good hands during the time they are away from college during the Summer vacation.

Seven events open to Amateur Athletic Union men appear on the program for the Post Office clerks' games at Celtic Park on Sunday afternoon, May 23. Many of the metropolitan champions have already entered the meet.

If suitable terms can be agreed upon, Stevens Institute in Hoboken will have the honor of staging the tryouts for the national championship at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in August. The A. A. U. has been dickering with the Hoboken authorities for some days, but the terms offered by the Stevens people do not meet with the approval of Secretary Rubien of the A. A. U.

CASCADILLA CREW BARRED FROM RACE

Cascadilla School of Ithaca, N. Y., will not be permitted to enter a crew in the eight-oared shell race for high schools in the regatta of the New York Rowing Association on the Harlem River on May 31. This decision was reached after a heated discussion at a meeting of the association held last night at the New York A. C. The declination of the Ithaca school's request to take part in the contest was made on the grounds that the race was for juniors in the strict sense of the word—that is, open only to high or preparatory school oarsmen within fifty miles of New York who have never pulled an oar on a winning crew.

Through a mistake posters were printed for the association designating this race as being open to "junior eight-oar crews of high schools and schools." The delegates who contended that Cascadilla was eligible for the schoolboy race based their stand on the definition of a "schoolboy junior" as interpreted by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. The governing rowing body classifies all schoolboys as juniors until they have won a race in open competition, so that if a boy was in ten winning school boats he would still be eligible for a junior schoolboy race. This definition is accepted by schools of Philadelphia and other cities, but when it was decided last year to have a schoolboy race on the Harlem the New York Association adopted its own definition of the term junior, as was within its jurisdiction.

Sam Cramer, of the Lone Star Boat Club, who has been giving much of his time to prepare the High School of Commerce crew for the Decoration Day race, strenuously objected to Cascadilla and threatened to give up coaching the New York boys if the Ithacans were permitted to enter.

It is probable that next year a special schoolboy race will be held in connection with the Harlem regatta, in which Cascadilla, Exeter, Andover, Groton, Central High School of Philadelphia and others will be invited to enter. But owing to the immature stage of rowing among the local high school boys, it was deemed unfair to permit a school with the reputation which Cascadilla possesses for rowing to enter.

De Witt Clinton is still without an eight-oar shell for the Memorial Day race, but Columbia University will take care of them if they cannot get a shell from ony local clubs. Some of the clubs are also without the necessary boats. Chairman Sturcke related how his club, the Woodcliffs of New Jersey, loaned their four-oared barge, and then their junior oarsmen decided they would like to enter the junior four-oar barge race. Mr. Sturcke could not recall the boat, so he told his men they were "not good enough" to take part in the event.

On a special vote of the delegates, Lovejoy of the New Rochelle High School was declared eligible for this year's schoolboy race. He was on a winning schoolboy crew last year.

President Sturcke will visit Philadelphia tomorrow to endeavor to secure the entries of three local clubs for a junior quadruple sculls race. The Malta and Fairmont clubs of Philadelphia have asked the New York association to add an event of this nature to their programme, but if the request is granted all the entries will have to come from Philadelphia.

The War Department will be consulted some time this week by a committee of the association to see what assistance it can render in having the Harlem cleared of much of the debris which handicaps oarsmen in their practice work. A great part of the boxes and other stuff that floats up the river comes from a dumping station near 125th Street, and this place will be singled out in the fight to clear the river.

A special committee was appointed to work on a regatta which will be held next year on the Passaic River in connection with a Newark celebration.

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.

Weights for the Metropolitan Handicap, which will be run on the opening day of the New York racing season at Belmont Park on May 20, were announced yesterday. There is only two pounds difference between the first five horses nominated among the thirty-seven on the list, Borrow and Luke McLuke being assigned the top impost of 126, while Roamer and Harmonicon are loaded with 125 pounds each, and Rock View must take up 124 pounds. The weights follow:

Harlem Y. C. Racing Schedule.

The racing season of the Harlem Yacht Club promises to be one of the best in the history of the organization. On Decoration Day will be the annual regatta, open to all boats up to and including Class P. As this is practically the first race of the season, a large entry list is assured. On Aug. 21 the club will hold a long distance race to Stratford Shoal and return, which will be open to cabin yachts in cruising trim, rating over seventeen feet and not over thirty-one feet, racing measurement, enrolled in any recognized club. During the season there will be three "In Bay" races, during the months of June, July and August. These races will be open only to boat owners who are members of the club and will be sailed in two divisions. In place of awarding a prize for each race, the Regatta Committee have decided to give a substantial series prize for each division. These races will be on the Larchmont point system, and probably the handicaps will be "blind," so that the owners will be kept in the dark regarding their positions. Ex-Commodore George W. Jarchow has offered a prize for the race in September, open to members' boats who finish in the Decoration Day Regatta. The Regatta Committee consists of Edwin H. Tucker, Chairman; ex-Commodore F. C. Sullivan and Philip Fox.

WASHINGTON TURNS TO HORSE SHOW

McLean, Stotesbury and Homewood Stables Win Most of the Ribbons.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Sport-loving Washington spent the afternoon at the Capital City Horse Show, where seventeen classes were exhibited. The chief events included the contests of army teams, Class T0, open to all hunters, in which the Homewood Stable of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hitt took the blue ribbon, with Nancy Pansy, with E. B. McLean's Alarm second, and the contest for the MacMurray Cup. In this last-named class, with thirty-five horses entered, the donor, Miss Ethel McMurray, took her place in the judges' box. The cup, one of the handsomest of the show's trophies, was won by E. B. McLean's Ravello, with Alarm of the same stable taking second ribbon.

In the ladies' road saddle class, Miss Alice Mann of Washington and Miss Marion du Pont of Wilmington took first and second honors.

E. B. McLean, the Homewood Stable, which, in partnership with T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, were among the patrons of the show, each taking ribbons in almost every class.

In addition to the large army contingent from this city and Fort Myer, the patrons included the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. Riano, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Lane, the President of the Federal Reserve Board, Charles S. Hamlin and Mrs. Hamlin; Mr. Brun, the Minister from Denmark; Mrs. Mackey-Smith, the Misses Mackey-Smith, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Bronson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover, Dr. and Mrs. Adolf C. Miller, Mrs. Henry Cleveland Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. George Howard, Miss Jane Riggs, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Mrs. Draper, Miss Margaret Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Mrs. Fletcher Harper of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. H. Emory, Mr. and Mrs. George X. McLanahan, Dr. and Mrs. Francis Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke, the Misses Sheridan, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. George Myer, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, Miss Margaret Breckenridge, Hugh Legare, the Misses Patten, Mr. and Mrs. James Parmelee, and Miss Maury.

CYCLE RACING NOTES.

Under the leadership of Frank L. Kramer, President of the American Racing Cyclists' Union, the cyclists have selected May 19 as the date on which they will conduct a Floyd A. MacFarland memorial meet. All the proceeds will go to the widow of the late racing manager. It will be the first night race meeting of the Summer season. All the riders have responded to the call and an interesting card of races will be put on the program. MacFarland, it develops, did not leave much property, though in his day he earned many thousands of dollars in the game. The manager carried no life insurance. Mrs. MacFarland has returned to her home in Buffalo and the body of the late manager has been sent to that city for interment.

Clarence Carman, the American motor-paced champion, who has been doing a vaudeville turn on the rollers with Joseph Fogler the Brooklyn cyclist, has signed a contract to ride on the tracks controlled by the Cycle Racing Association and will make his first appearance of the season at the Boston track on May 22. Carman will on that day be matched against Wiley and Mandonna in a special match race. Carman has kept in fine condition, but will start in active training next week, working out at Brighton Beach. Fogler has not signed a contract as yet this season, but it is expected that with the end of his vaudeville season he will now come to terms.

John M. Chapman, who was appointed manager to succeed MacFarland, has also been named Secretary of the Cycle Racing Association, taking the place of Edward De B. Newman, who resigned recently.

TROOPERS PLAY POLO.

Squadron A polo teams played their second match of the season yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park. Ten players reported, and by the time the game was called, at 5 o'clock, there was a fringe of spectators along one side of the field. The teams lined up as the Whites and the Reds. The former won by 3 goals to 1. Both sides played a surprisingly fast game for so early in the season. The ponies—the squadron having acquired a number of new ones—were fast and in fine shape. The players also showed a vast improvement in their stick work over their performances in th eopening match. They followed the ball with greater accuracy and rode straighter.

The Reds were the first to score, the tally coming in the opening period. The ball had only been in play for about a minute, when, from a scrimmage in front of the Whites' goal, Bolton shot the sphere between the uprights.

The Whites even matters up in the second chukker, when Johnson tallied for his team from a difficult angle, the ball being almost on the sideboards. Eaton added another in the third, which gave the Whites the lead.

For teams playing on the flat the sides were quite evenly matched. There was hardly two goals difference between the two sides, if anything, were a little better mounted than their opponents. Neither side was able to tally in the fourth period. Captain Strong took E. B. Rives's place on the Red team and Captain Thomas succeeded J. F. Johnson at back for the Whites. The latter has a nasty spill soon after entering the game, but was not hurt.

COLUMBIA-STUYVESANT TIE.

Freshmen and School Teams Each Score 45 in Annual Meet.

The freshmen of Columbia and Stuyvesant High School held their annual track meet yesterday, with the result a tie at 45 points. Both teams alternated back and forth in the first three events, the freshmen winning first and second in the 120-yard high hurdles, Stuyvesant retaliating in the 100-yard dash, and the yearlings repeating in the mile.

W. A. White, '18, and Maynard White, Stuyvesant, tied for second honors with two firsts, Albrecht of Stuyvesant leading them with two firsts and a second. Summary:

120-Yard High Hurdles.—Won by W. A. White, 1918; Brown, 1918, second; Banks, Stuyvesant, third. Time—0:18 4-5.

100-Yard Dash.—Won by M. White, Stuyvesant; Albrecht, Stuyvesant, second; Mahnken, 1918, third. Time—0:10 1-5.

One-Mile Run.—Won by Gemelt, 1918; Huelsenbeck, 1918, second; Miller, Stuyvesant, third. Time—5.00 2-5.

440-Yard Run.—Won by Albrecht, Stuyvesant; Doolittle, 1918, second; Zychlinski, 1918, third. Time—0:55 2-5.

220-Yard Low Hurdles.—Won by W. A. White, 1918; Hammerslag, Stuyvesant, second; Brown, 1918, third. Time—0:27 4-5.

220-Yard Dash.—Won by M. White, Stuyvesant; Cooper, Stuyvesant, second; Alzamora, 1918, third. Time—0:23.

880-Yard Run.—Won by Huelsenbeck, 1918; Kaufman, 1918, second; Doolittle, 1918, third. Time—2:08 3-5.

Running Broad Jump.—Won by Albrecht, Stuyvesant, 19 feet, 6¼ inches; Bryan, 1918, second, 19 feet, 3 inches; Cooper, Stuyvesant, third, 18 feet, 11 inches.

Running High Jump.—Won by Banks, Stuyvesant; Lehman, 1918, and Sinclair, Stuyvesant, tied for second. Height, 5 feet 2 inches.

Shot-Put, 12 Pounds.—Won by Sinclair, Stuyvesant; Ritter, 1918, second; Behlin, Stuyvesant, third. Distance, 45 feet, 1½ inches.

NEW LAW A SETBACK TO MERCHANT FLEET

Can't Man Ships with English-Speaking Crews, Ring Says.

Welding Ring, an expert on deep sea trade conditions, says that costs in manning and operating vessels will be higher under the provisions of the Seaman's law, recently signed by President Wilson, but nobody can as yet be certain what the exact effect will be. The element of increase that has to do with the maritime labor market, he holds, can only be revealed with the passage of time.

"A new requirement is that no United States vessel of 100 tons or more," says Mr. Ring in the current issue of The American, "may leave any home port with a crew of which less than three out of every four men understand English. The law reads, 'A crew not less than 75 per cent. of which, in each department thereof, are able to understand any order given by the officers of such vessel,' which might be construed to mean that the men must be expert navigators, or even include Lascar crews of the Pacific, that make excellent seamen and understand exactly what they are to do. But the law is understood to mean that they must understand English. Some shipowners think that they must be citizens of this country, but there seems to be nothing in the law requiring citizenship.

"The practical effect of this requirement, some operators of the ships say, will be to make it next to impossible to man our present sample merchant navy. The vessels of our Atlantic Coast shipping, both coastwise and overseas, are manned largely by foreigners. Officers of United States ships must be citizens. Swedes, Norwegians, Finns, Russians, Spaniards, and Latin Americans fill the crews, as seen on some actual lists, with only an occasional citizen of this country.

"The new law removes all penalties excepting loss of a seaman's personal effects and half the wages due him for desertion of his ship either in a home or a foreign port. The peculiar provisions of the law in this regard seem to shipowners to give unlimited possibilities of mischief and expense in the operation of their ships. Heretofore sailors have shipped for full voyages or longer, and a master could make a contract for withholding all wages for desertion, also have a deserting seaman arrested in a home or foreign port and sent to jail for a month. Consular officers abroad were charged in the old law to discountenance insubordination by every means in their power and to 'reclaim deserters.' All reference to prosecution for desertion has been taken out of the law.

"Sailormen have heretofore had the privilege of drawing half the money due them on arrival at any port. But the master has been able to stipulate this privilege away by special contract. The new law makes such stipulations void. The man must be paid, 'provided, such a demand shall not be made before the expiration of, nor oftener than once in, five days. Any failure on the part of the master to comply with this demand shall release the seaman from his contract, and he shall be entitled to full payment of wages earned. And when the voyage is ended every such seaman shall be entitled to the remainder of the wages which shall then be due him.'

"The man gets half of his money, and if he then deserts cannot be prosecuted. The law specifically applies this privilege of drawing half pay to the seamen of foreign ships in American ports. With the withdrawal of prosecution, desertion on half pay is possible to them also.

"As an illustration to show the difficulty of carrying out this provision, some of the steamers that are loaded for West India ports, and also ports of the Pacific Coast, call at as many as fifteen or twenty different ports before the voyage is completed. Providing they are five days apart, it would enable the seamen to collect their half pay at least fifteen or twenty times during an outward voyage. To carry this out would necessitate the employment of a bookkeeper to keep the accounts for the master. This is an extreme illustration, but it is quite possible under the wording of the law.

"The law adds to the official requirements of seamen's menu by specifying five quarts of water per day, instead of four, and two ounces of butter, instead of one. In the case of the specimen 10,000-ton ship this adds 10 gallons of water and 2½ pounds of butter a day to crew requirements.

"The practical effect of this requirement, some operators of the ships say, will be to make it next to impossible to man our present sample merchant navy. The vessels of our Atlantic Coast shipping, both coastwise and overseas, are manned largely by foreigners. Officers of United States ships must be citizens. Swedes, Norwegians, Finns, Russians, Spaniards, and Latin Americans fill the crews, as seen on some actual lists, with only an occasional citizen of this country.

PITCHED BALL KILLS BOY.

Played Throughout Game, but Died from His Injury Yesterday.

Edward Seligman, 17 years old, of 305 Eath Eighty-eighth Street, died in his home last evening as the result of being struck by a pitched ball in a baseball game last Sunday at Westchester Avenue and Furman Street, the Bronx.

Two games were played between the Hempstead baseball team, of which Seligman was a member, and Mike's Old Stars. As Seligman stood in the batter's box in the first game he was knocked down by a pitched ball which struck him on the head. He continued playing, however, throughout the two games.

Sunday night he complained of a headache. He was attended by the family physician, and seemed to recover. He felt normal when he arose yesterday morning, but complained again of a headache in the afternoon. He lapsed into unconsciousness at 5 o'clock, and died an hour later.

Comparison proves quality!

Our faith in the quality and in the blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos in Camel Cigarettes is so firm we invite the severest comparison with any cigarette in the world! Camels are cleverer to the taste and more delightful than either kind of tobaccos smoked straight.

Camel Cigarettes

Turkish and Domestic Blend

We ask every cigarette user to smoke a package of Camels and compare them, puff by puff, with the brand he thinks he likes best! Smoke Camels liberally without tongue-bite or throat-parch, and they leave no unpleasant cigaretty after-taste.

You test your taste on Camels. Buy some today and prove to yourself what we say about them is absolutely true. They meet the fondest fancy of most exacting cigarette smokers!

Camel Cigarettes sell 20 for 10c. If your dealer can't supply you, send 10c for one package or $1.00 for a carton of ten packages (200 cigarettes), sent postage prepaid. If, after smoking one package, you are not delighted with Camels, return the other nine packages and we will refund your dollar and postage.

New Six $1400.00

Chalmers "New Thoroughbred"

THIS new Six-40 has all of the Chalmers quality, at $1400, the lowest price at which a Chalmers was ever sold.

But it looks different than any other car—Chalmers or otherwise.

It acts differently.

On account of its new type of engine it gets under way instantly.

It can go fast, but it is easily controlled.

It is just like a thoroughbred mount.

Come and see it.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, MAY 11, 1915.

NOT THE FINAL WORD.

The words President WILSON addressed to four thousand naturalized citizens at Philadelphia last night will not meet the expectations of the twenty times four million Americans who are citizens by birth. He made no direct reference to the subject that is uppermost in the minds of all the people, to the murder of so many of our fellow-citizens by German arms, a deed of desperation that has stirred a deeper feeling in the bosoms of Americans than any by which they have been moved since the close of the civil war. He spoke his thought in those general phrases which—we have his own word for it—he sometimes employs to cloak his real opinions.

But while this utterance of the President does not respond to the feeling of the people, they must see that it was unreasonable to expect him to make a declaration of national policy to this Philadelphia meeting. The occasion was not appropriate, the moment doubtless inopportune. Mr. WILSON did not speak the final word when he said last night that there is such a thing as being so right that a nation does not need to convince others by force that it is right. We are unconquerably right in our conviction that we have suffered at the hands of Germany a wrong that must be atoned for, yet it is not alone to right the wrong that we shall act, if act we must. It is not alone the Lusitania's dead that call upon us to seek redress, it is our own living sense of the peril that would beset us and all peaceful nations if by these frightful methods and in this savage spirit Germany should beat back her foes and come to a place of dominance in the world. That must not be. There can be no peace on earth until the Hohenzollern curse is lifted from Germany, until her godless military arrogance is crushed.

That is the thought that the men of this country are now speaking to each other in the deep tone of conviction. Manifestly the President could not, in an address of occasion, give voice to such a thought, nor could he be expected to announce any resolve he may have formed. We must wait, as he is waiting, for the fit moment. It is to be assumed that he has information not yet disclosed to the public, and his purposes must remain in his own keeping until he is ready to proclaim them. While the American people wait upon his decision they are in a state of nervous tension that grows every day more painful, but no sober-minded man will urge hasty action. It is the nation's prayer that we may escape the great calamity of conflict, and it will be the universal hope that there may be in the President's mind some planned way of deliverance that will leave our peace untroubled, our honor free of reproach. WOODROW WILSON is an American, he feels and thinks as an American. We must trust to his wisdom, to his determination, in a time of greatest trial and responsibility, to find the right and just way.

GERMANY'S DEFENSES.

Germany and her defenders feel the need of justification for the destruction of the Lusitania, and they can find none, none that for an instant avails them before the judgment seat of civilization. The German Government sought to make it appear that the Lusitania was actually a ship of war, and so might be sunk without warning. In its official communication given out on Saturday evening it said that "the Lusitania was naturally armed with guns, as were recently most of the English mercantile steamers." The statement is untrue. It was at once denied by the British Government, and Mr. MALONE, the Collector of Customs at this port, declares that "the Lusitania was inspected before sailing, as is customary," and "no guns were found, mounted or unmounted, and the vessel sailed without any armament." Governments in their official communications are not supposed to utter falsehoods. Unless her spy system utterly failed her in this instance, Germany must have known the truth.

The German Government puts forth a further defense that the responsibility for the loss of these 1,400 lives rests on England's policy of a "starvation blockade." Dr. DERNBURG and other defenders of Germany justify the attack upon the Lusitania as a retaliation for England's starvation mode of warfare. But a blockade which inhibits the food supply of an enemy country is a recognized method of warfare, neither cruel nor unusual. ABRAHAM LINCOLN was not a cruel man and he had a profound respect for law. Yet the Instructions for the Government of the Armies of the United States in the Field, issued as General Orders No. 100 in April, 1863, instructions drawn up by Dr. LIEBLER which had the benefit of LINCOLN's revision, contain this declaration:

> War is not carried on by arms alone. It is lawful to starve a hostile belligerent, armed or unarmed, so that it leads to the speedier subjection of the enemy.

But there is no room for argument as to the lawfulness of a blockade that cuts off supplies of every kind, including food. It is a measure that tends to shorten war. Nor has the starvation blockade inflicted any suffering upon the women and children or peaceful citizens of Germany. It has been the German boast, it is the common report of correspondents and others observers, that the food supplies of the empire are as yet ample. Moreover, Germany has a way of escape from any possible suffering the cutting off of her food supplies may involve. It is open to her to end the war at any moment. Foodstuffs would then flow in freely. The commander of her submarine gave the 2,000 human beings on the Lusitania no hope of escape, there was no way open to them save such as chance might afford. The German commander did his utmost to kill them all. The defense based on reprisal is destitute of validity.

Dr. DERNBURG in the statement he gave to the newspapers yesterday morning attempts this defense:

> It has been the custom heretofore to take off passengers and crew and tow the ship into port. But a submarine, say 150 feet long, cannot do it. It has no accommodations for either passengers or crew. The submarine is a frail craft and may easily be rammed, and a speedy ship is capable of running away from it.

Therefore it was a justifiable act, without notice or warning, to dispatch a torpedo against the hull of the Lusitania, even though more than 1,400 persons were thus sent to their death. This justification can mean only that the submarine, as a new instrument of war, operates outside the domain of international law and may carry on its work of destruction in disregard of the usages of war. But the German Embassy cited international law and precedent in its protest to the State Department against the construction of submarines at the Bethlehem Iron Works for export to England. It insisted that under the law of the Geneva Arbitration such exports would violate our neutrality. In the German mind, therefore, international law covers submarines when they are intended for England, it has no binding force in respect to German submarines.

Then there is the warning given by the German Embassy's advertisement and by the German proclamation of the war zone. The war zone decree had no warrant in law, and our Government gave official notice that Germany would be held to "strict accountability" for any invasion of our rights under that spurious doctrine. The embassy's warning serves Germany as a defense no better than an assassin's antecedent threatening letter would serve him when on his trial for murder. The Germans tell us that the responsibility for the deaths of the more than 100 Americans who went down with the Lusitania rests upon themselves, that in common prudence they should never have taken passage on that threatened ship. They were within their lawful rights in sailing to England aboard the Lusitania, and the argument based upon considerations of prudence is answered by our Government's warning that Germany must not do the thing she has done, that she would be held to strict accountability for such an act. It was incredible that a nation claiming to be civilized would disregard such a warning, it was even more incredible that a nation which so loudly boasts of civilization would perpetrate a crime so barbarous and damnable.

There is no defense for Germany. There is nothing to be said in her behalf that can diminish her bloodguiltiness. There is no exception to the rule of law that the crew and passengers of a merchant ship which the captor intends to sink must first be removed in safety. Disregard of that rule stamps the captor as an outlaw, and in this case, since the crime was premeditated and carefully planned as executed, Germany has put upon herself the ban of outlawry.

Candid men even in great crises that move to swift action have a natural desire to make up their minds in the light of reason and fact. In the case of the Lusitania the law and the facts are absolutely unmistakable. They leave Germany no defense. They leave no excuse save that of willful perverseness for those who seek to defend her.

A CALL FOR DEFENSE.

The call of the National Security League for an immediate improvement of our defenses on land and water is signed by men who cannot be charged even by peace advocates with jingoism or a disposition to arouse the war spirit. The call or "open letter" was prepared before the present excitement, as the result of careful deliberation, and it bears the names among others of JOSEPH H. CHOATE, ALTON B. PARKER, and HENRY L. STIMSON. It sets forth clearly the inadequacy of our present mobile army and the weakness of our coast defenses, which are matters of common knowledge. It urges the building up of the National Guard to its normal strength provided by law, and demands the formation, as quickly as possible, of organized reserve forces for both the national army and the State troops. It dwells upon the navy's need of scout cruisers, battleship cruisers, aeroplanes, and mine layers. It demands a correction of the present wasteful methods of disbursing the funds supplied for the army and navy and the adoption of a "definite military policy."

This letter has been sent to all members of Congress and officers of the Federal and State Governments, and has been widely distributed also among private citizens. It sounds no note of alarm, but indicates a real necessity, which must be met.

BASED ON MISAPPREHENSION.

It is not to be expected that the investigation of the circumstances of the loss of the Lusitania which has been ordered by the British Board of Trade will reveal any negligence on the part of the ship's officers or lack of discipline among the crew. Indeed, discipline seems to have been maintained until the vessel sank. The statements of a few passengers of their experience in the brief period of intense excitement after the second torpedo struck the hull have no great weight as testimony. For instance, it has been charged that the crew were ordered not to lower the boats, but Captain TURNER has explained that, although the engines were disabled by the first torpedo, the Lusitania was still moving rapidly, and it is obviously impossible to lower boats from a moving ship. After the vessel had listed, one side of it was far out of the water, so that boats on that side could not be used, while too little time remained before the culmination of the disaster for lowering all on the other side. There seems to be ample testimony now that Captain TURNER made no mistakes. He followed the course specified by the British Admiralty, from whom he received two messages while nearing the Irish coast, to which he replied. The ship was proceeding at the speed usually maintained in those waters.

Criticism of the British Admiralty for not providing an armored convoy is seen now to have been founded on misapprehension. In the House of Commons yesterday the First Lord of the Admiralty said that the resources of the British Navy did not enable the Admiralty "to provide destroyer escorts for mail and passenger ships." The fact has been overlooked, also, that in war the status of a convoyed merchant vessel is precisely that of a warship, and that to provide a convoy of destroyers would be to invite submarine attack. The war vessels have been guarding the transport of troops to various foreign ports. Although a large part of the navy is still in home waters, where it may be busily employed before long, many British warships are in the Dardanelles or off the coast of Africa, while we all know that some are watching our coasts for German vessels detained here that might otherwise try to escape. The defense of the Admiralty, therefore, is sufficient, in spite of the widespread belief here, while the Lusitania was making her last voyage, that she would be convoyed into port.

When there is time to discuss details of a calamity which has given rise to problems of graver import than the management of ships at sea, the question of lifeboats for ocean liners, so hotly discussed after the loss of the Titanic, will be brought up again with new facts for argument. It will be found, probably, that the comparatively few boats out of the Lusitania's ample supply which could be launched were not as useful as they were expected to be and that the work of lowering them was too difficult to be quickly accomplished. The few light collapsible boats, on the other hand, were very serviceable.

POPULARIZATION OF CITY BONDS.

ADOLPH LEWISOHN's idea of the establishment of city savings banks as a means of disposing of city bonds has more capacity of damaging existing savings banks than of benefiting the city. And yet there is much attractiveness about the idea of popularizing the city's bonds. The existing savings banks serve their purpose well. They take cash on any day, pay cash practically on any day, finance their own expenses, and give depositors no trouble about the safe keeping of securities. The average person of small means does not invest in bonds because of the cost and trouble of buying, the cost and difficulty of selling, and embarrassments regarding safe deposit. These are to some extent difficulties of inexperience and ignorance, and therefore are as irremedial as like causes of straitened means.

It would seems that without prejudice to Mr. LEWISOHN's broader idea there might be a narrower and more promising field of usefulness. The city used to take its taxes all on one day. It now takes them on two days. Why should not the city take its taxes on any day, discounting them to those who anticipate them? That this privilege is appreciated is shown by the fact that many millions are paid on the first day that the opportunity of payment is available. Taxpayers have their times of abundance, like other people, and the city could get in its receivables, on the average, much quicker than on its two days. It would be a simple matter to calculate for each day the discount value of a tax debt to the city and to accept the taxes less discount. It would not be necessary to go into bookkeeping. Certificates receivable for taxes could be issued, and they would be dealt in. Taxpayers know their requirements within a small fraction, and could provide themselves either directly from the city or from the market which would be established in them. The transaction would substitute the acceptance of taxes for borrowing in anticipation of taxes. The bankers' commissions would go to taxpayers in discounts in part, for the discount would be less than bankers would accept.

The popularizing of bond issues has been tried more than once, and with only doubtful success. The offering of better facilities to taxpayers has been approved by them in the application of the city's recent method, and would be more appreciated if widened.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Passenger Lists Imperfect.

When the business of maritime transportation is going along smoothly, the present method of making out and keeping the lists of passengers sailing on the various steamers meets more than fairly well the necessities and demands for information as to the identity of the persons thus conveyed. Naturally it would do so, as the system in use has slowly crystallized out from long years of experience. But when there is departure from the ordinary course of events—when accidents happen to liners, large or small, or when, as now, the existence of war has been made the excuse for the wholesale destruction of peaceful travelers going quietly about their lawful business—then the lists as prepared and preserved by the several companies are found to be woefully inadequate sources of the knowledge required.

The result then is confusion as to the numbers and names of the dead and the living, and harrowing uncertainties are imposed on relatives and friends seeking to learn the fate of those in whom their interest is so keen. In spite of their best efforts to secure accuracy, the newspapers print varying estimates, and they are obliged to give names which, lacking the addition of an identifying place of residence, may have belonged to any one of several persons.

There are some reasons why, as a rule, too much and too explicit information of this sort should not be made public, among them the reason that it would lead to the pestering of passengers with offers of the assorted wares which travelers need or can be made to believe they need. But the troubles with the lists that have followed the loss of the Lusitania have demonstrated only too clearly that the steamship companies should keep better records of their passengers than they do. It would not be too much for them carefully to record, not only the full name of every purchaser of a ticket, but his or her home address and something analogous to the "next of kin" that is so carefully set down in the rosters of our sailors and soldiers.

Comparatively safe, at least in peace times, as ocean travel has become, it still has its dangers and uncertainties, and always will have them. They are not increased by admitting, and, as far as possible, guarding against, them.

Responsibility Without a Precedent.

History records the names of many men who adopted policies or issued orders that resulted in deaths far more numerous than those that followed the sinking of the Lusitania. Kings and General beyond computation have thus been responsible for the slaughter of more millions than can be counted, and in a way it was a direct responsibility. Its directness, however, was not like that of the man who loosed the torpedoes against the great liner.

That man knew that if his careful preparations for hitting his selected target were successful the immediate a practically inevitable result would be the drowning of a large part of the men, women, and children on board the ship. The deaths that ensued were the results to be expected at once from what he did with his own hand, and there does not recur to memory a single instance in which one act of one man was followed within a few minutes by the destruction of so many lives.

The warships that have been blown up in the same manner carried large crews, of course, but none of them had a company on board like that of the Lusitania, either in numbers or in composition. The mines exploded under trenches by the several belligerents in the present war perhaps come nearest to working a like disaster, with a responsibility similarly personal, yet never even in this manner has more than a part of a regiment been killed, and of course the destruction of professional or organized fighting men, knowingly accepting the risks of war and observing such few laws as it has, is a very different matter from that of blowing up a crowded passenger steamer.

Hitherto, one would have denied that in any country calling itself civilized a man could be found, in or out of the criminal class, who would obey an order to perform such a deed, whatever the order's source. Now we know better.

Devotion at Its Culmination.

Survivors from the Lusitania are telling the many heroic acts of self-sacrifice observed by them before the ship went down. With hardly an exception, apparently, among either passengers or crew, all on board preserved something of calm, and savage manifestations of "the will to live," so lamentably common at such times, seem to have been almost wholly absent. Panic and ferocity were alike missing, and there are no reports of a for the boats that all must have been known were too few to rescue more than a fraction of those on board.

Comparing well with the highest heroism displayed on the steamer, and of a pathos perhaps never surpassed on a like occasion, was a happening in one of the boats. Among those drawn into it from the water was a woman who had somehow managed to keep with her after the ship went down her three little children. All four were lifted in, but for two of the children rescue had come too late. They were dead.

Soon, as the work of picking up survivors went on, the boat became crowded. Whether or not the woman was told that it had no room for the dead the dispatch detailing the incident does not disclose, but the grieving mother realized the necessities of the situation, either at suggestion or for herself, and with her own hands lowered the bodies of her two dead children into the water and saw them drift and sink from her sight.

Words fail for adequate recognition of an act like that. None could have criticised the mother for protesting against separation from her dead—for struggling to prevent it—for compelling the use of force. This woman went far beyond duty or obligation. Her name is not given.

THE GERMAN TOUCH.

A Rudeness in It That Antagonizes All Other People.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Here is an extract from a letter to me by the man who, more than any other, insured the success of America at the last Olympic gathering of athletes in Stockholm. He is universally respected as a captain of industry; an enthusiastic patron of amateur sport, and a man of wide travel and sound judgment:

> I quite understand your feelings in regard to Germany. Obsessed with the idea of becoming rulers of the world, they have never taken a careful inventory of it to determine whether they had just ground to expect a fulfillment of their wish. The result of their military training has been to produce no exceptional men. This was shown at Stockholm in 1912, where Germany, in spite of everything and having a very large representation, came out, I think, about sixth. They did not ride, shoot, fence, or do anything noteworthy on track or field.
> During the present era, when the world has been so thoroughly changed by the great thoughts of great men crystallized into material form, what has Germany originated? In all the world's great mechanical improvements that have taken place she has absorbed the ideas of other people, perfected them, and, with her wonderful power of organization, has made them better, but she has not originated anything.
>
> The function of a leader, I take it, is to lead, and certainly I cannot see where Germany has led. * * *

Referring to Stockholm the writer continues:

> Germany was represented by an exceedingly strong, able, and very delightful set of men, all highly educated. All three could speak with equal fluency in the official languages of the congress, namely, English, French, and German, and you would pick out that delegation prima facie as the one wielding the greatest influence in the convention. Yet, through some lack of tact or delicacy of touch, they could do nothing with the convention. When they presented some amendment to our rules, using as their sole argument that the Kaiser or Prince Max wanted it, one did not wonder that it was voted down. As they had on their list a number of propositions, some of which we in the United States were in favor of, I suggested to them that, as they had a great many things to look out for, it would perhaps save time if they would let the United States take charge of at least part of them. At first the suggestion was received with surprise—almost as an insult; but after a little further experience with the temper of the congress they agreed to turn them over to us, and we had them rushed through the congress as non-contentious matters. Our good services were recognized, and after the congress adjourned the German delegation gave me a dinner in acknowledgment of my services.
>
> I tell you all this to make this point: That, with all their ability and many good points, the German delegates never once sensed the reason why they themselves could not carry things through the congress. They antagonized people, not knowing that they were antagonizing them, precisely as they are doing now in the United States.

The Porter's Wage.

It is difficult for some individuals to see why the situation in which people tip porters, who thus receive a portion of their wages directly from the public, is so awful as to cause a part of the populace to smart with indignation.

At present a passenger from New York to Boston pays a dollar for a Pullman seat; and, let us assume, in the course of his trip he tips the porter a quarter. Total expenses for comforts and luxuries, which he does not always need, $1.25. If we lived in a no-tip Utopia the gentleman would pay approximately $1.25 for his Pullman seat, and the porter might or might not get the 25 cents intended for him. What is the difference?

Simply this: When I tip a Pullman porter I know that he gets the money; whereas, if I passed my extra 25 cents through the window of a Pullman ticket office there would be a very fair chance of it suffering from lack of nourishment in its progress from my pocket to the pay envelope of the employe.

The Brute and His Rules.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Barnard 1914's" view is impossible for the citizens of the United States to hold as practical because it does not reckon with human nature. Human nature, which always instinctively demands fair play, reveals itself in making laws against hitting below the belt in contests of "brutish men." The world has not yet been educated to do without war, but it has been taught to have "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind" and, above all, to observe the rules of whatever game it plays. The international codes drawn by conventions at which Germany was represented are acknowledged to have been broken by her. The offense is against all nations party to those understandings, for they cannot have been laws since they apparently do not hold, and against human nature—that is, against mankind. For Germany has not played fair and must accept the verdict of the impartial bystanders. T. C. S., 1915.

THE PRESENT CRISIS.

Hotly the furies rage,
Wildly the passions roar;
Earth is a pitiful stage
Torn by the shocks of war.
Help us, O Lord, to still
The clamor of murder and lust;
Guide us, Almighty Will,
Render us strong and just.

We who are freedom-bred
Hark to a world's appeal;
We, whom democracy led
To the torch of a great ideal,
Crave in the brunt of the strife
That tumbles nations to dust
A boon from the Master of life:
Render us strong and just.

Grant for our chieftain's deeds
Clearness of heart and mind;
Grant to the people he leads
The grace of Thy purpose divined;
Now in Thy infinite power
Help us fulfill Thy trust;
Now in the troubled hour
Render us strong and just.

THE CANAL DELUSION.

Instead of Doubling the Navy's Strength It Halves It.

New York, May 10, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want heartily to indorse every word in the splendid editorial of this morning's issue of THE TIMES, and to state that it represents the thought behind the work of the National Security League, which I have found nowhere more clearly expressed. I fear many people think that because the Security League is advocating proper naval and military defenses our program bears to the extreme in some respects. Such is not the case. Our sole purpose is to induce Congress to provide that minimum of army and navy which can be relied upon for effective service in case of necessity. The American people are opposed to militarism, and should not, therefore, tolerate any extravagance in connection with such forces as are necessary, but it becomes increasingly apparent that the present conditions are intolerable. Suppose, for instance, that a situation should arise demanding an intervention by armed forces on our part. Is it conceivable that we could either attack or defend ourselves against any first-class power? In measuring the strength of the navy our combined Atlantic and Pacific fleet is always made the basis of calculation and it is sometimes said that the Canal exactly doubles our naval strength. If the Panama Canal were invulnerable, this fact might lend some measure of justification to such a view, but, if the Panama Canal is, as I am informed, extremely open to attack, then the size of our navy would seem to be seriously insufficient for national defense even though its equipment in men and material were complete; and it can as truthfully be said that in the event of attack by a naval force superior in tonnage and mobility to our own, the Canal, instead of doubling, would divide our naval strength exactly in two, through our necessity to defend both coasts. That the Canal is not invulnerable is well known to you and to all those who have given the matter attention.

In conclusion I think the suggestion of THE TIMES that flags throughout the city be half-staffed on one day during this week as a mark of our sympathy for the families of those lost through the sinking of the Lusitania is a suggestion which should have the approval of everyone.

TO EASE THE DYING.

An Appeal for Pieces of Bed Ticking and Spools of Cotton.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Owing to personal affairs, I have to remain in Paris, and am hard at work for the war sufferers in a wider way than was possible at Dinard. Here I am in touch with the small and miserable hospitals all over France, Poland, and Serbia, and I am begging again of your splendidly generous readers for help.

This time I plead for spools of cotton thread and coarse ticking for mattresses for Serbia, where, near Nish, 1,400 men are lying, wounds untended, raging with typhus fever, on plank floors, because there isn't a single mattress in the building. Miss Arthur, head of the medical department of the Young Women's Christian Association here, has gotten together by subscription money enough to pay 100 women 20 cents a day each to make up mattress covers, but there isn't enough ticking to be had, and it is the law that no shop now may sell more than one spool of white cotton to an individual, as the stock has almost run out in France.

Therefore I beg that compassionate souls will send pieces of bed ticking and spools of cotton between 30 and 60. If every one could just donate a quarter of a dollar each, those thousands of agonized heroes would at least die more comfortably or be enabled to fight their second battle against death under more favorable conditions. A wooden floor is not a happy place when bodies are in torture.

So please help them. Direct boxes thus and they will come quickly and free of cost: Duryea, American Relief Clearing House, Pier 57, North River, New York.

CANADIAN ECONOMICS.

The Country's Position Is That of Being Technically at War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your interesting editorial of April 30—"Economic Curiosities"—dealing with effects of the war upon Canada's trade with Europe, the statement is made that Canada's adverse balance of trade for a long time has been running wild. "She had been buying from Europe vastly more than she sold to Europe, so that on account of merchandise exchanged the debt went heavily against her."

If in Europe you include the United Kingdom, this statement is incorrect. During the ten years ending 1913 Canada imported from Europe $1,435,000,000 and exported to Europe $1,595,000,000 of merchandise, giving Canada a favorable trade balance of $160,000,000. During the five years ending 1913 the total imports were $873,000,000, the exports $907,000,000, giving Canada a favorable balance of $34,000,000.

When trade between Canada and the United States is considered, the story is a different one. For the same periods the balances in favor of the United States were, respectively, $1,387,800,000 and $893,000,000, with, for 1913, $296,000,000. The United Kingdom has not only been paying Canada for excess of Canadian goods over British goods, but has also lent Canada enormous sums of money. The bulk of this money has been spent in the United States, as the great trade balances evidence.

Canada is the United States' second best customer. And yet Americans, generally speaking, know little and understand less about Canada and the Canadian commercial market. The editorial referred to says: "It is very odd that though Canada is at war with Germany, her economic relation to the war is similar to that of a neutral country." The reasons seem to be quite obvious. Canada is little more than technically at war. In spite of over 100,000 men being at the front or in training, the social, political, manufacturing, and agricultural activities of the country are scarcely disturbed, the agricultural interests are wealthier, more strenuous, more progressive than ever they were. Canada, like the United States, is a storehouse and a production factor for belligerent Europe. Canada, like the United States, has been put on its mettle to produce much of what it has hitherto imported. Vessels have passed into and out of Canadian ports with even less apprehension than has been the case with United States ports. It may be the habit of countries at war to have their ante bellum economic relations upset. Canada, by reason of her geographical position and her internal economy, is the exception.

PRESS REPUDIATES GERMAN SYMPATHY

Berlin's Formal Expression Adds Insult to Injury, The World Says.

LEGAL QUIBBLES WASTED

Herald Wants Our Warships to Keep Seas Open—Sun Seeks Pledges to Serve the Nation.

These editorial comment appear in the newspapers of this city this morning on Germany's expression of sympathy for the loss of life among Americans on the Lusitania.

Does Germany Want More War?

The World.

The German Government's official expression of "heartfelt sympathy over the loss of American lives" in the Lusitania massacre is coupled with a sneer of "regret that Americans felt more inclined to trust England's promises than to pay attention to warnings from the German side."

This adds insult to injury.

The Government of the United States is concerned neither with "England's promises" nor with Germany's warnings. It is concerned with the rights of American citizens, and those rights will be maintained.

This country wants no expression of "heartfelt sympathy" from a Government that deliberately murdered scores of helpless American men, women and children. It wants no further admonitions from Germany about the necessity of heeding German warnings of intended violations of international law and of intended German crimes against neutrals. All it wants from Germany is full reparation for the outrages already committed, and a clear understanding that there is to be no repetition of these outrages.

The American people do not want war with Germany if war can be honorably avoided, but that question must be decided in Berlin, not in Washington. We know our rights under international law, and we are not without means of enforcing those rights. Furthermore, those rights will be enforced—peaceably if possible, but by force if necessary.

We, too, should "deeply regret" any misunderstanding on the part of the German Government as to the attitude of the American people toward the Lusitania massacre. They have not been so aroused since the destruction of the Maine. Thus far their sentiment has been splendidly restrained, but the intensity of feeling is all the greater because it is held in check in order not to embarrass the President. If we were a warlike people we should already have thrown down the gauntlet to Germany, but the fact that we are calm and self-possessed in the face of gross provocation should not delude Berlin into believing that our patience is inexhaustible.

The relations between the United States and Germany are already strained to the breaking point. Most of us ardently and sincerely hope that the breaking point will not be reached, and that the United States will not be forced to accept the last resort of a Nation that can obtain no adequate satisfaction for deliberate and wanton wrongs. The issue rests with Germany. It is for the German Government to say whether it desires peace or war with the United States.

If it desires peace with the United States, there will be no more Lusitania massacres. There will be no further Gulflight incidents. There will be no further attacks of any kind upon American ships and American citizens engaged in the exercise of their lawful rights. If Germany wants war with the United States, she has only to continue in the course that she is now pursuing.

What Can Be Done.

The Herald.

There are things that Mr. Wilson can do without declaring war on Germany which would be consistent with American dignity and honor. Our great fleet rides at its moorings in the North River. Just across the Atlantic there is a war zone, and the German Ambassador and the precious Dernburg both have asserted that any American ship carrying contraband of war will be destroyed. Their new law of blockade, ignoring the fact that it is ineffective and abandoning the established rule of visit and search, is the obiter dictum of the madmen of Teutonia. This is where the collision, if the collision is to come, should come, and the United States should be there with its fleet to convoy our ships.

Just beyond that war zone are four neutral nations whose ships have been sunk, whose subjects have been killed, and who are only waiting for a leader to enforce anew the freedom of the sea.

In his mad exploits the Kaiser first must be stopped before there can be any question of amends for the unspeakable horror that lies at his door.

Thinking.

The Tribune.

The official statement of the German Government that the Lusitania was sunk by a German submarine disposes of half of all the information the President of the United States can desire before resolving upon his action.

He knows now from the German Government that the Americans massacred on the Lusitania were the victims not of the individual wantonness of a subordinate, but of the policy of assassination adopted by those who direct the German Empire.

It remains to be discovered whether the German Government purposes to pursue this policy of murder—whether it has committed itself irrevocably to the slaughter of American neutrals, traveling upon the seas under the protection and the guarantee of our own Government. It remains to be disclosed whether the German Government intends to continue the practices revealed in the cases of the Frye, the Falaba, the Gulflight, the Lusitania.

Let no German mistake the temper of the American people. Let no German, high or low, misunderstand the new vision that has come to the citizens of the United States in the days in which they have stood beside their murdered fellow citizens. Whether we now join in the war, whether we now draw our own sword, henceforth until the destruction of those who today dominate Germany and shape her policies the American people will look upon the nations who are fighting the Germans in Champagne and Flanders as their allies. They will hope and pray for their success; they will, many millions of them, feel only regret that no American soldiers are in those lines doing America's part in the battle to defend civilization.

For let no one now mistake the fact. A wild beast is loose in the world, a creature combining the ferocity of the animal with the lust of the degenerate human. The struggle is not a struggle between nations; it is a battle between civilization and barbarism. German victory would mean the destruction of all that we in America hold to be the best and the noblest in our own national life. What Germany strikes at is the right of men to lead their own lives, live according to their own will and in the pursuit of that happiness which our Constitution declares is their right.

The Pledge.

The Sun.

In common justice to the President the following form of pledge or promise is in seriousness proposed by The Sun for the consideration of all concerned:

> In case war between the United States and Germany and her allies should result from the course now taken by President Wilson's Administration with regard to the German massacre of non-combatant American passengers on the British ship Lusitania, I, ———, an American citizen by birth, [or naturalization,] pledge my entire fortune, if required, and my life, if [illegible] for the prosecution of hostilities. I promise, on my honor, to put my person Government for military or naval service, immediately after the declaration of war or the beginning of a state of war thus induced.

We maintain that any citizen willing to back his sentiments with a pledge of this character is entitled to demand of the President immediate action leading to war. He is qualified to urge the Administration to lose not an instant in swinging wide open the doors of the Temple of Janus. No better evidence of the good faith of his advice could be expected of him. The man in the street, the newspaper proprietor or editor, the former official, the politician, the partisan sympathizer with the cause of this or that one of the present belligerents, who himself is ready to enlist and is not merely demanding a war which other men are to fight and for which other men are to pay, has at this time the first claim upon the President's respectful attention. The advice and ideas of others may be useful and desirable to the Administration; but something is lacking when the certificate of the personal pledge is not there.

HOLLAND'S NEUTRALITY.

Preparations Made to Preserve It by Force, If Necessary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There was a time when no war could be waged in Europe or, for that matter, anywhere else on the face of the earth, without the States General at The Hague having their fingers in the pie, and no peace could be concluded without their co-operation and their consent as to its terms. That time is past, owing to circumstances which here we need not inquire into. But the kingdom, built upon the foundation laid in the Dutch Commonwealth, is still so situated that, notwithstanding its decline in international politics, the highest importance attaches to its attitude, either as a neutral or as a belligerent, in a struggle for European supremacy; and this irrespective of little Holland's place among the great colonial powers on account of her vast and rich Asiatic possessions.

Thus far she has been able to preserve a strict neutrality, striving faithfully and honestly to perform the irksome and expensive duties involved in that status thrust upon her and aggravated by the difficulties of her geographical position. The fact that her neutrality benefited both the contending parties in the initial stages of the war had no doubt much to do with her success in this respect and the easy smoothing over of frontier incidents which otherwise might have furnished material for bolstering up a casus belli. But will this comparatively fortunate state of things last when the exigencies of warfare demand new departures? The war showing signs of entering upon a course of renewed activity in its western theatre, twittering birds and early flowers heralding Spring, together with preparations for fresh carnage on an ever more extended scale, speculations are becoming rife on the reported activity of the Dutch Army. The levy of recruits due for service in 1916 has been summoned to the colors, reinforced by the landweer. Arguing hence and jumping to conclusions some of our quasi-professional war-prophets add the Netherlands to the list of countries they periodically predict that next week or next month will join the Allies. Does it not, however, seem more rational to infer that rather the desire to uphold Dutch neutrality is the cause of this military activity in Holland, and especially in the predicament created by the deadlock between the forces contending in Belgium and France, a predicament which makes her like the dove in peril of the eagle, as depicted on the wall of Queen Mary Stuart's bedroom at Fotheringay, over the motto: Male pareo, una peggiora temes!

Apart from the question of the Scheldt and the dangers attendant on the German occupation of Antwerp, there is the possibility that the Allies may contemplate a landing on the coast of Holland to attack their enemy from behind, a manoeuvre which the German General Staff may wish to forestall by rushing the Dutch Water Line and establishing a barrier against such a dash across the North Sea. No more than a possibility, perhaps, which, furthermore, presupposes, as far as the Allies are concerned, an efficiently trained, cleverly led, exceedingly mobile expeditionary corps with full command of the main and water approaches, and yet Holland, remaining on her qui vive, does well not to neglect her precautions also on that score. Lord Chatham's move of 1809, including a landing on the island of Walcheren, is there to prove, even though it failed, that fears of the kind are not wholly unfounded. And with this possibility in mind we reach a better understanding of the Dutch Premier's recent explanation of the reason why the Dutch Government keeps the militia and landweer under arms, in addition to the regular army.

Properly speaking, P. A. W. Cort van der Linden's explanation was no explanation at all, and the reasons he gave resolved themselves into only one, namely, that the country's interest required him to be silent on this particular subject. But, explanation or no explanation, his statement satisfied the nation, and rightly so. With him and the Government he represented every one was conscious of the vulnerable spots in Holland's international position. He spoke of and convinced that confidence in the men at the head of affairs, backed against aggression by the strongest army they can raise, was absolutely necessary for the correct performance of her international duties. And her first duty he called the preservation of her neutrality, not a negative, speculative neutrality, aiming at material profit, but that higher neutrality founded on the firm purpose to maintain the precious treasure of liberty in tolerance which the Dutch people have made their own in a past full of sacrifice and suffering, and are determined to retain and defend against any odds.

So the old Dutch spirit, rising, resuscitated by the stress of strenuous times, from the soporific, weakening influence of too easily acquired colonial wealth, stirred Premier Cort van der Linden to words pregnant, we hope, of deeds, if need be, in keeping with a glorious tradition of centuries of opposition to oppression in whatever form, and to the unscrupulous aspirations of potentates hankering after world dominion. In the Netherlands, thanks to William of Orange, the founder of their union and independence, the power of mighty Spain made shipwreck on the steadfast compact between liberty-loving communities to guard their rights, their freedom of thought and action. In the Netherlands, thanks to another scion of the House of Orange, William III., King of England, the scheming policy of the Bourbon dynasty, personified in le roi Soleil, came to an end. The Netherlands bore their share in the Napoleonic wars and, with a Queen of the House of Orange on the throne, may turn out a valuable asset in bridling the ambition of the Hohenzollerns whose mailed fist tries to Prussify the universe. We know from the telegrams that Queen Wilhelmina has conferred upon Mr. Cort van der Linden the dignity of a Minister of State, an indication, we are glad to believe, of her Majesty's agreement with his eloquent appeal to the national temper, je maintiendrai.

When in the course of theatrical events, a new farce is brought to Broadway, the subsequent duty of those attending the first performance resolves itself into giving answer to a single, simple question. Is it funney or is it not? Last evening at the Longacre Theatre, a new farce called "A Full House," written by Fred Jackson, and produced by H. H. Frazee, had its first New York presentation. It is funny.

Though Mr. Jackson's effort can hardly lay nuabashed claim to brilliance or marked originality, it is vastly more amusing than most of the farces that have been tried on the unsuspecting public ere tis yearh. Catch any confirmed first-nighter in a pensive and reminiscent mood and he will tell you of several compared with which it seems a very masterpiece. It would be exceedingly difficult for him to name more than two entertaining examples of its kind that had come to town since the season began one hot evening last Summer.

It was a little more than a year ago that the same manager produced on the same stage a highly successful farce called "A Pair of Sixes," a title which gave the facetious reviewers usch rich opportunities to be playful on words that they went forth in righ good humor and fairly outdid themselves saying nice things about the new piece that had come to the Longacre. Possibly the fact that Edward Peple's play was enormously amusing may also have had something to do with it.

At all events, here is Mr. Frazee trying his luck with another poker title. Not that there is any poker in the play nor any reason why "A Full House" would not be quite as apt a title for any other farce on or near Broadway. Mr. Jackson's play might just as well have been called "Stop Thief," which would have been a more descriptive label and would have served to emphasize a certain striking resemblance.

It is all about a stolen necklace of precious rubies. They move from a Boston dressing table to a New York train. They shift from a lawyer's bag to a lady's innocent reticule and thence to the previously blameless stocking of a maid-of-all-work. The confusion begins when the real thief and the lawyer share a section on the sleeper, and in the wreck—the first that day—inadvertently exchange traveling bags. In the thief's were the incriminating rubies. In the lawyer's were some incriminating letters. The rest may be guessed.

Quite probably Mr. Jackson's manuscript makes doleful reading, indeed. There are precious few smart lines to carry away in your memory and at the present writing, it is impossible to recall a single one. The fun, which sometimes grows fast and furious, is all in what stage folk call the business, and Edward MacGregor, who staged the play, deserves congratulations. It is really very amusing when the corpulent burglar, whom the Ruggles of a butler suspects of being a veranda-climber, discovers from his hiding place under the piano that the missing rubies are concealed at the ankle of the maid standing for the moment within reach of his pocket-knife. And equally amusing when the maid tries to light the fire after he has hidden in the fire-place. Her patient, plaintive glances at the matches, which keep going out hysteriously, revive the laughter of that hilarious match-lighting scene in the kitchen of "Seven Days."

'Follies' and 'Midnight Frolic' Join.

The company that has been presenting Ziegfeld's "Follies" on tour since its engagement last Summer in the New Amsterdam joined forces with Mr. Ziegfeld's other company appearing in "The Midnight Frolic" at his Danse des Follies last night for a special entertainment. It was made up of numbers from both musical shows. Bert Williams, Leon Errol, Vera Michelena and the other principals of the "Follies" giving some of their acts, and Will West, Bernard Granville and others of the midnight show giving the best of theirs. The program was given on the dancing floor.

Auction Sale for Lambs' Gambol.

An auction sale of seats and boxes for the Lambs' Gambol will be held Thursday afternoon, May 27, in the Hudson Theatre. The auctioneers will include city officials, heads of charity organizations and many actors. The Gambol will be given Friday night and Saturday afternoon and night, June 4 and 5, in the Century Opera House for the benefit of the Actors' Fund. The program will be made up numbers chosen from the private Gambols given in the clubhouse during the season.

Rothier Cancels Palace Engagement.

Leon Rothier, the Metropolitan Opera House tenor, who was to have sung in the Palace Theatre yesterday as a feature of the new vaudeville bill, canceled his engagement because of the objection of the Metropolitan management. Mr. Rothier has been engaged to appear at the Metropolitan next season and as a rule of the Opera House forbids an artist singing elsewhere without permission, and it is the policy of the company not to let its singers appear except at special recitals, the tenor was forced to cancel his contract.

Concert for Girls' Protective League

A concert for the benefit of the Girls' Protective League and Employment Exchange will be given this afternoon at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel by Geraldine Farrar, Francis Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitsch. Each artist will appear twice. Isidore Luckstone will assist at the piano.

French School to Act "The Piper."

"The Piper," by Josephine Preston Peabody, which won the Stratford-on-Avon Prize in 1910, will be presented by the dramatic class of the Finch School on Friday, May 14, at 2:30 P. M., in the Cort Theatre.

Finds Brother After 27 Years.

ELIZABETH, N. J., May 10.—A twenty-seven year search ended today with the arrival here of Thomas McManus, a hemp exporter of Manila. McManus enlisted in the army twenty-seven years ago, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Burns of Park Avenue, only succeeded in finding him by letter a month ago. McManus says he will take his sister back with him to the Philippines.

Swift & Company's sales of Beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, May 8th, averaged as follows: Domestic Beef, 11.83 cents per pound.—Advt.

Through its Drama Committee, the Gamut Club, an association of professional women of which Mary Shaw is President, gave three plays yesterday afternoon at a special matinée at the Candler Theatre. Of these, the first two were new and the third was Maeterlinck's "The Death of Tintagiles," played here last Spring by the students of the Empire School and to be seen here again in the Fall, if nothing goes amiss with the elaborate program prepared for the return of Mme. Bernhardt.

The first play was by Anna Wynne, a bright little three-part satire, somewhat laboriously entitled "The Courtship of Then, Now and Tomorrow." Its powers to amuse were largely concentrated in the third scene, which, glancing into a future ruled by eugenics, saw love systematized and regulated, and witnessed two lovers, amid their oppressively antiseptic surroundings, rebelliously reviving the ancient institution of the kiss. As the girl of 2015, Stella Archer reconciled all present to the prospect of longevity, and by his graceful work in all three scenes, Charles Trowbridge suggested that he had been hiding his light under a bushel in the long run of "Daddy Long-Legs" at the Gaiety.

Olive Oliver's exceptionally moving performance lent distinction to "Self-Defense," a playlet by Anne Moore that revealed a woman fighting against the haunting spectres of a life from which she had valiantly worked her way free. There was dignity, dramatic power and fine pathos in the scene of her confession.

Maeterlinck's mystic study of fear of the unseen and the unknown was the most ambitious and, in performance, the least successful part of yesterday's program. Particularly in the final scene did the sheer inadequacy of the investiture serve to mitigate all the horror of which the play is compact.

COLUMBIA'S SUMMER SHOW

In the Columbia Theatre yesterday afternoon Lew Kelly and the Behman Show Players gave the first performance of the Columbia's Summer show, designed to keep the patrons of that home of burlesque in a happy mood through the warm weeks.

The new entertainment is perhaps the most attractive yet offered in this playhouse. It is a blend of vaudeville, burlesque, and musical comedy that provides several hours of more or less innocent merriment. The claim of the producers that they have purified burlesque is not wholly true; even this latest and best contribution is not without its tainted jokes. But by comparison with the vulgarity with which this form of entertainment used to be saturated, it is as pure as a lily.

The show is divided into three parts—a one-act musical burlesque, entitled "A Wise Dope"; a revue, in which some stage favorites are imitated, and a burlesque of Bronson Howard's war melodrama, "Shenandoah." The first gives Mr. Kelly in his rôle of Professor Dope, a characterization familiar to burlesque followers, a chance to show his skill as a comedian. He is amusing in a dry, droll way, quite foreign to the type. No artist in any sphere is immune from imitation in the second part, the burlesquers giving their ideas of Caruso, Pavlowa, Frank Tinney, Charles Chaplin, and Nora Bayes, among others. Some of these are recognizable and others are done in the spirit of broad burlesque.

BERNHARDT ENTIRELY WELL

Announces Her Repertory for Her American Tour.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 10.—A correspondent of the Petit Parisien, describing a visit to Sarah Bernhardt at Andernos, says he found her in excellent health. She said she had benefited greatly by her operation, which lasted only eighteen minutes and caused no pain.

Contradicting the statement that henceforth Mme. Bernhardt would play only in a reclining posture, the correspondent asserts that she will walk about the stage as before.

Before August she purposes giving some performances in London. Then she will make a six months' tour of America, where she will play in two sketches by her son and Henri Cain and in "Phèdre," "Lucrèce Borgia," and "Jeanne d'Arc." Then, returning to Paris, she will appear in a new piece by Maurice Donnay, followed by a second version of "La Princesse Lointaine," in which she will play the part of the troubadour, Rudel.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

The following plays are to be seen in the New York theatres: "Beverly's Balance," with Margaret Anglin, in the Lyceum; "On Trial," in the Candler; "It Pays to Advertise," in the Cohan Theatre; "Under Cover," in the Cort Theatre; "The Song of Songs," in the Eltinge Theatre; "A Celebrated Case," with star cast, in the Empire Theatre; "Twin Beds," in the Fulton Theatre; "Daddy Long-Legs," in the Gaiety Theatre; "Mam'zelle Nitouche," in the Century Lyceum; "Chin-Chin," with Montgomery and Stone, in the Globe; "The Lie," with Margaret Illington, in the Harris Theatre; "The Show Shop," in the Hudson Theatre; "The Natural Law," in the Republic. In the Liberty and Astor Theatres respectively, feature films entitled "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Eternal City" are being shown.

Elizabeth Brice and Charles King, stars of "Watch Your Step," which ended its engagement in the New Amsterdam Saturday night, are headliners in the Palace Theatre this week. Their program includes some new songs and some of their most popular old ones. Bert Fitzgibbon in one of his eccentric monologues, Emma Dunn and company in a new comedy playlet entitled "The Baby," Laddie Cliff in songs and dances and Gertrude Hoffman at the head of her elaborate revue are other features of the program.

George East, an impersonator of feminine types, is the principal entertainer in Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. Edgar Dudley in a comedy sketch entitled "The Way to a Man's Heart," and Joe Keno and Rosie Green in songs and dances are other features.

In Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre the featured number is a miniature musical comedy entitled "In Springtime." The Keystone Trio in "The Nutty Burglars" head the bill in the Fifty-eighth Street Theatre. In the 125th Street house Percy Warum and company in a dramatization of W. W. Jacobs's tale, "The Bo'sun's Mate," is the featured offering.

The Vitagraph Company's new serial, "The Goddess," has been released, and the first installment is to be seen this week in the Vitagraph Theatre. It is based on a scenario by Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard, and great care has been taken to make the film the finest specimen of cinema-photography this company has yet produced. The program also includes pictures showing the arrival of the fleet, and a patriotic number entitled "Old Glory."

George Sand's "Fanchon the Cricket" has been recorded by the camera for the screen, and is to be seen this week as the feature of the Strand Theatre's new program. Mary and Lottie Pickford and Jack Standing acted its principal roles.

The Alhambra Theatre has been changed temporarily into a movie house. The initial offering is a film version of Hugo's masterpiece, "Les Miserables."

In the Broadway Theatre this week the feature is a baseball picture entitled "Little Sunset." It was taken from one of Charles E. Van Loan's stories and was produced by the Bosworth Company.

"Cora," with Emily Stevens in the principal role, is the feature in the Eighty-first Street Theatre.

Brooklyn Amusements.

Eva Tanguay in songs, Taylor Granville and company in a playlet entitled "The Yellow Streak," and Frederick Hallen and Molly Fuller in "The Corridor of Time" are numbers on the bill in the Orpheum.

Bessie Clayton gives her dance offering, in which the dances of several periods are illustrated, in the Bushwick Theatre. Ben Welch offers one of his familiar character monologues and Jim Diamond and Sibyl give a few moments of song, dance and patter.

Pat Rooney and Marion Bent in "Twenty Minutes of Pat and Marion," Claire Rochester in a program of songs, and Joseph Jefferson and company in the playlet "Poor Old Jim" are the features of the Prospect Theatre's bill.

FOR PUBLIC BENEFIT

Bulk of Elizabeth Thompson's Fortune Will Go to New York Institutions.

TO BE DIVIDED AMONG SIX

Children's Aid Society and Columbia University Included in the List of Beneficiaries.

The trust estate of $3,250,000 left by Miss Elizabeth Thompson, daughter of the late David Thompson, one-time President of the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company, is to go to six charitable, educational and religious institutions upon the deaths of Mary G. and Charles G. Thompson, sister and brother of the testatrix, who will enjoy the income of the fund during life.

The institutions which will divide the fund equally are: The Children's Aid Society, the New York Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor, the New York Historical Society, the Society of the New York Hospital, the Presbyterian Hospital and Columbia University.

Yesterday the executors filed their accounting in the Surrogates' Court. The report shows a total estate of $3,882,927, out of which has been paid bequests of $94,822 each to Robert A., David, and Sarah D. Gardiner, nephews and niece, and $98,622 to Sarah T. Gardiner, a sister of the testatrix. Furniture valued at $24,160 has been turned over to the sister, Mary G. Thompson, 36 East Sixty-seventh Street.

The income to date has amounted to $327,856, of which $100,000 has been paid to life beneficiaries, leaving $150,763 after the payment of administration expenses.

MISS HAMILTON A BRIDE.

Married to L. D. Rossire, a Grandson of Ex-Mayor A. Oakey Hall.

Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Hamilton, formerly of Mexico City, was married yesterday afternoon to Louis D. Rossire in St. Andrew's Church, Yonkers.

Mr. Rossire is a so nof Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Rossire of Yonkers and a grandson of the late A. Oakey Hall, one time Mayor of New York. He met his bride in Mexico City, where she and her mother were living. Her father was President of the American Bible Society, and after his death Mrs. Hamilton remained in Mexico City until war broke out, when she returned with her daughter to Yonkers.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl of Washington, D. C., an uncle of the bridegroom, who was assisted by the Rev. Francis T. Brown. A reception folloedw at the Rossire home.

Miss Catherine Rossire was maid of honor, and Charles Rossire, Jr., acted as his brothers best man. Guy Robinson and Frank Ganahlo were the ushers.

Mr. Rossire is connected with the Bank of Commerce at St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, where the couple will make their home. Mrs. Hamilton, the bride's mother, plans to return to her post in Mexico City as soon as things quiet down.

AGAIN OLD COACH LIBERTY.

Miss Harriet Alexander to Tool First Day's Run to Country.

The famous old coach Liberty, which has a history dating back to 1893, when James Gordon Bennett used it in trips from Paris to Rouen, and which Alfred G. Vanderbilt often drove in this country, will on next Friday be placed in service between the Biltmore and the Gedney Farms Hotel, in White Plains. John McE. Bowman, President of the Biltmore, is the sponsor for the undertaking.

Miss Harriet Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, and one of the most expert amateur whips in this country, has booked the coach for the first day's run, and will take a party of friends with her. After the first run T. Davis Taintor will be on the box each day.

The route will be from the Forty-third Street corner of the Biltmore to Fifth Avenue, to Central Park, to Huber's Road House, Harlem, where the first change will be made; thence along the new boulevard to Fordham, through the Bronx to William's Bridge, to McCrea's farm for a second change, and the third will be at Wolf's Inn, New Rochelle. The last stretch will lead through Mamaroneck to Riverdale, and then to White Plains. There will be a stop of two hours for luncheon, and the coach is due back at the Biltmore at 6 P. M.

The Liberty, which was bought by James Hazen Hyde in 1900, and by him used in many trips through France, was used by Mr. Vanderbilt the next year in a coaching trip to Philadelphia.

SEEK WHITE SULPHUR SHADE.

Society Gathers on Cool Verandas of Cosmo and Golf Club.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 10.—The cool and shady verandas of the Casino and the Golf Club were the meeting places of society at the Springs today, and while the women sat and knitted, the men who were not on the links read.

There were not many tennis enthusiasts on the courts today, but the golfers more than made up their share. Among the players were Mr. and Mrs. W. De Lancey Kountze, W. W. Grier, Albert Gallatin, Edw. J. Hancy, Robert Redfield, Raynolds D. Albertini, Alonzo T. Rand, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clifton, and Irving B. Roberts.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Rollins took a long motor trip through the mountains this afternoon. They wen from the Greenbrier to Alvon, where they saw the new water works of White Sulphur, that pumps the supply twelve miles over the mountains, in operation. From there they went to Frankford, and returned by way of Lewisburg, taking tea at Elmhurst Farm.

Richard M. Gray of Chicago arrived at the Greenbrier today and will remain for some time taking the cure. This afternoon he rode over the crest of Kates Mountain by the Bierns folly trail and descended on the far side at Tuckahoe and through the Montague estate to White Sulphur.

Among the other registrations at the Greenbrier today were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Sterrett of Columbus, Ohio; S. J. Strong of New York, Hiram L. Byrd of Chicago, and G. H. Barber of Minneapolis, Minn.

Paterson Annual Concerts Begin Tonight—Mme. Sembrich a Soloist.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 10.—What will prove a real rival to Billy Sunday and is certain to draw from his crowds is the Paterson Musical Festival, which holds forth for its thirteenth annual concert, opening tomorrow night and continuing for three nights. Conductor C. Mortimer Wiske has an array of metropolitan artists that rivals any program ever presented in Paterson, and it is estimated that the Fifth Regiment Armory—almost as large as Madison Square Garden in New York—will be taxed to take care of the attendance.

An orchestra of 100 pieces, led by Conductor Wiske, will be a feature. Its members will be the Paterson Symphony Orchestra of forty pieces and the balance from the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra of New York. A trained chorus of 600 men and women, all singers of local fame, will also be heard.

Harold Bender, a pianist, will be the local artist. He was selected to fill this position at a contest held recently in which more than twenty local artists took part.

The first night's program includes Anna Case, Paul Althouse, Henri Scott and Mary Jordan. For the second night Pasquale Amato, Gertrude Rennyson and Ethel Leginski are the soloists.

On Thursday evening, the closing night, Mme. Sembrich, George Dostal and Harold Bender, the local artist, are soloists.

Among the patrons are Mayor Robert Fordyce, ex-Mayor Andrew F. McBride, United States Senator Hughes and other prominent Patersonians.

COL. KANE'S WILL PROBATED

Personal Estate Is About $65,000—His Widow Chief Beneficiary.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 10.—The Probate Court today allowed the will of Colonel De Lancey Astor Kane of Newport, who recently died in New Rochelle, N. Y. Letters testimentary will be granted to his widow Eleanora Iselin Kane and Alfred E. Marting, executors of the will. The personal estate is stated not to exceed $65,000. The real estate here and in New Rochelle, horses and carriages, and all money in banks is left to his widow, and James Brennan, coachman, long employed by the family, received $1,000.

No provision for their son, De Lancey Kane, is made in the will, as previous arrangements were made by Colonel and Mrs. Kane for him. The remainder of the estate is divided between Colonel Kane's sisters, Miss Louisa Langdon Kane, Mrs. Emily A. Jay, and Sybil Kent Kane, receiving three-quarters, with the remaining quarter equally divided between his nieces, Mrs. Caroline H. Kane Phelps, wife of Edgar M. Phelps of New Rochelle, and Helen Dorothea Kane of Newport.

Social Life in Berkshires.

Special to The New York Times.

Mrs. George Merrill of Washington arrived at the inn in Stockbridge today for the season.

Davis Ives Mackie has given a contract for an addition to his villa, Pinecliff, in Great Barrington, to cost $20,000.

Mrs. E. W. Perrin of New York has leased a villa in Great Barrington.

Dr. and Mrs. Carroll Dunham and their guests, Miss Sylvia Hyde and Dows Dunham, motored to Irvington-on-the-Hudson today after a tour in the Hills.

Son to Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Straus.

A son was born on Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. H. Grant Straus of 555 Park Avenue. He has been named after his father, Hugh Grant Straus, Jr. Both Mrs. Straus and her son were said last night to be doing very well.

Goodfriend-Kohn Engagement.

Mrs. Clara Goodfriend of 274 East 113th Street announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Cora R. Goodfriend, to Leon Abbett Kohn, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Kohn of Newark, N. J. Mr. Kohn is a brother of the Rev. Dr. K. Jacob Kohn of the Temple Ansche Chesed, at Seventh Avenue and 114th Street, and of Dr. Eugene Kohn of Baltimore, Md. Miss Goodfriend is a daughter of the late Louis Goodfriend, and a niece of Mayer Goodfriend.

Miss Grace Courtney Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Courtney of Brooklyn have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace Carroll Courtney, to Philip Fleming. Miss Courtney is a granddaughter of the late Hugh McLaughlin and Mrs. McLaughlin. Owing to the recent death of Mrs. McLaughlin the announcement has been made very informally. Mr. Fleming is with the National City Bank of New York.

Bishop Laurence Scanlan.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 10.—Laurence Scanlan, Bishop of the Salt Lake diocese of the Roman Catholic Church and a pioneer missionary of the West, died here this afternoon after a long illness. Bishop Scanlan was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1843, and was graduated from All Hallows College in Dublin in 1868. He was ordained a priest in the same year, and during 1870-71 was assistant pastor of St. Mary's Cathedral in San Francisco. In 1873 he was appointed pastor of Salt Lake City and the whole territory of Utah. In 1887, Bishop Scanlan was consecrated Bishop of Laranda, in Asia Minor, and Vicar Apostolic of Utah. In 1891 he was appointed First Bishop of Utah.

Agnes Hanley sat reading in her home at 109 West Sixtieth Street about 8:30 o'clock last night, when she heard a moan from the adjoining room, where her father, William Hanley, 65 years old, had been sleeping. She rushed in to find him lying across a couch dead. His coat, which he had hung on a gas jet, was ablaze.

Ambulance Surgeon Fightig of the Polyclinic Hospital said the man had probably died of fright when he awakened and sa wa blase close to him. Hanley, who was a stationary eggineer, had suffered from heart trouble.

To Try Sharkey in County Court.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 10.—Assistant District Attorney William J. Fallon won his fight today to keep the trial of Joseph Sharkey, indicted for perjury in connection with the suit brought by Oscar Fried of Yonkers against the New Haven Railroad Company in the County Court. Justice Arthur S. Tompkins today filed a decision in which he said: "The papers on this motion do not show sufficient reason for transferring this indictment from the County Court to the Supreme Court or for changing the place of trial to another county."

Henry Schwarzwalder.

Henry Schwarzwalder, head of the firm of J. Schwarzwalder & Sons of Louisville, Ky., and Hoboken, N. J., said to be the largest manufacturers of beer kegs in the United States, died yesterday at his home, 24 West Seventy-sixth Street, in his sixty-second year. He was born in this city and succeeded his father, who founded the firm thirty-five years ago. Mr. Schwarzwalder was a member of the Arion and other German societies, the New York Athletic and the Columbia Yacht Clubs, and the Elks. His two daughters survive him.

Baron Randolph Natili.

MORGAN CITY, La., May 10.—Baron Randolph Natili, widely known among railroad men, and whose connection with the Southern Pacific was unique, died here today at the home of his son-in-law, J. M. Dwyer, in his 72d year. He was officially station agent in this town, but it was said that his salary was $25,000 a year, and he never denied that this was true. Many years ago the Baron attracted the attention of Collis P. Huntington, who sent him to Washington on various occasions, but he never gave up his position as station agent.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Close Much Lower After Partial Recovery from a Very Sharp Break.

Prices again broke heavily on the Stock Exchange yesterday. Most of the major stocks went lower than they had fallen in the panicky half hour's decline on Friday afternoon. From the low level, however, they rallied sharply, and then after losing part of the regained ground closed with losses ranging from 1 to 3 points in most of the more active stocks, with some declines much in excess of those figures. The opening had been firm and relatively quiet. Then prices receded under a steady inflow of stocks and under bear pressure, but the selling did not assume large proportions until the other influences at work were supplemented by the rumor of an attack on the President, which was not disproven in time to prevent its exerting much effect upon a nervous market. It was the sort of rumor which unscrupulous traders had been guilty of spreading in the past, and there were those who were asking whether yesterday's rumor had not had some such origin. The heavy declines recorded at the end of the day, long after that report had been entirely dismissed, indicated, however, that that was merely an incident in the decline and not its real cause.

Wall Street knows, as all the country knows, that we are confronted with questions of the utmost gravity. The financial community is necessarily taking cognizance of the state of public feeling, including its own feelings, in respect to the situation created by the sinking of the Lusitania. It was the conclusion based on those feelings which found reflection in yesterday's decline. Viewed apart from the personal motives which may have swayed the specific directions which the day's selling took, the decline represented a precautionary movement the effect of which was to lessen the market's vulnerability by a further retreat from the relatively high levels to which prices had recently risen. The news of coming days must necessarily be important. The market was engaged yesterday in discounting the probable tenor of that news, and in doing that it was holding true to ordinary market processes.

It was noteworthy that the decline yesterday, though severe, was orderly. There was none of the inchoate excitement in the market which characterized the break which occurred last Friday. Wall Street thought it saw in this an accurate reflection of the public attitude, in that after the excitement caused by the first news of the sinking of the Lusitania the country had settled down to a quiet determination, the force of which is steadily growing, to do what the situation imperatively demands.

There was some news yesterday, but it was not a day in which ordinary news influences played much part. Early in the day the gratifying announcement was made that of the $65,000,000 Pennsylvania bonds offered for public subscription last Friday $58,000,000 had been taken, and it became known later that further large amounts of the bonds had been placed during the day. The monthly statement of the unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation showed a decrease of about 93,000 tons. Trade reports had clearly foreshadowed a decrease. There was more talk of impending foreign loans, particularly of the large British credit which has been talked about so long, but there was apparently no reason for expecting an early announcement of British financing in this market.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Better War News Disperses Depression Due to Lusitania Sinking.

LONDON, May 10.—The stock market was generally more cheerful, the better war news dispersing the depression due to the Lusitania disaster. War loan investment stocks were frequently marked and rubber and copper shares were in good demand. Kaffirs, however, were dull due to the temporary exclusion of the German element from the Exchange.

In the American section trading was quiet except in Canadian Pacific and Amalgamated issues, which advanced over parity and closed firm a shade under the best.

Prices Easy on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 10.—Prices were easy on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 72 francs 25 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 25 francs 60 centimes.

Topics in Wall Street.

An Unusual Selling Feat.

The investment market is so sensitive that the first thought in the minds of many people in the financial district when they came to reckon up the cost of the Lusitania tragedy as measured by other than humanitarian standards was that the offering of $65,000,000 of Pennsylvania general 4½s had been effectively killed. With the stock market wiping out in minutes the gains of weeks in some of the speculative stocks, it did not seem probable that many subscriptions would be received for a new railroad issue. So great was the investment demand that the injury done by the bad news only served to delay the distribution of the new bonds, and it was announced by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. yesterday forenoon that up to that time $58,000,000 had been sold. At the close of the business day the amount remaining on hand was so small that it was regarded as a certainty that there would be none in the hands of the syndicate at the end of the time originally set for closing the books.

A Calmer Nation.

It may be that the war has sobered the United States and that events which would have started a panic five years ago are now studied with a view to determining what their final effect will be. At any rate, there were not lacking signs in Wall Street yesterday that, with the air full of war talk, business was proceeding just as usual, with investors making their plans just as though it were not quite within the range of possibility that the United States would have to take an active part in the world struggle. The offering of $25,000,000 of Argentine Government bonds came at a most inauspicious time, for that issue was not formally announced until the day following the Lusitania's sinking, so that it did not have the benefit of even one business day under the old conditions; but it was said yesterday that the bonds were being absorbed at a most satisfactory rate. A country that will buy most of two new bond issues aggregating $90,000,000 in such troublous times as these cannot be called flighty.

Bankers Do Not Expect War.

The biggest men in the financial district do not think that the United States is going to war. It was suggested in several quarters that a more likely result of the Gulflight and Lusitania challenges would be a conference of all of the neutral nations of the world for the purpose of agreement on terms to be presented to all of the belligerents, these terms to state in unequivocal language the impatience of Holland, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Italy, and the United States with recent practices on the part of the nations at war toward the commerce and rights of the countries which have been trying to carry on their peaceful occupations.

Short Selling Makes a Gain.

Members of the Stock Exchange reported yesterday a great deal more short selling than occurred in the collapse of prices last Friday. Pressure was exerted against a number of issues which had displayed vulnerability in the closing days of last week, including Westinghouse and Studebaker, practically from the start of trading, and the destructive forces naturally found assistance in their labors in the rumor that President Wilson had been assassinated.

It may not be said, however, that operators on the short side were chiefly responsible for the sharp break toward noon, because a nervous tension was evident in commission houses long before prices began to melt most rapidly, and the desire of many holders of long stock to get out of the market for a time was reflected in the decline which preceded the sharpest fall. Brokers commented on this phase of the day's dealings. In a number of houses where partners are wont to make their market opinions public to the entire room holders of stocks were advised to clear their sheets and wait for developments from Washington.

Talk of Minimum Prices.

One, of Steel's old minimum prices, 48, was reached in the break with the exception of a small fraction. This fact was commented on by nervous traders, and gossip was quickly heard about the chances of the Governors putting into force a general list of minimums again. This was when the market looked so weak that a collapse appeared imminent. But support arrived in timely fashion, and after quotations had rebounded 2 points nothing more was heard about an artificial bottom for prices.

Inter-Met. Plan to Succeed.

The plan to merge the Interborough-Metropolitan Company and the Finance and Holding Corporation into the Interborough Consolidated Corporation with a capitalization of $50,000,000, according to a Director of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company, is assured. The number of proxies already received, added to the verbal promises of assent to the consolidation, this Director said, left no doubt that a great majority of the preferred stockholders of the present Interborough-Metropolitan would come in under the reorganization. More than 60 per cent. of the preferred stockholders, including nearly all of the small holders, sent in proxies. Many of the large holders, it was said, had assented to the plan within the last few days. Under the law two-thirds of the holders of both preferred and common stock of the present company must ratify the plan before it can become operative. It required little argument to convince the holders of the common stock of the advisability of reorganizing. A formal announcement from the Interborough-Metropolitan is expected in a few days. A special meeting at which the proxies will be voted has been set for June 1.

New York Central to Deny Charges.

The New York Central Railroad Company, one of the defendants in the Pollitz suit to annul the recent issue of $100,000,000 debenture bonds of that railroad will have until May 24 to file its answer to the complaint in the Supreme Court. It is understood that the railroad will enter a general denial of the charges that the bond issue was illegal, unnecessary, and wasteful, and that the commissions paid to the fiscal agents of the company and to the syndicate of bankers which underwrote the bonds were exorbitant. A. H. Harris, Vice President of the New York Central and general counsel for the New York Central system, will appear for the railroad. The railroad's answer, it is believed, will contain a denunciation of the growing practice on the part of minority stockholders to block big corporate ventures. In the case of the Pollitz suit, according to an official of the Central, the papers were served after all of the $100,000,000 bonds had been sold to the public.

Partial Payment Planning

People who made use of their ready cash and saving prospects to buy standard stocks last August on the Partial Payment Plan had no reason to regret their purchases. The present drop in prices offers a similar opportunity to the thrifty.

H. G. S. NOBLE RE-ELECTED.

The annual election of the Stock Exchange yesterday was a cut and dried affair as a single ticket, headed by H. G. S. Noble for re-election as President, was in the field.

In addition to Mr. Noble they were: Charles M. Newcomb, Treasurer; Ernest Groesbeck, to Committee on Gratuity Fund, and these Governors, William G. Borland, S. L. Cromwell, Bayard Dominick, Albert R. Fish, W. Strother Jones, Albert H. Marckwald, Newton E. Stout, Arthur Turnbull, William D. Wood and Louis E. Hartzfeld.

M. E. de Aguero was re-elected President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange. All the other officers, including S. A. Luther, First Vice President, Aaron de Cordova, Second Vice President, Marcus Heim, Treasurer, and Valentine Mott, Chairman, were also re-elected.

U. S. STEEL TONNAGE LESS.

The United States Steel Corporation's unfilled orders on April 30 amounted to 4,162,244 tons, a decrease of 93,505 tons during the month. The figures, issued yesterday, indicated that optimistic forecasts of the market made by leaders of the industry a few weeks ago had not been borne out. The decrease was about in line with expectations in the trade, based on the rate of inflow of new business in the last half of April.

Forward business on Feb. 28 aggregated 4,345,371 tons, on Jan. 31, 4,248,571 tons and on Dec. 31, 3,836,643 tons. Operations at the mills are reported as between 70 and 75 per cent. of capacity, with specifications against export orders supplying a substantial part of the output.

A. H. Low, Curb Broker, Fails.

Alexander H. Low, a Curb broker of 38 Broad Street, announced yesterday that he was unable to meet his obligations. Outstanding contracts were limited to Braden Copper stock for the most part, and about 6,000 shares were bought in during the day by brokers to whom he owed stock on orders. It was said on the Curb that Mr. Low's indebtedness was not large and would soon be adjusted.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

At the low prices of the day on the Consolidated Stock Exchange leading stocks showed declines of 8 to 9 points from their early high levels. Strong support apparently was extended at the lowest prices and this helped to bring about a sharp rally. At the same time the closings were generally well under Saturday's final prices.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 26th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 26th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional bars, denominations and maturities of the aurmendment ratifying same, and of the numthorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1959, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

$2.50 A BALE DROP IN COTTON MARKET

NET DECLINE FROM 8 TO 15

Reports from New England Textile Mills Show Great Activity—Liverpool Market Up 10 Points.

There was a renewal of heavy selling in cotton futures yesterday and the resultant break was the more demoralizing on account of the fact that prices opened steady and about 12 to 18 points above Saturday's closing.

Liverpool was quite steady and about 10 to 11 points higher than due. This advance in the English market undoubtedly was prompted by the advance in freight and insurance rates and the fear that further importations might be made difficult by German submarine operations.

Consequently, when the local market opened around 10c. for October, there was immediate pressure on the whole list. The New York market is considerably above a parity with Liverpool, when freight and insurance rates are taken into consideration. There is a tendency to expect differences to widen, and sales here follow as a matter of course.

These offerings, however, were well taken and had it not been for the rumor concerning an attempt on the life of President Wilson, there would have been no undue excitement. This report, which, according to gossip, emanated from Chicago, caused some wild selling and October broke to 9.46, July to 9.17, and December to 9.70, about $2.50 a bale from the day's high. There was a quick recovery upon the denial of the rumor and the market closed steady at declines of from 8 to 15 from Saturday's close.

Southern spot markets are showing some evidence of the effect of the decline in contracts, although prices are far above a parity with futures. Very heavy rains have fallen in the Eastern belt and all fear of drouth has been allayed. Precipitation throughout the Carolinas and Georgia since Saturday ranges from about ¼ inch to 2 inches.

In spite of the unsettled state of the cotton market, textile reports make a favorable showing. New Bedford advices state that cotton goods mills in that district have never been so active as at present. It is estimated that 50,000 out of the 54,000 looms are in operation and manufacturers have a larger amount of forward business on their books than at any previous time in several years.

Considerable importance was attached to the cable that Italy would require cotton shipped from American ports May 10, and later to be accompanied by bills of lading with the consignee named and its final destination before it would be permitted re-exportation.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged, to 10 to 25 decline.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet with a 13 decline, 9.70 for middling upland and closed steady.

GOOD PROSPECTS OUT WEST

Basic Conditions There Sound and People Are Buying.

A representative of Smith, Hogg & Co. has just returned from a business trip to Chicago. This man brings back to the Worth Street district a message of encouragement to dry goods jobbers. He said: "While I was in Chicago four or five very hot days struck the town and adjacent territory. This gave a big impetus to buying of Summer fabrics and accessories, with the result that store buyers from all about the Middle West came in and replenished their stocks.

"The Lusitania disaster naturally exerts a depressing effect, but this and possible other untoward events of a somewhat similar character are not likely seriously to interfere with the ultimate good business we are looking forward to. At the present time I should say the dry goods business of the country is from 10 to 15 per cent. better than it was Jan. 1. The indications are that business will steadily pick up, and that by 1916 approximately good times will have arrived.

"Chief assets in the situation are the crops and weather. The Winter wheat was fine, and the outlook for the other crops is most encouraging. I found that with basic conditions sound in the West, people have the means to buy and are doing so, with the result that the storekeepers are disposing of seasonable goods. The outlook altogether is most encouraging."

LONDON'S WOOL SALES.

The Offerings May Be Too Great for the Trade to Absorb.

LONDON, May 10.—The offerings at today's wool sales were 8,130 bales, and consisted of a miscellaneous selection, which sold steadily at the recent improvement. Best scoured merinos were firm. America purchased a few greasies.

There were 220,000 bales, representing about £4,500,000, available for the present sales, which are fixed to close on May 20, and, with fresh arrivals coming in for the fifth series of auctions, (fixed for June 29,) it is considered doubtful if the trade will be able to absorb the quantity, in view of transport difficulties and the absence of much Continental support. America so far has taken only a few of the best scoured and greasy merinos, although licenses are said to be granted rather more freely for export.

Russia is buying scoured merinos, in view of the anticipated early opening of the Archangel route. The necessity for buying wool now is due to the prolonged negotiations which are necessary before permits are granted by the Government for shipment.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

A Number Concerned Jewelry and Articles of Adornment.

Milbank, Leaman & Co. were sustained yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in protests against the Collector's assessment of duty on certain items relating to the cost of shrinking wool cloth. The Appraiser returned these costs as non-dutiable, whereas the Collector disregarded the Appraiser's action and held the items dutiable. Judge Hay directed the Collector to reliquidate the entries using as a basis the values approved by the Appraiser.

Poirier & Lindeman and others appealed from the Collector's decision assessing lace pins having gold-plated steel shafts and paste or glass heads. They were returned for duty under the Tariff act of 1909 at 60 per cent. ad valorem as jewelry. The claim was for a tax of 45 per cent. as manufactures in chief value of paste or metal. The Examiner at this port testified in behalf of the importers that the lace pins were practically the same as those which were the subject of a decision by the Customs Court of Appeals in the case of B. Altman & Co. In view of this evidence, the board sustained the protests.

The board sustained the protest of J. J. Gavin & Co. for lower duty on children's dresses. Assessment was made under the tariff at 60 per cent. ad valorem as appliqued cotton wearing apparel. It was decided that the articles are not appliqued within the meaning of the law and that they were accordingly properly dutiable as cotton wearing apparel at only 30 per cent. ad valorem.

Wiener Bros. and others imported under the Tariff act of 1909 a great variety of women's bags or purses and smokers' articles, all of which were returned for duty at 85 per cent. ad valorem as articles of personal adornment. In sustaining the protests the board held that most of the articles are properly dutiable at 60 per cent. as jewelry, 50 per cent. under the smokers' articles provision or at 45 per cent. as metal manufactures.

A. Cardinali and Horace I. Potts & Co. Boston, protested that, on account of clerical errors in making out invoices, they had been compelled to pay additional duty under the terms of paragraph L of section 3 of the tariff law. Judge Hay, who made a careful examination of the papers that were before the Collector at the time of liquidation, held that they did not disclose manifest clerical errors as that term has been judicially determined. The protests were overruled.

AS TO ENAMELED WARE.

Manufacturers Say This May Cost More Because of War.

If the war lasts four or five months longer the American housewife, according to several of the largest manufacturers of enameled kitchen utensils, will have to pay more for her enameled pots and pans. A scarcity of raw materials hitherto imported from Europe is given as the reason.

Enameled ware is made by fusing a mixture of various harmless mineral ingredients upon hollow steel forms. Most of these ingredients, it is said, are imported from European countries, especially Germany. The war has caused a serious falling off in the supply of these materials, according to manufacturers, and, in the case of certain clays formerly imported from Germany, which are essential to the manufacture of the gray and solid white enameled wares in common use, importations have ceased entirely.

The manufacturers who use these clays state they are now depending upon supplies brought into the country before England's embargo went into effect. Although there is still a considerable supply of these materials to be had in the market, the prices of them are steadily advancing. In some instances as much as a 300 per cent. increase has already occurred. A higher level of prices on all grades of enameled ware is therefore considered inevitable if the war continues.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat market, in common with all the other leading financial and commercial markets, was in a state of feverishness which, at times, approached demoralization. The market was under pressure of continued liquidation, as well as more aggressive operations on the part of bears. At the extreme decline values were 2⅝@3¾c below the final of Saturday, and 6⅜@10½c below the high point of last Friday. Toward the close of the day, shorts bought quite freely and prices rallied sharply, closing with net losses of ⅝@1¼c. The visible supply in the United States showed a decrease of 1,111,000 bushels of domestic wheat and an increase of 363,000 bonded wheat. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.60¼ and No. 2 hard at $1.61⅝, cost, insurance, and freight; track; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.57½, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.61⅝, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market was influenced by the same disturbing elements which caused the decline in wheat, and by favorable weather for the new crop. The volume of business was not particularly large, and late in the day prices rallied on covering, due partly to a decrease of 1,602,000 bushels in the visible supply, and at the close values were ⅛c net lower to ¼c higher. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 85c, prompt shipment.

OATS.

The oats market also declined in sympathy with wheat and corn and under liquidation, and at the close was irregular, with May 1⅜c net lower, while July was ⅝c lower, and September showed an advance of ⅛c. The visible supply showed a decrease of 3,132,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 3,800,000 last year. The local cash market was weak; standard was quoted at 59@59½c; No. 2 white, 59½@60c; No. 3 white, 58½@59c; No. 4 white, 58@58½c; fancy clipped white, 60@61½c; ordinary clipped white, 59@60c, all elevator.

COFFEE.

The coffee market was under the influence of all the nervousness which prevailed in the other commodity markets. Longs sold quite freely at times, but the demand was poor and the volume of business amounted to only 20,000 bags, while closing prices were 10 to 18 points below the final of Saturday.

The local spot market was inactive and nominally unchanged, with Rio 7s quoted at 7⅞ cents.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was weak and lower under heavy liquidation in sympathy with the break in grain and under selling which was credited to packing interests. The cash demand was slow and sentiment was influenced by the political outlook abroad. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 28,000; estimated for Tuesday, 15,000; Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 7,700.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,369 packages. Stock is coming forward very much faster than heretofore, and the supply has overtaken the demand. This has caused a lower and unsettled market. Prices declined 1@1½c on most grades of fresh creamery, and held creamery and State dairy sympathized in the weakness. Renovated without much change. Ladles fairly steady. Packing stock well sustained. Creamery, extras, 92 score, 29½c; higher scoring, 30@30½c; firsts, 28@29c; seconds, 26@27½c; thirds, 23@25c; creamery, held, firsts, 26@27c; seconds, 24@25½c; thirds, 22@23½c; State dairy, finest, 28½@29c; good to prime, 27@28c; common to fair, 23@26c; renovated, extras, 23½@24c; firsts, 22½@23c; lower grades, 20½@21½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 22@22½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21½@22c; seconds, 20@21c; lower grades, 19@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 20c; lower grades, 18@19½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 21,102 cases. The arrivals show some decrease as compared with last Monday, and the quality of the supply is becoming increasingly irregular, a large part of the stock, especially from southerly sections, showing decided loss of quality. There is a fair demand for high-grade eggs, which rule firm, but values show no material change, although the tendency is, perhaps, slightly in sellers' favor. The medium and lower grades are freely offered at very irregular and generally unchanged prices. Dirties steady in the highest grades; ordinary qualities move slowly. Near-by white eggs are in liberal supply, and these also are showing irregular quality and value; occasional selected cases of extra large and fancy are peddled out a little above our quotation, but the figures given, however, cover most of the sales reported, and far more of the stock sells in range of 22@23c than higher. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22½@23c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; storage packed, firsts, 20½@21½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 21@21½c; regular packed, firsts, 19½@20½c; seconds, 18@19c; thirds and poorer, 17@17½c; storage packed, dirties, No. 1, 17½@18c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 17½@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 15½@17c; checks, good to choice, dry, 16@16½c; culls and inferior, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; ordinary to good, 22@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21½@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery browns, 22@23c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21½c; duck eggs, State and near by, Indian runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 22@24c; Western, 20@22c; Tennessee and other Southern, 19@[illegible].

NEW ORLEANS TRADE GOOD.

Aided by San Francisco Fair and High Price of Sugar.

Alfred S. Amer, proprietor of the Hotel St. Charles in New Orleans and the Edgewood Inn at Greenwich, Conn., arrived yesterday at the Hotel Vanderbilt with reports of big business in New Orleans and great prospects for Greenwich.

"The Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco has helped business in New Orleans," said Mr. Amer, "and of course the high price of sugar has had a good general effect on things down there. The results of the forty days of racing, the first we have had in New Orleans for eight years, were so encouraging that we shall have sixty days of the sport next Winter, beginning Jan. 1. The new system of betting, which is to be tried out at Saratoga, worked well with us.

"The betting ring was turned into a 'Palm Garden,' and you paid a dollar for admission, good all day. There were a number of 'bonded stakeholders,' and as there was nothing in the law to prevent two men from making a bet the bettor and the second person, a bookmaker, would agree on the odds, place the wagers in an envelope, seal it, and give it into the custody of the stakeholder until after the race, when the stakeholder delivered it to the winner.

"I believe that this is going to be the best season Summer resorts near New York have ever had. Americans will be unable to go to Europe, and they will want to be near New York."

TEST WIRELESS IN COURT.

Message Sent by Atlantic Company in Fighting Marconi Suit.

At yesterday's hearing of the injunction suit brought by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America against the Atlantic Communication Company, before Judge Van Vechten Veeder in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, a wireless message was sent from the courtroom over one of the two apparatus set up there by the defendant company.

At the suggestion of one of the counsel, Judge Veeder selected for the test a paragraph from a newspaper, and the apparatus was put in communication with a wireless instrument at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. At today's hearing it is expected that testimony will be offered to show the receipt of this wireless message.

A wireless aerial on the roof of the Post Office Building in Brooklyn has been used in connection with the apparatus in the courtroom where the injunction suit is being tried. Another complete apparatus for sending wireless messages is installed also in the courtroom. These are among many exhibits offered in the suit.

The suit for an injunction against the Atlantic Communication Company was brought by the Marconi Company for alleged infringement of patents. The plaintiffs want to restrain the German firm from using the Telefunken apparatus in this country on the ground that the mechanism of the instrument infringes on the Marconi and Lodge patents. The defendants operate the big wireless station at Sayville, L. I., through which messages are sent between this country and Berlin.

Dated May 15, 1915 — Due May 15, 1920

Coupon bonds in denomination of $1,000 — Interest payable November 15 and May 15

Principal and interest payable in New York at The National City Bank of New York in U. S. gold dollars of the present standard of weight and fineness.

EXEMPT FROM ALL PRESENT OR FUTURE ARGENTINE TAXES

These Treasury Bonds are issued under authority of Law Number 9468, dated January 2, 1914, and Law Number 9648, dated February 9, 1915, which authorize the Executive Power to issue a total amount of 80,000,000 Argentine gold pesos (equivalent to $77,760,000 United States gold or £16,000,000 sterling) for the purpose of furnishing means for the extension of the Sanitary Works and water supply of the Federal Capital. The immediate issue consists of the $25,000,000 now offered in the United States of America and £5,000,000 offered in the United Kingdom of Great Britain. Both the sterling and dollar bonds are of substantially similar tenor and content.

After May 15, 1917, sterling and dollar bonds will be interchangeable between London and New York at the fixed rate of $4.86 per pound sterling, the expense of any new stamps which may be required, to be borne by the holder.

These Five Year 6% Treasury Gold Bonds are the direct general obligation of the Argentine Government, whose faith and credit are pledged for the prompt payment of the principal and semi-annual interest as they fall due.

"For the purpose of furnishing means for the eventual replacement of the present short term Treasury Bonds by the issue of long term bonds, the Executive Power of the Nation shall procure such amendment of Laws Numbers 8889 and 9468 as will permit the Government to assume responsibility of and endorse with its guaranty the bonds or obligations which the Board of Sanitary Works is authorized to issue in accordance with those laws. When the amendment has been obtained and the issue made, the proceeds thereof will be applied to the redemption of the present issue.

"Until the entire loan, of which this bond forms a part, is cancelled, the Government of the Argentine Nation will not agree to more favorable conditions as regards security for any other loan whatsoever without securing in like manner the principal and instalments of interest of each and every bond of this loan. Loans are excepted which may be raised for industrial purposes, such as railroads or petroleum, and for which the industries themselves may be encumbered.

"When the amendment of Laws Numbers 8889 and 9468 shall have been accomplished and the attendant issue of bonds or obligations shall have been made, the Executive Power will retain in his control, as security for this loan until its complete cancelation, an amount in money or of such bonds or obligations equal to the amount of the present loan."

From the proceeds of the present loan there will be retained by the Bankers, funds sufficient to pay off $5,000,000 Series "A" 6% Gold Notes maturing December 15, 1915; £5,000,000 of short term notes maturing in London, September 2; and £3,000,000 maturing December 15, 1915. The balance will constitute free money available for further construction expenditures upon the Sanitary Works of Buenos Aires.

Additional bonds are reserved under the authorization of the above laws to refund the $5,000,000 Series "B" and $5,000,000 Series "C" Notes maturing December 15, 1916 and December 15, 1917, respectively.

FIGHTS TO CONTROL MISSISSIPPI WATERS

Levee Association Says Floods Can Be Prevented for $60,000,000.

UP TO U. S. GOVERNMENT

Congress to be Asked for Appropriation to Save 20,000,000 Acres Along River.

The Mississippi can be controlled. The abnormal rush of the waters each Spring can be kept in the channel of the river and thus conducted without loss of life and property in the lands through which the great river sweeps to the sea. It can be done most readily and at least expense by increasing the height and extending the length along the river, at critical places, of the levees. The estimated cost is placed at $60,000,000, which is to be asked of Congress at its next session.

The information, together with a great deal of other interesting data has been furnished to THE TIMES by the Mississippi River Levee Association in a nicely illustrated booklet. The association, composed of prominent men of the lower Mississippi Valley, is formed for the express purpose of preventing disasters such as occurred in 1912 and 1913, when the loss of property resulting from the overflow of the great river was more than double the estimated cost of preventing such a recurrence.

Popular misconception of the facts includes the belief, the booklet recites, that the Government has taken full charge of the problem and only Government funds have been used to correct the evil. It is shown that only $30,000,000 has been spent in a spasmodic and desultory manner by the Federal Government since 1810, while more than $75,000,000 has been spent by the localities affected since the civil war.

U. S. Commission Named in 1879.

After reciting facts concerning the overflow in the lower lands, since 1712, the booklet shows that the problem finally became so serious that the Mississippi River Commission was created by an Act of Congress on June 28, 1879, and that the commission, composed of seven members, always three U. S. A. engineers, one from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and three from civil life, two of whom are civil engineers, has done very effective work in investigating the matter and making recommendations to Congress.

The commission's recommendations, although accepted as correct, have been tabled, with thanks, and nothing more substantial. The Mississippi River Levee Association is determined to rouse the Government to offering the people of the lower Mississippi Valley something more than words.

The booklet shows that the inundations take place below Cairo, where the Ohio River rushes into the Mississippi. From that point to the Gulf, the waters sweep on through Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Louisiana, overflow the levees, and flood the neighboring sections, in some instances the water rising as high as the crossbars on telegraph poles.

The heart of the problem is shown to be at the bends of the river, where the flood, continuing in a straight course, not being diverted by levees adequately high, rushes over the surrounding lands, with consequent loss of property and life. There is also the explanation for the rise of the river given in the Spring thaws, and the booklet goes on to show that the lands affected suffer from the drainage of thirty-one States north, east, and west of it, and that only 1 per cent. of the water which the river carries off to the Gulf comes from the terrieory affected. An accompanying map shows that waters are drained from New York as well as Montana, and from Minnesota as well as Alabama.

There are figures to show that 20,000,000 acres are affected, reaching from the wheat fields of Missouri to the orange groves of Louisiana, and that the cotton crop could be increased by proper protection so that it would return yearly $750,000,000 more than at present.

After reciting the various methods and plans proposed for relieving the situation, such as reforestation, reservoirs, cut-offs, outlets, and levees, the booklet shows that the levee system is that recommended by the United States Army engineers as the most practical and most inexpensive. Here is a description of the building of levees, contained in the booklet:

"Those that have been built have increased in height and section as money for their construction became available and at the present time contain approximately 243,000,000 cubic yards of earth. Their height varies as the ground upon which they are located is high or low compared to the water plane, although at present the average height is about five feet. The top or crown is from eight to ten feet wide, and the base is usually six times as great as the height, the slope on either side being three feet horizontal to one foot vertical.

"They are constructed entirely of earth, the material being taken from the riverside or inside. The lines upon which they are located follow the general direction of the river bank, a wide margin which varies from 1,000 to 5,000 feet being left between the levee and the bank of the river.

"In the earlier days of levee building the earth was moved by wheelbarrow, later wheel scraper and teams were used and now much is done by traction engines and graders. The cost of the work has become greater as the heighth of the levees has increased, and averages now about 25 cents per cubic yard.

"About 230,000,000 cubic yards will will be required to complete the existing system and if the entire work can be undertaken as a whole, much of the cost can be saved by the utilization of modern methods and machinery. The whole project can be completed in less than five years."

LORD BRYCE GIVES VIEW OF PALESTINE

Ex-Ambassador's Comments Coincident with Demand for Country's Neutralization.

DESCRIBES LAND AS "TINY"

Smaller Than New Jersey, He Declares—Great Historical Events in Limited Territory.

A demand for the complete neutralization of the Holy Land, which has been growing in strength since Turkey entered the war, which would remove Palestine from the domination of the Ottoman, gives interest to the observations recently prepared by Viscount James Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, for the National Geographic Society.

"Palestine," the former Ambassador says, "is a tiny little country. Though the traveler's handbooks prepare him to find it small, it surprises him by being smaller than he expected. Taking it as the region between the Mediterranean on the west and the Jordan and the Dead Sea on the east, from the spurs of Lebanon and Hermon on the north to the desert at Beersheba on the south, it is only 110 miles long and from 50 to 60 broad—that is to say, it is smaller than New Jersey, whose area is 7,500 square miles.

"Of this region large parts did not really belong to Israel. Israel had, in fact, little more than the hill country which lay between the Jordan on the east and the Maritime Plain on the west. King David in the days of his power looked down from the hill cities of Benjamin, just north of Jerusalem, upon Philistine enemies only twenty-five miles off, on the one side, and looked across the Jordan to Moabite enemies, about as far off, on the other.

"Nearly all the events in the history of Israel that are recorded in the Old Testament happened within a territory no bigger than the State of Connecticut, whose area is 4,800 square miles, and into hardly any other country has there been crowded from the days of Abraham till our own time so much history—that is to say, so many events that have been recorded and deserve to be recorded in the annals of mankind."

Nor is the Palestine of today, according to Lord Bryce, so beautiful or so rich a country as it was painted by the Jews just emerging from the barren, comfortless desert. Its centuries of misgovernment and warfare have assisted nature in crushing out development. Palestine is a land of ancient strife, Lord Bryce explains, and more than fourteen centuries of sad misrule have had effect upon its physical appearance.

"Palestine is a country poor in any natural resources," he continues. "There are practically no minerals, no coal, no iron, no copper, no silver, though recently some oil wells have been discovered in the Jordan Valley. Neither are there any large forests, and though the land may have been better wooded in the days of Joshua than it is now, there is little reason to think that the woods are of trees sufficiently large to constitute a source of wealth. A comparatively small area is fit for tillage.

"Such wealth as the country has consists in its pastures, and the expression 'a land flowing in milk and honey' appropriately describes the best it has to offer, for sheep and goats can thrive on the thin herbage that covers the hills, and the numerous aromatic plants furnish plenty of excellent food for the bees; but it is nearly all thin pasture, for the land is dry and the soil mostly shallow. The sheep and goats vastly outnumber the oxen."

Lord Bryce contrasts the beauty of Greece and Palestine. In both lands, he says, the traveler finds charm everywhere because of the traditions and history that hallow them. In practical reality, however, a great part of Greece is painfully dry and bare, and there is little striking beauty, he says, to be found in the Holy Land. The reverence and piety for spots hallowed by religious associations which the pilgrim brings to the places through which he wanders in Palestine, Lord Bryce says, cause him to see the land through a golden haze that makes it appear lovely.

"But," he continues, "the scenery of the Holy Land, taken as a whole (for there are exceptions), is inferior, both in form and in color, to that of northern and middle Italy, to that of Norway and Scotland, to that of the coasts of Asia Minor, to that of many parts of California and Washington."

In summing up Lord Bryce says:

"If Palestine is not a land of natural wealth nor a land of natural beauty, what is it? What are the impressions which the traveler who tries to see it exactly as it is carries away with him? Roughly summed up, they are these: Stones, caves, tombs, ruins, battlefields, sites hallowed by traditions—all bathed in an atmosphere of legend and marvel. In no other country are there so many shrines of ancient worship, so many spots held sacred—some sacred to Jews, some to Christians, some to Mussulmans. Neither has any other country spots that still draw a multitude of pilgrims, not even Belgium and Lombardy, each a profusion of battlefields."

From the moment that the traveler steps ashore at Jaffa, where he sees the fabled rock to which Andromeda was chained when Perseus rescued her from the sea monster, and the ribs of the great fish that disgorged the prophet Jonah, until he leaves some Palestine port for home, he is in a wonderful bewildering atmosphere which is steeped in legend and marvel.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...3½@4 per cent. for the best names
Saturday...3½@4
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Restricting Cotton Shipments.

A cabled report of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce from The Hague states that "present regulations do not permit cotton to come here even for Dutch consumption, except when sold to bona fide Dutch spinners, who guarantee to spin it in the Netherlands and take license from the Oveasea Trust. No license will be issued to ship agents or merchants."

Colored Cottons Rule Strong.

Colored cotton goods continued yesterday to maintain a strong tone. As one selling agent put it, these goods are bound to show increasing price strength. This factor said that, now that it seems only a matter of weeks before certain colors are exhausted, orders are only taken for specific lines in instances where the necessary dyestuffs are actually in possession of the mills. Many plants were said yesterday to be running from 75 to 80 per cent. of capacity and, were it not for the threatened famine in colors, the prospect would be fair for continued operation.

Situation in Glen Plaids.

The fact that difficulty in "matching up" patterns in the popular glen plaids, which the clothiers have taken in good quantities, may result in the style having but a short run has been mentioned before. Another obstacle not to be slighted, in considering whether these piece goods will continue to be favored, was cited yesterday by a clothier who thought that because they were used extensively last Fall and Winter they may not appeal to the man who has a glen plaid suit packed away. This accounts in some measure for the better inquiry that is heard for stripes. Business on glens just at present is featured by a demand for goods in which the plaid is almost invisible.

Should Have Examination Here.

There have been numerous instances related where supplies turned out in this country for foreign Governments have been rejected for their inferior quality, or other reasons, when they reached the other side. Several manufacturers who have had this unenjoyable experience have fully determined upon taking no orders except where it is specified that examination is to be made in this country. The selling agent for one house said that, where there is no risk taken of goods being rejected abroad, a much better price can be made to the foreign Government, as the domestic manufacturers demand a larger margin where there is any chance that the goods may be turned back on them.

Avoided the Lusitania.

Several of the large dry goods jobbing houses and department stores of this city are congratulating themselves over the fact that some of the buyers who are now in Europe or are about to sail on business trips, escaped taking passage on the Lusitania. President Bonties of the H. B. Claflin Corporation said yesterday that two of the firm's buyers went over on the Lusitania on the previous trip. Other buyers for firms fortunately took other ships on May 1, the date of the Lusitania's sailing, while others went out last Friday and Saturday. From what could be learned in the dry goods section yesterday, it is apparent that many buyers sailing for the war zone will take care to board only American or other neutral ships.

Small Orders Eking Out.

While more or less complaint has been heard for some time in local dry goods jobbing circles relative to the brakes put on buyers for department stores here and elsewhere in the matter of ordering ahead, the pause brought about in orders appears to be lessening. Jobbers are now finding that these stores are sending their representatives here to replenish stocks wanted for immediate consumption. Orders of this kind, while seldom of any great proportion individually, are nevertheless making themselves felt. According to the head of one large concern, these "little orders" are helping out considerably just now. The fact that they are coming in is proving helpful as showing the trend of buying out-of-town by ultimate consumers.

Experts of Hosiery.

Considerable interest is being shown at the present time in exporting circles regarding sales of American hosiery in foreign markets hitherto deemed closed to domestic products. One big firm of jobbers in the dry goods district has been sending initial shipments of silk hosiery to Norway and other Scandinavian countries. Needless to say, Germany in the past has supplied the requirements of these countries, and much interest is being evinced in the reception to be accorded American hosiery in the finer grades. Quite a little business in hosiery and knit goods is also reported with South America. There, too, the American products, for the time being at least, are supplanting like goods of European, mostly German, origin.

A New Kind of Salt Shaker.

A New Jersey man has applied for a patent on a salt shaker which stops the air from getting to the salt, thus keeping it dry and preventing it from clogging about the holes in the top of the shaker. The shaker may be made up of glass, china, metal, or any suitable substance, it is said, the inside being so formed as to provide a seat for a globular valve, which has a stem projecting through the perforated top or sifting cover. The valve works automatically by force of gravity, closing as soon as the shaker is put in an upright position. In this way it seals the shaker against the entrance of air and moisture. The usual method of using the shaker opens the valve, and refilling is done by removing the valve, which is lifted out with the cover when the latter is taken off.

Spring Overcoats in the Fall.

A clothing salesman pointed out yesterday that more so-called Spring overcoats are sold during the Fall than during the season from which they get their name. The reason for this, he explained, is that a hot day or two during the Spring causes the retailer to cancel what orders he has placed for this sort of merchandise on the possibility that warm weather has started in. In the Fall the reverse is true, and a hot spell is unusual rather than the natural thing to expect. Consequently, this salesman reasoned out, the retailer ought to make more careful preparations for supplying the demand to be met for lightweight overcoats in the Fall than he does in the Spring, and a little care in the selection of goods should enable the merchant to do a very good business on the light topcoat.

Printcloth Prices Firm.

The buying of large sheetings for bag purposes, which was one of the features in last week's gray goods market, continued yesterday. The scarcity of burlap was the governing factor in the sales consummated and may be for some time to come. There was a good demand for wide piques and for fancy goods for Summer underwear for the late months of the year. The market on wide print-cloths was firm with first hands, but second hands are selling below the mills prices. Generally the market may be said to be in pretty good shape. Many factors express the opinion that there will be no decline in prices. This belief is based on the view that the market is well sold up. Large print cloths sold from ⅛ to ¼ off. Leading commission houses quoted spot goods as follows:

39-inch,	68-72s	4⅞c	38½-inch,	60-48s	3⅝c
38½-inch,	64-64s	4½c	27-inch,	64-60s	3c
38½-inch,	64-60s	4⅛c	27-inch,	56-52s	2½c

The Proposal.

Her admirer swallowed hard, pulled at his collar, and finally made up his mind.

"Lillian," he said desperately, "let's get married."

Lillian's bored expression vanished. "All right," she agreed; "but whom can you marry?"—Judge.

Seems to be a Pretty Good Gun.

A merchant in a South Missouri town set a trap gun for burglars. The burglars didn't burgle and the merchant forgot all about the trap, and two days later there was one of the biggest funerals in the history of the town.—Leeton. (Mo.) Times.

Not Yet.

"Neither can it hide behind the skirts of the President of the United States," says Senator Bristow, referring to the railroad question. The gentleman from Kansas appears to think that suffrage has won everything.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lost Track of Him.

"It's easy to lose all trace of old friends," remarked the Man on the Car; "I have in mind one whom I have not heard of since he went to Congress."—Toledo Blade.

Rolling in Wealth.

All things come to him who waits. The editor of this paper is serving on the jury at $2 per day, but he asks his creditors for the Lord's sake be patient yet a little while, and don't crowd a man when he's up!—Adams (Ga.) Enterprise.

Beats the Wall Street Record.

At a point near Brisbane, Queensland, 50,000 sheep were sheared at one station. This certainly appears to rival the achievements of Wall Street in its palmiest days.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Exercise a Little Restraint.

Joy is willing to play the fiddle free, but he doesn't expect you to dance the shoes off your feet.—Atlanta Constitution.

Well Movers, Take Notice.

We have a city well that we would like to have moved. We want it located where there is plenty of water.—Grant City (Mo.) Times.

15,000 CLUBWOMEN MEET HERE IN 1916

General Federation Plans to Entertain Delegates from 2,000 Organizations.

CONVENTION TO LAST WEEK

Biennial Board Will Levy Head Tax of 10 Cents in New York to Pay Conference Expenses.

The Biennial Board of New York State, which is preparing for the great convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which will meet in this city next year, has decided that it shall be held during the week of May 22, 1916. The General Federation of Women's Clubs represents nearly 2,000 clubs, with eleven affiliated organizations, and a total membership of 2,000,000. The President is Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Austin, Texas. Every State in the Union is represented. The convention in New York will be the biggest gathering of women ever held in the country, it is expected.

The last biennial convention of the Federation, held in Chicago, had 12,000 visiting women, and New York is preparing to receive 15,000. Arrangements are being made to hold the convention in the Hippodrome or Madison Square Garden. The local board is making careful arrangements for hotel and boarding-house accommodations, and prices will be stated as definitely as possible. Women from many small towns who have never visited New York are planning to make this trip, and the board is receiving many letters of inquiry.

One farmer's wife wrote to ask the exact cost of her stay in the city. "This has been a bad year on the farm," she said. "I am saving the butter and egg money, but if I knew just how much it would take it would be a great help."

Mrs. William Grant Brown, former President of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, head of the Local Biennial Board, has asked New York clubwomen to give a warm reception to these strangers, and they are anxious to do so.

Each individual clubwoman in New York City is taxed 10 cents for the cost of entertaining the delegates and the up-State women 5 cents. One woman President of a club with 135 members, when told that her club dues for the convention would be $13.50, replied: "Well, thirteen is an unlucky number, and 50 cents is odd; I'll just write a check for $10." Another clubwoman President with a club of twenty members and owing only $2, wrote a check for $5.

"The $5 woman helps pay the $13.50 woman's dues," said Mrs. Brown, in speaking to the clubwomen of their financial duties. Thirty thousand dollars must be raised for expenses.

There will be many entertainments and excursions given to the visiting delegates, among the latter an ocean trip, a visit to West Point and to Sleepy Hollow. The invitation to the Federation to hold its convention in New York is extended by the New York State and City Federations and Sorosis, with the co-operation of the Mayor of New York City and the Merchants' Association.

The Local Biennial Board has headquarters in the Hotel Astor, mezzanine floor. With Mrs. Brown at its head, the officers are: Finance, Mrs. Belle De Rivera; Press, Mrs. Haryot Holt Dey; Budget, Miss Anne Rhodes; Hospitality, Mrs. John Lewis Childs; Badges, Mrs. James M. Edsall; Ushers, Mrs. John H. Parker; Vice Chairman Credentials, Mrs. Robert M. Griffin; Music, Mrs. William R. Chapman; Distribution of Literature, Miss Florence Wier Gibson; Halls and Headquarters, Mrs. James A. Allen.

On the Advisory Board are the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the Revolution, the National New England Society, the National Society of 1812, and Young Women's Christian Association. Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel, Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, and Mrs. William A. Prendergast.

All the clubs of New York State will be hostesses. As far as possible, the visiting clubwomen will be placed in hotels by States, an arrangement which has been found satisfactory at other conventions. There has been discussion in regard to putting up a convention building before next May, there being no suitable place in the city for so large a convention. The Hippodrome seats only 6,500 and Madison Square Garden 12,137.

NIMBLE WIT PUTS SMITH TO THE FORE

A VETERAN AT ALBANY

East Side Boy Who Stays There in Prosperity—How He Astonished an Assembly Clerk.

ALBANY, May 8.—In seats 52, 53, and 54 in the Assembly Chamber, where the Constitutional Convention meets, are three of Tammany's faithful, Senator Robert F. Wagner, "Tom" Smith, Secretary of the Wigwam, and on the aisle, the star of the trio, Assemblyman "Al" Smith. Had the plans of Charles F. Murphy not been spoiled by the Republican victory last Fall these three would have been among the mighty in the convention, leading a fight to enable New York City to have a stronger, if not a controlling, representation in the Legislature. This is a forlorn hope now, inasmuch as the convention is in the hands of the Republicans and it is not to be expected that they will give New York City, and the Democrats, any increase of influence. So, instead of being the masters, the best the Tammanyites can do is to "rock the boat."

When the proposals for changes in the State's organic law reach the floor of the convention, however, Smith will be one of the central figures of the body. This will be because of an experience of twelve years at Albany, coupled with a power in debate which every member of the Assembly for the past decade acknowledges.

In his dozen years at Albany Smith has been leader of the Democratic majority in the lower house for several terms, Speaker of the Assembly, and for the past two sessions leader of the minority. While his party colleagues follow his leadership implicitly, some of his warmest admirers are among the Republicans. When the delegates to the convention were sworn in on April 6 Smith received an ovation.

Smith has received enough loving cups and other tokens of esteem from Assembly admirers "to start a silver store," as he puts it. Every year some orator takes it upon himself to refer to him as "a diamond in the rough," "an uneducated, but a lovable man," or something like that. Smith got his training on the lower east side of Manhattan. In his days of prosperity he has found no good reason for leaving his people. As Smith puts it, he has no use for a politician who, after "making good" on the east side, moves to Riverside Drive and "walks around knee deep in plush carpets and cooks his corned beef and cabbage in the cellar so the high-brow neighbors wont know it."

There has been no one in the Assembly since Smith became a member who could floor him in debate. There is a story about the Capitol that in his first year he sat quiet until toward the end of the session he arose one day to express the request of Chinese laundrymen of Manhattan who wanted a hearing on a bill of which he was the author, under which Chinese laundrymen would have to pay a license.

"Here is their request, Mr. Speaker," he said; "I would like for the Clerk to read it."

It is said that the collection of laundry marks still is cherished by the man who was the Assembly Clerk at that time.

One of the best bits of repartee by Mr. Smith during the last session was delivered about two o'clock one morning, when he was speaking on labor laws. In front of Smith sat Assemblyman Pratt of Washington, who bears some reputation as an orator. He arose and faced Smith.

"Can the gentleman from New York tell me what food any labor law is to 350,000 idle men in New York City put out of work by the Democrats at Washington?" he asked.

Smith, without hesitation, replied:

"Well, a friend of mine once asked me: 'Al, which had you rather be, a hammock full of white doorknobs, a cellar full of broken stepladders, or a piece of dry ice?' And I said, 'Joe, I'd rather be a fish, because no matter how thick a plate glass window is you can break it with a sledge hammer.'"

But let no one get the impression that Smith is the Assembly's clown. His speech at the memorial exercises in honor of ex-speaker Merritt was said by State Education Commissioner John H. Finley to be one of the most eloquent tributes he ever heard. When some up-State men tride to put the Assembly on record in favor of the Burnett literacy test, Smith spoke from the heart of the east side when he said:

"This hour of turmoil is no time to dim the beacon star of hope that has shone out over the waters for so many years to the oppressed of Europe."

His speech in favor of widows' pensions swung the Republicans away from Majority Leader Hinman, who opposed the measure, and passed the bill by an overwhelming vote.

Smith was born in Oliver Street, still lives there, and expects to live there as long as he lives. He went to St. James's school for a year, but had to leave to earn a living for himself and mother when his father died.

DIVES INTO THE EARTH.

A Stream in Kentucky That Is Called the Lost River.

The burning of the Crump mill, a few miles from the city on the Nashville Road, recalls to us that the Crump mill is located at the headwaters of Lost River. Gushing out of the side of a rocky hill, a few hundred yards above the mill, the river disappears again into the earth at the mill site. The pike runs above it, and the mill is located far above its banks. The first mill was intended to be run by water power, but this was not found feasible, and for many years steam power has been used. But the water from Lost River has not only been utilized by the mill, but to furnish water for the countryside around.

Lost River is a swift-running stream for the short distance it peers its head above the ground. Below the mill there are evidences of its outcropping in springs and lakes, but it is not until the farm of Dr. Rowe is reached, on the Morgantown Pike, that it is again seen as a creek. From here until it empties into Barren River it is known as Jennings Creek.

TWO MEALS A DAY.

Considerable Interest Attaches to an Experiment in Penn Yan.

An interesting experiment has just been undertaken in Penn Yan, N. Y., which may be a comparatively obscure community but is none the less to be respected for its domestic initiative and independence. A score of Penn Yan families have adopted the schedule of two meals a day, and the entire community is said to be watching the experiment with feminine interest and masculine anxiety. Naturally, if the plan proves successful, three meals a day will no longer be known in Penn Yan, and father and the boys will have to adjust their hunger to the curtailment of sustenance.

The scheme is not based on a new notion of economy, nor on a general belief that people eat too much, but merely on the disinclination of the experimenting housewives to do what they considered unnecessary work. Of course, they needed some better reason than the mere disinclination to work, so they obtained expert medical opinion to the effect that sufficient nutrition is furnished by breakfast and late afternoon dinner. So the usual noon meal is to be omitted, for the ordinary husband lacks the will power and the character to dispute what the doctor says.

In the average large city this would not mean so much, for the place of work is usually some distance from the home and the men folk habitually eat their luncheon at a restaurant or take it with them, but Penn Yan is a small place and presumably most of the Penn Yanites have been going home at noon for a hot meal. The question for them is a practical rather than an academic one. The revolutionary experiment does not concern health and dietary routine so much as the tempers and temperaments of Penn Yan husbands. Until the conflict between masculine habit and will and feminine determination to reduce the cooking and dishwashing by 33 per cent. is settled Penn Yan is likely to be as interesting sociologically as it is philologically.—Providence Journal.

EGGS AND OPULENCE.

$700,000,000 Presented the Country Last Year by the Hens.

To a lot of individuals, not, however, including the hens, it is pleasant to read that the egg crop of the country during the year past amounted to $700,000,000, exceeding the average wheat crop of the past ten years. Particularly elated is the householder who finds on visiting the hennery of his accustomed and trusted purveyor of fresh laid eggs that the price has gone up to 65 cents a dozen.

It may be a cause of pride to the little dominicker hen, which lays an egg a day and goes barefoot, to read that she is one of the greatest and the most dependable contributors to the nation's prosperity. Were it not for her a by-product of agriculture would not be the profitable thing it is. The little dominicker hen is not assertive, except on occasion. But she knows full well that her owner would, but for her, still be scratching his slow and laborious way about the country behind a spavined horse or two, instead of luxuriously progressing in a car smoothly propelled by gasoline.

The farmer of today is not the farmer of a decade ago. Farming is a polite and effeminate occupation compared with the old order. The farmer who now goes to town in a seven-passenger car and has a tennis court on the front lawn does not face the hard knocks of the narrow life that featured the old order. Existence in the country, with the better roads, the social centres, the telephones, and one thing and another, is not what it used to be. The farmer, of course, takes credit for this to himself, pointing to his progressiveness, his improved methods, his increased efficiency, keeping pace with the times. But the little dominicker hen knows all the time that if she once stopped laying for a year there would be a different story to tell.—Newark News.

FOLLOWED THE RULE.

The Man Who Wanted Coffee Decided to Take Rum.

I tried an experiment the other day which many have tried before and, so far as I have heard, with a similar sequel. I went to the vicinity of Broad Street and Fairmount Avenue and stood as if waiting for a car.

Approach one of those unshaven men with a shuffling gait. The thermometer stood at 20 and he wore no overcoat.

"Say, bo," he muttered, "can't you spare enough to buy a cup of coffee?"

"Hungry?" said I.

"Nothing to eat since yesterday," he replied, and he looked it.

So I gave him a quarter and he quickly vanished up Ridge Avenue, but no more quickly than I did. He stopped in a saloon and I walked up to him as he was taking a drink of whiskey.

It is impossible to reproduce here the profanity and insolent abuse he hurled at me when I hinted that my money was intended for hot coffee and food. I left him there—this ordinary loafer—but I had once more proved to my own satisfaction that very rarely indeed does a man who begs deserve alms.

But what of the barkeeper who took my money that was obtained by fraud?—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

GREAT MORAL LESSON.

Paw and Maw Try to Teach It to Their Young Son.

The tired father of a restless boy orated as follows—not speaking to the boy directly, but doing it in his presence:

"How true it is that it is never safe to judge by appearances?"

"Yes," replied the boy's mother, seeing that it was her cue, and answering with another version of the cliché, "appearances are often awfully deceptive."

"And so are inanimate objects," continued the paterfamilias with marked emphasis. "You would think, for instance, if you judged by appearances, that the heavy pair of school shoes I bought for James the other day was going to last for more than three weeks, wouldn't you? And you would never think that the fragile-looking arithmetic I bought him at the beginning of the term would bid fair to last forever. But look at 'em!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The new eligible list for patrolman will be soon announced.

The Commission has made a rule that hereafter when a candidate is given a physical or medical re-examination the second test shall be given before the written examination papers are ordered.

United States.

The Commission announces for June 3 at the New York Custom House a competitive examination for inspector of clothing, for men only, to fill a vacancy in the Quartermaster Corps of the Army, at New York, N. Y., at $960 a year. The department states that if the appointee's probationary service is satisfactory he will be promoted at the expiration thereof to $1,080 a year. The appointee will be required to inspect finished garments, underwear, and other articles of men's wearing apparel, and also to inspect garments in the process of manufacture in the factory. Competitors will be examined in practical questions on measuring, fitting, and making clothing, arithmetic, letter writing, penmanship, training and experience. Age, 21 years or over on the date of examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Weather conditions and general forecast:

Pressure is generally low over the interior West, with a centre of marked depression over the Canadian Northwest, and there were showers in the Northwest and over the middle and north districts west of the Rocky Mountains. There were also showers in Eastern Texas and Southern Florida, but elsewhere the weather was fair during the last twenty-four hours.

Temperatures have risen as a rule and are much above the seasonal average in the Northwest, although they were quite low Monday morning east of the Mississippi River, and light frosts occurred in the Ohio Valley and the southern upper lake region.

There will be showers Tuesday over the Middle and Northern districts west of the Rocky Mountains, continuing Wednesday on the Northern Coast. There also will be showers Tuesday in the Northwest extending Tuesday night and Wednesday into the upper Mississippi Valley and upper lake region and on Tuesday along the East Gulf Coast and in Florida. Elsewhere the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

It will be warmer Tuesday over the central and interior eastern portions of the country and on Wednesday in the upper Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England. It will be cooler Tuesday night in the extreme Northwest and slightly cooler Wednesday in the Northwest generally.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast Tuesday and Wednesday will be moderate west, becoming variable Wednesday; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate variable, becoming southeast Wednesday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate and mostly east.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair, warmer Tuesday and Wednesday.

Southern New England and Western New York—Fair Tuesday. Wednesday, fair, warmer.

New Jersey and Northern New England—Fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Operator Buys East Eighty-second Street Plot for New Apartment—George H. Earle a Buyer Near Times Square—Upper West Side Deals—Buyers in the Bronx.

Several good deals opened the realty market of the week yesterday, including a large plot on 135th Street near Broadway for garage improvement. The east side furnished an important transaction for a large apartment house operation in the purchase by Samuel A. Herzog of the three old four-story dwellings at 110 to 114 East Eighty-second Street from Mrs. A. S. H. Schmidt. They have a combined frontage of 71.6 by 102.2 deep, between Park and Lexington Avenues.

Mr. Herzog, who has been an active operator in the Park Avenue section, intends to erect on the site a nine-story apartment house to be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1, 1916. He erected a large apartment in the same block at 122 over two years ago, which was sold in May, 1913, to an investor.

G. H. Earle Buys in 45th Street.

George H. Earle of Philadelphia has taken title to the two houses at 125 and 127 West Forty-fifth Street, 38 by 82, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue. Both were sold by Thomas Killelea, the sale of one being announced last week to Harry J. Sanders, who immediately transferred them to Mr. Earle, who owns the old Clinton apartment in Forty-second Street near Eighth Avenue. He gives back mortgages of $80,000.

135th Street Sale for Garage.

The large vacant plot on the south side of 135th Street, between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway, adjoining the Claremont Theatre and Restaurant on the southeast Broadway corner, has been sold by William A. White & Sons for the Speedway Realty Company (Jackson & Stern.) The plot has a frontage of 160 feet by 99.11 deep. The buyers intend to improve this property with a high-class fireproof garage, which will be one of the largest in the Washington Heights district.

Upper Manhattan Cash Deal.

In the upper Manhattan district the five-story apartment house at 610 West 180th Street, on plot 25 by 100, being 100 feet west of St. Nicholas Avenue, has been sold by Mrs. Elizabeth C. Schneider. The buyer was a woman investor and it was a cash deal. The holding price was $45,000. This is the second sale since the house was erected by John B. Berry five years ago. The brokers were John M. Thompson and C. Walter Cushier.

Buys West Side Dwelling.

Thomas J. McKeon has sold to H. R. Roeder, for investment, 67 West Ninetieth Street, a three-story and basement dwelling on a lot 18.9 by 100.8, located 100 feet east of Columbus Avenue. Joseph P. Day was the broker. The house will be altered for business.

A. R. E. Co. Makes Big Transfer.

The transfer of the twelve-story commercial building at 5 to 9 East Thirty-first Street, running through to 6 to 10 East Thirty-second Street, 66 feet frontage by 197.6 deep, and the four-story structure at 11 East Thirty-first Street, 21 by 98.9, was recorded yesterday from the American Real Estate Co. to the Preferred Rentals Stockton Building, Inc., subject to a mortgage of $860,000. The new ownership is virtually subsidiary of the American Real Estate Company.

Harlem-Bronx Trades.

O'Reilly & Dahn have resold for a client to Mrs. Moritz the northwest corner of 132d Street and Eighth Avenue, a six-story tenement house, on plot 42 by 100. The purchaser gave in part payment 2,210 University Avenue, a one-family house, on plot 42 by 100.

Hermine Delrovsky has purchased from the Normal Construction Company the recently completed six-story apartment house, occupying a plot 75 by 100, at the southeast corner of Avenue St. John and Fox Street. The buyer gave in exchange 256 West 143d Street, a six-story tenement with stores, on lot 25 by 99.11, located 225 feet east of Eighth Avenue.

Bronx Sales.

Kurz & Uren, Incorporated, have sold for the Benenson Realty Company to Hubener-Escher Company, the vacant plot of land located on the south side of East 165th Street, running from Teller to Clay Avenue, having a frontage on 165th Street of 222 feet, on Teller Avenue, 113.31; on Clay Avenue, 127, and 250 on the rear line. The buyers will improve the plot by the erection of five-story new-law tenements.

Mrs. Frances Weiner sold to an investing client of Martin Kratsch 1,879 Cedar Avenue, Morris Heights. The structure, a private dwelling, occupies a plot 50 by 115.

The University Building Company has sold to an investing client of H. L. Phelps, the two southerly of a group of five-story apartment houses erected by the selling company on the southeast corner University and Burnside Avenues, occupying a plot 43 by 115 each. It was an all cash transaction.

Long Island.

J. Albert Sohntra Company has sold for D. E. Weddle two one-family cottages, 104 and 106 First Street, College Point, to O. F. Gafroy.

Staten Island.

Moffatt & Schwab have sold for Charles A. Harreus, Jr., to Mrs. Robert Donella the residence at 44 Beach Street, Stapleton; also sold for the Mansion Realty Company of Manhattan to Captain John H. Linge of the Standard Oil Steamer John D. Archbold, a plot of ground on Pelton Avenue, West New Brighton.

Polizzi & Co., Incorporated have purchased from Clarence P. Browning a tract of land with more than 1,700 feet frontage on Marianne Street together with other important frontages on Forest and Indiana Avenues, Port Richmond, Staten Island. It will be immediately offered for subdivision development.

Commercial Leases.

Leo Abraham has leased for a term of years the six-story apartment and store property, 163 and 165 West 145th Street.

N. Brigham Hall and William D. Bloodgood have leased for Katharine A. Kingsland to Thomas Dragna the store and basement at 897 Eighth Avenue.

Morris Estate Sale Today.

The first big auction sale of the year will be held today, when the holdings of the Arthur R. Morris estate will be disposed of under an absolute auction to the highest bidder, beginning at noon in the Exchange Salesroom on Vesey Street. The proceeds are to be given to Christ Church of Yokohama, the Domestic and Foreign Missions, and other religious, charitable, and educational institutions.

"This proceeding," said Messrs. J. Clarence Davies and Joseph P. Day, who are to conduct the offering for Henry Lewis Morris, executor of the estate, "is an unusually interesting event in the public sales branch of the real estate market, for the reason that it will enable a fairly accurate survey of the prevailing demand in the four boroughs where the Morris realty is situated, as all the properties will be placed on sale for whatever prices they may bring. Naturally there will be competition, but in view of the appalling sea tragedy it is quite likely, with the public mind concentrated upon it, that the opportunities to buy at low prices will thereby be increased.

"Nearly all of these properties are adjacent to new lines of transit, and the conditions under which they will be sold promise to result in bargains for the buyers."

$90,000 Brooklyn Flats.

Shampan & Shampan have completed plans for two apartment houses to be erected on a plot of 100 by 100 on the north side of Parkside Avenue, 88 feet east of Flatbush Avenue, for Samuel Teplitz, as owner, to cost $90,000.

Real Estate Notes.

A meeting of the Harlem Property Owners' Association has been called for Thursday evening, at 147 East 125th Street.

At a special meeting of the Real Estate Auctioneers' Association held last week, William F. Redmond, Treasurer, was also elected Vice-President and Hugh D. Smyth was made Secretary. Both poitions were held for a great many years by the late D. Phoenix Ingraham. Joseph P. Day was selected chairman of the executive committee.

A meeting of the Clason Point Taxpayers' Association has been called for Thursday evening at Clason Point Park.

Isabella Loring has taken title from Mathilde Steinam to the five story residence at 39 West Seventy-second Street, 28 by 102.2.

SUBMARINES DRAW GREATEST CROWDS

GEN. WOOD VISITS ADMIRAL

While the Record-breaking throngs of Saturday and Sunday were not approached, so far as numbers are concerned, the Atlantic Fleet was again the magnet that drew thousands to Riverside Drive and the river shore north of Seventy-sixth Street yesterday. The scene was not the animated one that made Saturday and Sunday days to be remembered by the navy and the people, and this was due to reasons, one the fact that it was a full workday for most of the thousands who enjoy looking over the fleet, and the other because it was a sort of holiday for the men of the fleet, thousands of whom had shore leave and took advantage of the opportunity to have good times in town, far away from the anchorages of their ironclad homes.

The battle line ships, particularly the superdreadnoughts Wyoming, New York, and Texas continued the most popular of the big fighters, and yesterday afternoon their decks were again crowded with happy, interested parties of sightseers.

The submarines, however, were the greatest attraction yesterday, and the dock at the foot of West 138th Street was crowded all day, while other throngs looked down on the little underwater craft from places of vantage on the viaduct above. One of the submarines that was due to take part in the review will no be here. This is the G-1, which broke a shaft on the way from Charleston, and instead of joining the flotilla in the Hudson proceeded to the Navy Yard in Brooklyn for repairs.

Say Lusitania Had No Chance.

Some of the officers of the flotilla, in discussing the Lusitania disaster, which is naturally the chief topic of conversation by the officers and men of the submarine service, are convinced that probably as many as a dozen German submarines were off Ireland watching for the Lusitania the day that liner was torpedoed and sunk. The Lusitania, in thi sofficer's opinion, did not have one chance in a hundred of escaping after she entered the Irish Sea.

An officer of the fleet yesterday, in discussing the peculiarities of torpedoes, said that during a recent submarine target practice in Southern waters the mothership, Tonopah was torpedoed by a Whitehead torpedo, the head of which was dead. The impact was felt all over the vessel, but as the head of the missile was "dead" no damage resulted. The Tonopah was towing a target at the time, and the torpedo veered from its proper course, missed the target, and got the Tonopah instead.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the Eastern Department of the Army on Governors Island, called upon Admiral Fletcher, the Commander in Chief of the fleet, yesterday. General Wood remained in the flagship more than an hour. Later Admiral Fletcher called upon General Wood at Governors Island.

Tars Swim Vainly for Shore.

Because they had been refused shore leave Clifford Ferris and Roy Hoffman, bluejackets attached to the flagship, tried to get ashore anyway. Early yesterday morning they donned life preservers, vaulted over the rail of the main deck, and they had not gone more than twenty-five yards before both were exhausted. They were rescued by the New York Central tug Chauncey M. Depew, landed at Sixty-eighth Street, and turned over to the police. The flagship was notified and a marine guard took the men back to the Wyoming. The tars will tell why they did it to a court-martial.

When the canoe they were in capsized, John Maranda, 17 years old, of 225 East Fortieth Street, and his cousin, Gould Maranda, the same age, of 385 West Thirty-fifth Street, were rescued from the river off the foot of West 138th Street yesterday afternoon by Lieutenant Charles M. Cook, commander of the submarine E-2. Both youths were taken to the monitor Tonopah, where they were dried out, and later left for their homes.

Marine and Soldier Hit by Auto.

Jonh Daly, 57 years old, a marine attached to the Wyoming, and Frank McGrath, 46 years old, a private in the nited States Army, who gave his address as 226 West Ninetieth Street, were struck by an automobile at the corner of Broadway and Sixtieth Street yesterday morning and severely bruised. They were removed to the Polychnic Hospital by Dr. Fechtig. According to the police the automobile was owned and operated by Charles Finsilver of 574 West End Avenue, and the accident was declared to have been unavoidable.

It was announced yesterday that the boat race next Monday night will be for the Fletcher Cup, a new trophy given to the oarsmen of the fleet by Admiral Fletcher. The race will be among sixteen boats, each representing one of the battleships in the river. Each cutter will be manned by twelve men, in addition to the coxswain. The race will be witnessed by President Wilson from the deck of the flagship Wyoming and will be from about 102d Street to the finishing line opposite the flagship. After the race there will be a water carnival staged by the torpedo flotilla.

The representatives of the Sons of the Revolution will meet the officers of the fleet off Seventy-ninth Street today at 11:30 A. M., and sail down to Bowling Green, whence they will march to Fraunces Tavern, where there will be a luncheon in honor of the officers.

It was announced yesterday by the Sailors' Entertainment Committee that the Brooklyn Ball Club had offered to take care of 6,000 men of the fleet daily, with the exception of Saturday, when it would be able to accommodate 5,000 to witness the games in Ebbets Field.

McANENY TO DINE OFFICERS.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Asks to be Relieved of Active Duties.

Acting Mayor George McAneny announced yesterday that, acting upon Cornelius Vanderbilt's request that he be relieved of the active duties of the Chairmanship of the Citizens' Committee for the entertainment of the fleet, he had designated W. Butler Duncan to serve as Vice Chairman. Mr. Duncan will represent the committee in whatever public appearance are to be made. Mr. Vanderbilt has consented to continue as Chairman, and will direct the carrying out of the arrangements which have been made. Mr. Duncan is a graduate of the Naval Academy, and throughout the Spanish war served as Commander of the New York Naval Reserves.

Tomorrow night Acting Mayor McAneny will give a small dinner at his home, 19 East Forty-seventh Street, in honor of Admiral Fletcher. The guests will include the four Rear Admirals; C. F. Boush, H. T. Mayo, De Witt Coffman, and Walter McLean; Captain H. M. Huse, Chief of Staff of the Fleet; General Leonard Wood, Rear Admiral Usher, and the officers of the Citizens' Committee.

Daughters of Revolution Convene.

The General Society of the Daughters of the Revolution began its twenty-fourth annual convention with a reception and dance last evening in the St. George Hotel in Brooklyn. Borough President Pounds will address the opening business session of the convention at 9:45 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Clarence L. Bleakley of Yonkers is President of the General

SIGNS POLICE COURT BILL.

Governor Approves Plan to Enlarge Magistrates' Powers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—Governor Whitman today opproved the Mills bill amending the New York City inferior criminal courts act. The act abolishes the office of Chief Magistrate for Brooklyn and the Brooklyn-Queens Board of Magistrates, and establishes one board for the entire city. Provision is made for the temporary assignment of City Magistrates to the Courts of Special Sessions.

In place of the Children's Division of the Court of Special Session the new law creates a court to be known as the Children's Court and the Mayor is directed to assign Justices from the Court of Special Sessions to it before July 1. The law also increases the authority of the City Magistrates.

The Governor also approved Senator Mills's bill making it misdemeanor to utter misleading statements or advertisements relative to the sale of merchandise, or to sell property by means of puzzle or prize methods; Assemblyman Pohlmeus's bill to allow the Surrogates of Bronx, Queens and Richmond to appoint as many attendants and court officers as the Board of Estimate may authorize, and Assemblyman Simpson's bill, increasing the Sheriff's fees for certain services in counties within New York City.

The Governor vetoed the Thompson bill which would require charitable and civic associations to file annual reports of receipts and expenditures with the Secretary of State. The Governor said that the purpose of the bill was much too broad.

The Governor also vetoed Senator Senator Sanders's bill under which the provisions of the labor law, relating to the construction of buildings would not apply to cities of the first class.

46 CONFIRMED IN SING SING.

Auxiliary Bishp Hayes Conducts Ceremony for Convicts.

OSSINING, May 10.—Forty-six convicts at Sing Sing received confirmation today in the Catholic Chapel. The ceremony was conducted by Auxiliary Bishop aPtrick J. Hayes of the archdiocese of New York assisted by his secretary, the Rev. Joseph Bineen; Bishop Francis S. Wall, D. D., Mgr. Luke J. Evers, Very Rev James A. Walsh, Director of the American Catholic Foreign Mission Society; the Rev. John J. Wynn, Father James B. Carry, the Rev. Thomas J. Lynch, Director of the Archdiocese of New York. The sponsors were the son of Justice Victor J. Dowling of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, W. Burke Cockran, Frank Smith, and William J. Larkin of the Knights of Columbus.

After the confirmation Bishop Hayes spoke to the convicts on the material and spiritual work of life. He said it was to the interest of the inmates to work for the spiritual end instead of the material end.

Mr. Cockran also spoke. He touched upon the prison reform system which fits prisoners for lives of usefulness after they leave prison

POWDER MILL BLOWS UP.

PENNS GROVE, N. J., May 10.—Six men were badly injured late this afternoon when there was an explosion in the plant of the E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Company at Carney's Point, a short distance from here, on the Delaware River.

The explosion occurred in the frame building used for mixing the powder. There were only six men in the building at the time. Abraham Usher was blown through the roof and so badly injured that he is likely to die. The other five were badly injured, but are expected to recover. All six live in Philadelphia.

The building, which was isolated, was burned to the ground and several thousand dollars' worth of finished powder destroyed.

The injured men were rushes to the hospitals at Camden, Just what caused the explosion has not been learned, but an investigation is being made.

ACTOR'S WIFE KILLED.

Mrs. Bruning Thrown from Carriage While Driving with Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, May 10.—Mrs. Lulu Bruning, wife of Albert Bruning, an actor, died at their Summer home on Town Hill, New Hartford, today as the result of injuries received this morning while out driving with her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Bruning were descending a steep hill, near their home, when their horses became unruly. Mrs. Bruning reached for one rein in an effort to assist her husband, who was driving, and was pitched from the carriage to the roadway.

Bruning got control of the horse when it reached his home. Returning to the scene of the accident he found his wife unconscious, and before he could get her home she died. Her collarbone and a number of ribs were fractured, and she received other injuries.

Say He Robbed Maxwell Slade.

Detectives Hagen and Feudner of the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau arrested Samuel Simms, a young negro, of 41 West 138th Street, yesterday on suspicion that he robbed Maxwell Slade, one of Rae Tanzer's lawyers, of four diamond rings worth $2,000. The rings were taken April 29 last by some one who entered the flat with a passkey, and detectives suspected Simms because he had worked in the Slade apartment at 302 Convent Avenue for three years and disappeared the day the robbery was discovered.

TWO CENTENARIANS

Just About as Dissimilar as Two Men Could Be.

John Ernest Bach of this city last week celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, assisted by five children, thirty-three grandchildren and 103 great-grandchildren. Eli Pettijohn of Minnetonka Mills, Minn., recently passed the 95-year mark and expects to reach 100 because of his fine health and strength. Last Christmas he went out and cut and trimmed the family Christmas tree.

From these two splendid types of cheerful, hearty old age it would seem as if some rule of living could be deduced; but just try it. Mr. Bach violates every rule of health, eats between meals, drinks whisky and beer when he feels like it, smokes as often as he wishes, drinks large quantities of buttermilk, eats candy almost by wholesale, prefers cake to bread and eats lots of both, and takes very hearty meals three times a day. Being a tailor, he spent much of his time indoors.

Mr. Pettijohn never drank a gill of whisky in all his life, never smoked, always avoided rich foods, and spent much of his time out-of-doors. There are only two points of similarity between the grand old men; each took plenty of sleep and never worried. With the exception of these two traits, they differed almost as widely as Bennett Brinton of Plainfield, who was a tavern keeper the most of his life and recently passed the 101 mark, and Rev. Dr. Mesick, formerly of Somerville, who is yet living, in his 102d year.

The secret of long life cannot be said to be entirely independent of personal habits or environment, but a proper amount of sleep, plenty of satisfactory work, and the happy faculty of refusing to entertain worriment undoubtedly conserve physical and mental strength. All four of the aged men named are yet living, so far as heard from, and hearty good wishes are extended to them for still further length of days.—

FRANK'S DEATH DAY FIXED FOR JUNE 22

His Wife Screams and Collapses as He is Sentenced for the Fourth Time.

HE REITERATES INNOCENCE

State Prison Board and Governor of Georgia Alone Can Save Him from Gallows Now.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 10.—Dramatically asserting his innocence of the murder of Mary Phagan and with the impassioned declaration that "he was to die for the crime of another," Leo M. Frank was to day sentenced by Judge Ben H. Hill, in the General Court, to hang on Tuesday, June 22.

As the words of doom fell from the lips of the Judge, Mrs. Frank, wife of the young factory superintendent, who had wept silently as she sat only a few steps frem where her husband stood, screamed, collapsed and sank limp in her chair. It was several minutes before she could be removed from the courtroom by Herbert Haas, of counsel for Frank, and other friends. She was taken into Judge Hill's chambers, adjoining the courtroom, where she was revived. Shortly afterwards, at the persistent request of the young wife, she was driven in an automobile to the Tower to be with her husband.

Frank maintained the same stoical demeanor that has characterized him since the day of his arrest. His remarks to the Court, when asked if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon him, were brief, but where marked by the same touch of eloquence that rendered so dramatic his statement to the court on the occasion of his last sentence. As he spoke, he looked squarely into the face of Judge Hill, enunciating every word clearly and distinctly. When he finished speaking, he calmly bowed and awaited the final decree of the court. The only indication of the stress Frank must have been under was the extreme pallor of his face. His statement to the court was as follows:

"May it please your Honor: Again I stand before you. Again I can but reiterate that I am innocent of the murder of Mary Phagan. I have absolutely no guilty knowledge of that tragic occurrence.

"I am innocent of this charge, and I assert that the record of the evidence conclusively proves this. No appellate tribunal has ever passed upon this evidence. The only Judge who has ever heard it stated that he had the most serious doubts as to my guilt.

"My execution will not avenge Mary Phagan's death. A life will have been taken for a life, but the real culprit will not have paid the penalty. I will suffer for another's crime.

"My trust is in God, who knows that my protestations of innocence are the truth. At some future date the whole mortal world will realize it. It is the knowledge that God knows it now, and that the world will know it some day, that inspires me as I stand before your Honor and as I face the future."

Several of Frank's lawyers, who had been notified by order of Judge Hill, were in the courtroom. They were Luther Z. Rosser, Reuben R. Arnold, Henry C. Peeples, Harry A. Alexander, and Herbert Haas. No word was said by any of them.

The passing of the sentence was heard by a crowd that packed the courtroom. Sentence was pronounced at 11:35 oclock, but two hours before that time the courtroom was filled and Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner had to close the doors. Many waited outside in the corridors, unable to gain admission.

Frank was taken to the Court House from the Tower in an automobile by Sheriff C. Wheeler Mangum on a writ of habeas corpus, which had been signed by Judge Hill immediately on his arrival at the Court House at 9 o'clock. The prisoner was escorted to Judge Hill's chambers, where he remained until called before the court. Following the sentence he was immediately driven back to the Tower.

At the door of the jail Frank was met by his mother, Mrs. Rhea Frank. He was calm and self-possessed, smoking a cigarette. He gave his mother a brave smile. She put her arms round his neck and kissed him. Then they passed through the iron-barred gate of the jail and were lost to public view.

After his return to jail Frank gave out the following statement to the public:

"Anything else I might say at this time would be but an elaboration of my words to the court. Yet I am fully alive to the fact that my position is most precarious. It is a situation which is far removed from anything that my life and mental attitude could have bespoken. It is hideous, but at the same time so unreal, so incongruous.

"It is fundamental in human life to want to live. This desire to exist is ingrained in all of us; it is the basic morality of all that live. To those who have the proper ideals of living, life without honor is insufferable. This is the message of theology and of ethics. In the light of the whole truth, I know—and the Almighty knows—that the morality of my position in this case is unassailable. This being so, my complete exoneration of this terrible charge lies in the future. When that day arrives, I will be vindicated—and if I am alive, I will be enabled to enjoy freedom and honor.

"Therefore, I want to live The full truth and all of the facts of the case, when they come to light, as some day they will, will prove to the world that my assertion of innocence is the truth.

"The legal arena is closed to me. The bar is placed forever against further legal process. Yet the issue of guilt or innocence has been before but one court, that in which the jury sat. All subsequent appeals were made upon alleged legal and juridic errors; not upon the facts or the evidence. Since the jury heard the case, no court of inquiry or review has sifted the evidence. No decision of any appeals court undertook to predicate an opinion on the record of the testimony and evidence. The doubt of the trial Judge as to my guilt still remains."

The resentencing of Frank marks the final chapter in his court fight for life. There is no further appeal to the court which he can make. His sole remaining hope of escaping the gallows now lies with the State Prison Board and the Governor. Already his attorneys have filed with the Prison Board an application for a commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment. Governor Slaton does not go out of office until Saturday, June 26, four days after the date fixed by Judge Hill for Frank's execution. Therefore, he must pass upon Frank's application for a commutation to life imprisonment or grant him a reprieve.

MAY NOT GET FRANK APPEAL.

Gov. Slaton Says Matter May Be Delayed Till After He Quits Office.

Governor John M. Slaton of Georgia, who is now in New York, in a statement tonight regarding action which he might take in the appeal of attorneys for clemency for Leo M. Frank, said there was a possibility that he might not be called upon to act in the case.

The Board of Prison Commissioners of Georgia who would be called upon to review the case and make recommendations to the Governor, was not now in session, he explained, and would not convene until June 1. His term as Governor expires June 26. It would probably take some time for the board to review the evidence, and their recommendations might not be in before the time for his successor, Judge N. E. Harris, to take office

"Franks attorneys, however," Governor Slaton continued, "may ask the Board of Prison Commissioners to go into extra session to consider the case, and this request may be granted. In that event it is probable that their recommendations may be in my hands in time for me to act before the date set for the execution. If this is not the case it is probable that a stay of execution will be asked that the board may have more time."

SENTENCES THIEF TO MARRY

Judge, After Seeing Fiancee, Sure She Will Punish Him.

Although he had just escaped a term in jail for larceny, one Nicola Chiangone wore an air of gloom and apprehension as he walked out of the County Court in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon. Nicola had been before Judge Dike charged with stealing some jewelry from his fiancée and then jilting her.

"When I allowed you to plead guilty," said Judge Dike to Nicola, "I understood that you intended to marry the girl who was the complaining witness against you. I have seen the girl since then and I have also seen you. I am going to leave your punishment to her. You are going to get all that is coming to you from her—that is, after you marry her. Then you will see the force of those lines of Kipling, 'The female of the species is more deadly than the male.' I am going to let you marry this woman, and may God have mercy on your soul."

Nicola paled and turned away with a low moan. The court directed a probation officer to see to it that the sentence to matrimony was carried out.

Whitehouse are organizing the college section for the suffrage baseball game at the Polo Grounds on Tuesday of next week, when the Giants and Cubs will play.

RAILROADS HIT HARD.

Sixth of Pennsylvania's Income Goes for Taxes.

If every time you earned $100 the tax collector seized $16 of it, you would not only pray for relief, but very likely use some strong language about the system that enforced such a heavy drain upon your purse. To pay out almost one-sixth of your income would appear burdensome and highly inconvenient.

But President Samuel Rea is my authority for saying that the railroads are taxed out of more than 16 per cent. of their net operating revenue. Here in Pennsylvania corporation taxes educate children in the public schools, maintain asylums, endow hospitals, build roads, and pay for nearly all the work of governing 8,000,000 people.

Then soak the corporations some more, you say, and double the donations for all public charities. Sure thing! But don't forget that all the money earned by corporations comes from the public's pocket—can't come from any other source—and that the greater the taxes the larger the earnings must be.

POLICE FIND HEROIN STORE.

Think Stock of Drugs in Warehouse Belongs to Graupner.

Detectives Kirwin and Johnson of Commissioner Woods's drug squad went yesterday afternoon to the Manhattan Storage and Warehouse Company, at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, where they had learned a man who said he was Joseph J. Baron, an art student, had rented a room. According to information which the detectives had received, the man who rented the room was Edward W. Graupner, a druggist, of 700 Second Avenue, who is a prisoner in the Tombs on the charge of violating the anti-drug law.

When Graupner came up for trial yesterday in the Federal court for having opium in his possession the detectives obtained a search order to inspect the warehouse room, which they had reason to believe contained part of Graupner's drug supply. They found in the room a quantity of bottles, bags, and packages, which they took to Police Headquarters.

The contents of the room were examined at Headquarters and a tally showed that they included twenty-five ounces of cocaine, seventy-seven small bottles of heroin tablets, five bags of heroin tablets, twenty quart bottles of heroin, and five pint bottles of heroin.

FRENCH PUSH ON IN ARRAS DRIVE; OFFER ITALY MORE

BRITISH CHECK GAS ATTACKS

Masks Protect Trench Fighters East of Ypres, Who Beat Off Germans with Loss.

GERMAN GAIN NEAR RHEIMS

LONDON, May 11.—The allied offensive against the German lines to the north of Arras is losing none of its momentum. Today, after violent fighting and in the face of a heavy cannonade, the French carried the German trenches guarding the road from Loos to Vermelles, and, further south, took by assault the strongly fortified position on the Lorette heights, of which a big blockhouse and the chapel of Nôtre Dame de Lorette were the key. French gains were also made at Souchez and Carency, the scene of the first successes of the drive which began several days ago.

The British have apparently learned how to defend themselves against the asphyxiating gases used by the Germans. To the east of Ypres, where several attacks were made by the Germans, they employed masks for protection, and their artillery and musketry fire inflicted heavy losses upon the assailants, who advanced in their favorite close formation.

The Belgian troops have been violently assailed north and south of Dixmude, but have beaten off the Germans and gained some ground in the latter quarter.

German official reports insist that the new French attacks north of Arras were failures, but admit that the French maintain their hold on the trenches between Carency and Neuville which they captured at the beginning of the drive.

On the other hand, the Germans captured a line of French trenches about a quarter of a mile long near Berry-au-Bac, to the northwest of Rheims, and report "further progress" east of Ypres.

German Communications Menaced.

The greatest importance is attached to the French operations north of Arras, as they threaten the German lines of communication for the armies of the Oiseand the Aisne. The result of this battle, which doubtless will not be decided for days, is awaited with deep interest.

According to the French report, the Germans, their railway lines having been damaged by allied airmen, have brought up reinforcements by motor cars. These have ben met by the concentrated fire of the French artillery. In fact, the artillery is becoming more and more the determining factor in the war.

Around Ypres the Germans, before launching their attacks, which have been delivered on successive days, thoroughly searched the ground with heavy and light guns, subjecting the British to a bombardment such as they themselves received at Neuve Chapelle. Officers and men who have escaped from it say that the trenches were utterly destroyed and the ground churned up by the shells.

Nevertheless, the British found some kind of shelter, and when the German infantry tried to advance they were mowed down. There are no signs, however, of the German attacks slackening. The Germans are reported to be concentrating more levies in Belgium, ready to take the place of, or give support to, those now on the firing line. Indeed, many believe that the biggest effort yet undertaken to reach the French coast ports is now under way.

The French official account of the various gains of the Allies is as follows:

(Night Report:) To the north of Dixmude the Belgian troops, who have succeeded in throwing up a bridge head on the right bank of the Yser, were subjected to violent attacks by three German battalions last night. The Belgians repulsed these, inflicting on the enemy heavy losses and taking about fifty prisoners. Another Belgian division has gained ground to the south of Dixmude.

British Repulse Gas Attacks.

To the east of Ypres the British troops have been attacked again with the aid of asphyxiating gases. They allowed the fumes to pass over, under the protection of masks recently put into use, and by rifle and machine-gun fire they annihilated, at the very point of their guns, the German columns which had advanced in close formation.

Our success to the north of Arras was sensibly enlarged today in the course of the fighting. In an engagement of extreme violence in front of Loos we captured, after a desperate struggle and despite an intense cannonade, an important German work connected along the road from Loos to Vermelles.

Further to the south we captured by assault the big blockhouse and the Chapel of Nôtre Dame de Lorette. This position had been vigorously defended for months by the Germans, who had turned it into a veritable fortress. It was surrounded and invested and was taken this afternoon by our troops.

We have, without pause, pursued our success in pressing the enemy energetically between the Chapel of Nôtre Dame de Lorette and Ablain-St. Nazaire. All the German trenches to the south of the chapel have fallen successively into our hands, and in them we found several hundred dead bodies.

The Germans debouching from

ZEPPELINS EXPECTED; LIGHTS OUT IN PARIS

Inhabitants, Unruffled, Watch Defending Aeroplanes Manoeuvering Over City.

PARIS, May 11.—The police issued strict orders to all the residents of Paris, at 7:30 o'clock tonight, to extinguish all lights or cover windows with heavy curtains, as the approach of Zeppelin dirigibles had been signalled.

The people did not appear to be in the least afraid, and crowds gathered in all the open places to watch the French aeroplane flotilla performing evolutions. As each aeroplane carried a strong searchlight, the effect was striking, the white path of the light resembling the tail of a comet.

Parisians have christened the aeroplanes, which fly at night, "shooting stars."

A German aeroplane passed over St. Dennis, a suburb of Paris, a little after 7 o'clock this morning and dropped five bombs.

One bomb fell through the roof of an apartment occupied by Mme. Bolleker, bounced from the bed where her 9-year-old son Andre was sleeping, and then struck the floor, where it exploded. Fragments of the bomb slightly wounded the boy.

Another missile on exploding wounded five men who were sleeping in a shed. Two other bombs damaged an apartment house.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) May 11.—The Telegraaf says that two Zeppelins passed over Ameland, an island of The Netherlands in the North Sea, at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

They were traveling westward, in the direction of the English coast, at high speed.

WILDING, TENNIS STAR, KILLED BY THE TURKS

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—Anthony F. Wilding of New Zealand, former lawn tennis champion of Great Britain, and who several times has been a member of the Australasian team in the Davis Cup matches, has been killed in the fighting in the Dardanelles. Mr. Wilding was a Second Lieutenant in the Royal Marines.

Josiah Wedgwood, member of Parliament for Newcastle-under-Lyne, is among the wounded mentioned in the latest casualty list received from the Dardanelles.

Anthony F. Wilding, with Norman E. Brookes, competed in the Davis Cup matches here last year. The two representing Australasia defeated the British team, capturing the trophy after defeating teams representing Canada, Germany, England, and the United States. Wilding, who had defeated McLaughlin in 1913 for the British championship, was defeated by McLaughlin in the final match here after having defeated Williams.

Mr. Wilding was champion of England for several years. He lost the championship last year to Brookes just before he came to this country to compete in the Davis Cup matches.

AMERICANS TORTURED BY MEXICAN TROOPS

Consul Investigating Reported Death of Rancher by Maytorena's Soldiers.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., May 11.—Frederick Simrich, United States Consul at Nogales, today began investigating a report that Clarence Fisher, foreman of a ranch near Saric, Sonora, had been tortured to death by troops serving under Governor Jose Maytorena.

Fisher was first arrested two months ago, but was released. Subsequently a soldier was killed and Fisher was accused of the murder. Ten days ago, it is alleged, Fisher was hanged to a tree, being jerked up and down until he pleaded to be shot.

DID NOT BAR HUERTA.

Spanish Government Denies Statement Made by Blanco.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Spanish Government did not ask General Victoriano Huerta to leave Spanish territory, had nothing to do with his recent departure from that country to the United States, and has imposed no restrictions whatever on his coming or going to or from Spain. This statement is made at the request of Señor Don Juan Riano Gayangos, the Spanish Ambassador to the United States. The denial thus given was made by Señor Riano under instructions from the Spanish Government.

Señor Riano tonight explained that the denial was based on the statement given out last Friday in New York by the Mexican Bureau of Information and published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on May 8. According to that statement, the assertion that General Huerta was compelled to leave Spain was founded upon a version given by Señor Pedro Gonzales Blanco, a Spanish author visiting New York.

Senor Enrique C. Llorente, confidential agent here for the Villa movement, announced today that he had received a telegram from General Villa that he has engaged General Obregon south of Leon and destroyed the latter's left wing. This, however, was denied in a statement issued by the Carranza agency tonight.

TO REOPEN PLANT FOR WAR.

American Locomotive Co. Will Make Fuseheads at Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 11.—The American Locomotive Company announced tonight its intention of reopening the plant in this city which has been idle since the discontinuance of the manufacture of automobiles, two years ago.

The company is to employ at least 1,000 hands in the manufacture of brass fuseheads for shrapnel.

RECRUITING MAY BE HALTED

Report That It Will Be Opposed if Appeal for Internment of Germans Is Denied.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—Widespread disturbances occurred in the East End last night as a result of public anger caused by the Lusitania crime. They took form of demonstrations against German shopkeepers, and in certain districts it seemed there was hardly a shop which bore above its windows a name suspected of Teutonic origin that escaped unscathed.

Large and boisterous crowds collected in Poular and Limehouse and overran these houses and shops. They smashed every bit of glass and furniture, chased suspected aliens as terrier chase rabbits, and injured several policemen who tried to stem their progress. Poplar has seen many lively nights, but few which exceeded this in excitement.

The trouble began in earnest in Blair Street and North Street, minor thoroughfares off East India Road, when children came out of school. They began collecting and jeering outside various shops. One shop in Blair Street owned by a man named Katstergger came in for early attention, and soon there were stones flying about briskly.

Boy Scouts In Action.

Then a detachment of boy scouts came unofficially into action for the first time in their history. Shop windows were soon smashed with bricks and scout poles, and the first two casualties were slight wounds on their heads suffered by two lads who were in the thick of the fray. One boy was hurt with flying glass, and it was alleged that a chopper was thrown at the other by a woman who lived in the house.

It is certain that a woman bolted out of the shop and ran to an adjacent house, chased by an angry crowd, made up mostly of boys and women. She got in safely but a shower of bricks followed her through the windows.

Meanwhile the crowds had rapidly increased in size. This particular store was a confectioner's. It has been entered, and all the fittings had been torn away. The contents were thrown into the street, and the whole place was completely stripped of movables.

There was an exciting affray at the end of Upper North Street in Poplar, where an angry crowd attacked the shop of a man named Kessler. First came a hail of stones and brickbats with an overture of hoots and catcalls. When all the glass had been scattered on the pavement a rush was made for the interior.

Four policemen stood on the pavement and tried to force the crowd back. They at length arrested one man who seemed to be particularly aggressive and tapped him briskly over the head to stop his resistance. A constable attempted to march him off. This made the crowd thoroughly angry.

Woman Attacks Policeman.

"You call yourself an Englishman," crlew one brawny wife. "Why, you're a 'un yourself," and with that she threw her whole considerable weight at the officer and attacked him with Amazonian ferocity.

His colleagues who went to his rescue were quickly overpowered, and all of them were rather badly handled. Three of them were taken to a police station in East India Road, where they were treated by a divisional surgeon. Two had stone cuts on the head and one was treated for a bad kick in the abdomen.

With Kessler's house unprotected the crowd became very busy. Women, men, and, of course, boys swarmed over one another through the premises. Loaves of bread, cream cakes, and jam rolls came flying out, and many of these sticky souvenirs followed the police to the station. Afterward furniture was carried out into the streets, not only chairs and tables, but sofas and a piano, with carpets, pictures, and much crockery. One lad in smashing an electric light globe received a bad shock which put him out of action for several minutes.

This scene was repeated time and again throughout the district. Crowds in other places failed to appreciate the phonetic difference between the patronymics of Jews and Germans.

Secretary in Queenstown Investigating Persistent Rumors Current There.

QUEENSTOWN, Wednesday, May 12.—There is a persistent rumor current here that Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's body has been recovered on the Irish coast.

CUNARD CO. CANCELS MAURETANIA'S SAILING

Lusitania's Sister Ship Withdrawn From Service to New York Advertised for May 29.

LONDON, May 11.—The sailing of the Cunard Line steamer Mauretania, sister ship of the Lusitania, advertised for May 29, has been canceled.

The steamship Mauretania recently had been doing duty as an auxiliary cruiser in the British Navy, and it also has been reported that she had been used as a transport for troops.

It had been the intention of the Cunard Line to have the vessel resume her regular passenger trade between New York and Liverpool at the end of the present month, when she was to begin a fortnightly service across the Atlantic, alternating with the Lusitania.

The New York agents of the Cunard Line said last night that no word had been received from the head office in Liverpool regarding the cancellation of the Mauretania's sailing on May 29 for New York. Until a change is made the schedule of their sailings from New York remain unchanged, it was said. This calls for the Orduna to sail on May 18, the Tuscania on May 21, and the Mauretania on June 4.

The Cunard Line and the Anchor Line, which are under the same management, are left with only three steamers in the transatlantic service by the sinking of the Lusitania and the cancellation of the Mauretania's sailing. These are the Orduna, due here May 13 or 14; the Tuscania, which sailed from Liverpool May 9, and should reach here May 16 or 17, and the Transylvania, which sailed from New York last Saturday.

LINER'S QUICK SINKING SURPRISES GERMANS

Berlin Naval Experts Think Ammunition Must Have Exploded on Lusitania.

BERLIN, (via London,) May 11.—German naval circles express surprise at the rapidity with which the steamer Lusitania sank. They assumed that a vessel of modern construction and with air-tight compartments arranged as the Lusitania's were, should have kept afloat three or four hours, and given time for the saving of all the passengers on board.

Some of the naval experts express the opinion that the rapid sinking of the vessel was due to an explosion of ammunition in her cargo.

WHAT BONAR LAW SAID.

"Momentary Interest," Not "Monetary," His Remark About Us.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 11.—In the early reports of Bonar Law's speech yesterday he was quoted by a stenographic or telegraphic error as saying he felt sure America would be guided in her action regarding the Lusitania, "not merely by monetary interest." The word which Mr. Law used was "momentary," and later editions of the evening newspapers yesterday and all of today's newspapers printed the correct quotation.

In view of the bare possibility that the original misquotation may have reached America Bonar Law requests THE NEW YORK TIMES to make it absolutely clear that he never for a moment entertained such a thought of America's attitude as the use of the word "monetary" might suggest.

"I spoke of momentary interest," he said, "with reference to the country's own domestic politics. The suggestion that for one second America would be influenced by financial consideration would be a manevolent slander."

MALONE WARNS SHIP MEN.

Insists They Must Show Signals on Leaving This Port.

Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port, issued a notice last night calling the attention of shipmasters to the fact that all outward bound vessels must display their signals on passing the Narrows or the Sound. They must stop on order from the officer of the guard ship and wait for his signal of three blasts or the flag signal T X B to proceed.

The Collector issued the reminder because the commander of the U. S. S. Dolphin, on guard at the Narrows, had reported that several of the Captains of coastwise steamships were neglecting to obey the instructions regarding the neutrality of the Port of New York.

FOOD EMBARGO NOT THEN ON

Only the Wilhelmina, It Asserts, Had Been Held Up—Germans Sank Vessels Before That.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—Inquiry in official circles elicited last night the following statement, representing the official British view of Germany's justification for torpedoing the Lusitania which Berlin transmitted to the State Department at Washington:

"The German Government states that responsibility for the loss of the Lusitania rests with the British Government, which through their plan of starving the civil population of Germany has forced Germany to resort to retaliatory measures. The reply to this is as follows:

"As far back as last [illegible] miral von Tirpitz (the German Marine Minister) in an interview foreshadowed a submarine blockade of Great Britain, and a merchant ship and a hospital ship were torpedoed Jan. 30 and Feb. 1, respectively.

"The German Government on Feb. 4 declared their intention of instituting a general submarine blockade of Great Britain and Ireland, with the avowed purpose of cutting off supplies for these islands. This blockade was put into effect Feb. 18.

"As already stated, merchant vessels had, as a matter of fact, been sunk by a German submarine at the end of January. Before Feb. 4 no vessel carrying food supplies for Germany had been held up by his Majesty's Government, except on the ground that there was reason to believe the foodstuffs were intended for use of the armed forces of the enemy or the enemy Government.

The Wilhelmina Case.

"His Majesty's Government had, however, informed the State Department on Jan. 29 that they felt bound to place in a prize court the foodstuffs of the steamer Wilhelmina, which was going to a German port, in view of the Government control of foodstuffs in Germany, as being destined for the enemy Government, and, therefore, liable to capture.

"The decision of his Majesty's Government to carry out the measures laid down by the Order in Council was due to the action of the German Government in insisting on their submarine blockade.

"This, added to other infractions of international law by Germany, led to British reprisals, which differ from the German action in that his Majesty's Government scrupulously respect the lives of non-combatants traveling in merchant vessels, and do not even enforce the recognized penalty of confiscation for a breach of the blockade, whereas the German policy is to sink enemy or neutral vessels at sight, with total disregard for the lives of non-combatants and the property of neutrals.

As To British Reprisals.

"The Germans state that, in spite of their offer to stop their submarine war in case the starvation plan was given up, Great Britain has taken even more stringent blockade measures. The answer to this is as follows:

"It was not understood from the reply of the German Government that they were prepared to abandon the principle of sinking British vessels by submarine.

"They have refused to abandon the use of mines for offensive purposes on the high seas on any condition. They have committed various other infractions of international law, such as strewing the high seas and trade routes with mines, and British and neutral vessels will continue to run danger from this course, whether Ger-

Germany Now Says Neutral Ships Are Safe; To Be Dealt With Under International Rules

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Secretary Bryan received from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin today the text of an official declaration by the German Government of its policy with respect to American and other neutral ships meeting German submarines in the naval war zone around the British Isles and in the North Sea. This declaration was handed to Mr. Gerard by the German Foreign Office, which explained that it was being issued as a "circular statement" in regard to "mistaken attacks by German submarines on commerce vessels of neutral nations." It reads:

First—The Imperial German Government has naturally no intention of causing to be attacked by submarines or aircraft such neutral ships of commerce in the zone of naval warfare, more definitely described in the notice of the German Admiralty staff of Feb. 4 last, as have been guilty of no hostile act. On the contrary, the most definite instructions have repeatedly been issued to German war vessels to avoid attacks on such ships under all circumstances. Even when such ships have contraband of war on board they are dealt with by submarines solely according to the rules of international law applying to prize warfare.

Second—Should a neutral ship nevertheless come to harm through German submarines or aircraft on account of an unfortunate (X) [mistake?] in the above mentioned zone of naval warfare, the German Government will unreservedly recognize its responsibility therefor. In such a case it will express its regrets and afford damages without first instituting a prize court action.

Third—It is the custom of the German Government as soon as the sinking of a neutral ship in the above mentioned zone of naval warfare is ascribed to German war vessels to institute an immediate investigation into the cause. If grounds appear thereby to be given for association of such a hypothesis, the German Navy places itself in communication with the interested neutral Government so that the latter may also institute an investigation. If the German Government is thereby convinced that the ship has been destroyed by Germany's war vessels it will not delay in carrying out the provisions of Paragraph 2 above. In case the German Government, contrary to the viewpoint of the neutral Government, is not convinced by the result of the investigation, the German Government has already on several occasions declared itself ready to allow the question to be decided by an international investigation commission, according to Chapter 3 of The Hague Convention of Oct. 18, 1907, for the peaceful solution of international disputes.

This circular is understood to have been rather reassuring to high officials of the United States Government, although it is far from complete, as it does not cover the attitude of the German Government toward the treatment to be accorded to Americans and other neutral non-combatants, men, women, and children, on board vessels flying the flag of England, France, or Russia. The absence of any allusion to the principle involved in the Lusitania case is believed here to mean [illegible] of the Lusitania on Friday. Several days usually have been required for messages to come to Washington from Ambassador Gerard, by roundabout cable relay route, and it is believed that this dispatch is no exception in this respect.

AMERICAN LINE BARS WAR GOODS

Officials Announce That No Contraband Freight Will Be Accepted.

WAR ZONE SAFETY MOVE

Passengers' Automobiles Refused—No Hint from Washington to Appease Germans.

The International Mercantile Marine Company announced yesterday from its offices in this city that in future no contraband of war would be carried on the steamships of the American Line plying between New York and Liverpool. The prohibition even included automobiles belonging to passengers, it was said.

Officials of the line thought it expedient yesterday to make this announcement because after the sinking of the Cunarder Lusitania the report spread that the vessels of the International Mercantile Marine, flying the American flag, were also carrying munitions of war and other supplies which would lay them open to attack by German submarines.

The American Line is part of the International Mercantile Marine, a majority of whose steamers fly the British flag. Since the beginning of hostilities the American Line has gained popularity in the passenger-carrying trade. P. A. S. Franklin, Vice President of the International Mercantile Marine, said yesterday that the American liners had been exclusively used for the carrying of passengers and express freight between this port and Liverpool. The vessels under the British flag had been doing the principal freight carrying.

In making the announcement yesterday a representative of the line said that it was in no sense either an acknowledgement of the effectiveness of German submarines in the so-called war zone, nor was it the result of any order, or hint, from Washington.

The line does not expect German attacks, but all precautions are being taken. The vessels are plainly marked for identification, and there can be no mistaking by the commander of a German submarine as to what the ships are, as they bear the name of the American Line painted on their sides in letters five feet high.

Mr. Franklin said that contraband had not been carried under the American flag since the conflict began last August.

"These liners carry about 1,000 tons of express freight which consists principally of fruit, vegetables, and chilled beef," he said. "This sort of freight takes fast steamers and refrigerator care. The announcement that we will not carry contraband was made public

League Wants Wilson to Call Extra Session of Congress to Provide for a Mighty Fleet.

BIG BOND ISSUE DEMANDED

No Thought of Entering Into War if National Defense Is Adequately Strengthened.

The Navy League of the United States, of which General Horace Porter is President, and which includes in its membership Herbert L. Satterlee, George von L. Meyer, Beckman Wintbrop, J. Pierpont Morgan, Governor Emmet O'Neal of Alabama, Senator James D. Phelan of California, Cardinal Gibbons, Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Edward T. Stotesbury, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Joseph H. Choate, George B. Cortelyou, C. Oliver Iselin, Seth Low, Myron T. Herrick, Alton B. Parker, and scores of other men prominent in the public and business life of the country, through its Executive Committee adopted a resolution yesterday calling upon President Wilson to call Congress in extra session to authorize a bond issue of $500,000,000, which sum, it is stated, is "needed to provide this country with adequate means of naval defense."

The resolution, which was adopted at a session at which members of the Executive Committee consulted by long-distance telephone, some of them being in Washington and others in New York at the Union League Club, read:

In view of the crisis in our foreign relations, we, as representatives of the Navy League of the United States, express our emphatic belief that Congress should be immediately assembled and that measures should be taken at once to strengthen our national defense. Our most pacific country should, because of its supreme love of peace, possess preponderant naval strength and adequate military strength. A large bond issue of, if necessary, $500,000,000 should be authorized at once. These bonds would be rapidly absorbed by the American people for such a purpose. Equipped with a mighty fleet, American life and American rights would be scrupulously respected by all belligerents. In such case there would be no thought of our entering into war.

WILSON TAKES FIRM STAND

Will Sum Up All Attacks Involving American Lines and Ships.

CABINET BACKS HIM UP

Unanimous Approval of the Draft of Message He Read to Them Yesterday.

INSIST THAT BERLIN EXPLAIN

Lusitania, Falaba, Gulflight, Cushing, and Frye Cases All Included.

WARNING NO JUSTIFICATION

Destruction of Lives Not to be Excused Because Passengers Were Told of Danger.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Wilson had practically decided tonight on the first step in the policy which the United States Government would pursue as a result of the sinking of the British liner Lusitania, with the loss of more than 100 American lives.

The President will act promptly—within another day or two. A draft of a communication to be sent to Germany was submitted to the Cabinet today and approved unanimously.

While no official announcement was made, it was learned that the United States would present and insist upon an explanation of the series of incidents which have occurred since the proclamation of a war zone around the British Isles—the sinking of the Falaba, causing the death of Leon C. Thrasher, an American citizen; the attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing, the torpedoing of the American steamer Gulflight, and finally the destruction without warning of the Lusitania, with a toll of more than 1,000 lives.

Firm Demand To Germany.

In what are described by those familiar with the document as firm and unmistakable terms the President voices the intense feeling of the United States over these happenings, and in the name of international law demands an adherence by Germany to the established rules of maritime warfare. The note asks that some assurance or guarantee be given hereafter that unarmed merchant vessels carrying non-combatants be visited and searched when encountered on the high seas by the German Navy, and passengers and crew transferred to a place of safety before any prize is destroyed.

The President points out, it is understood, that the United States in its note which said Germany would be held to strict accountability for any attacks on American vessels or lives, had not admitted any right on the part of Germany to carry on such methods of warfare, and declares, moreover, that the giving of official notice of an intention to commit an unjustifiable act did not justify the act nor make it lawful.

If Germany Refuses.

What will follow in the event of a refusal by Germany to comply with the expressed wishes of the note, about to be sent, no one of the President's official family would predict. They said the President was determined to act firmly and deal with each situation as it arose. It was pointed out, too, that in his speech at Philadelphia in reference to peace, Mr. Wilson was expressing merely an ideal that he wished America could and would follow.

Persons familiar with the President's point of view indicated, however, that he was by no means unprepared for or unaware of the possible eventualities of the present crisis, and knew that circumstances and events over which the United States might have no control might make vigorous action necessary.

Ignore German Circular.

The circular from the German Government to neutral countries assuming responsibility and promising reparation for any damage in the war zone to neutral vessels, will not affect the determined course of the President. It was considered by the Cabinet today, but high officials later pointed out that there was no guarantee in it that the lives of Americans will be safeguarded, as submarines cannot accommodate passengers or crew of the vessels they attack.

CABINET'S LONG SESSION.

No War Unless Germany Wants It, Is the Spirit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Wilson and his Cabinet discussed for nearly three hours today the condition of affairs in the relations of Germany and the United States produced by the destruction of the lives of American men, women, and children in the Lusitania.

While the conclusion was reached that this Government must make vigorous representations to Germany, it was the general agreement that these representations must be of such a character as not to involve the United States in war. If war comes, it must be because Germany and not the United States wants it.

Judged by the understanding reached at the Cabinet meeting, the representations that will be made to the German Government will refer in terms of the severest condemnation to the destruction of the Lusitania. President Wilson himself will draft the important communication, which, according to predictions, will fully satisfy indignant public sentiment in the United States. There was divergence of opinion shown at the meeting as to the proper course to pursue, but in the end the view prevailed that only vigorous language addressed to Germany would meet the situation.

Views of the Cabinet.

While on the first of the points enumerated below the opinion of the Cabinet was unanimous, there were some differences as to the exactness of the others, but generally it may be said that the following conclusions were reached:

1. That the American people did not want war with Germany on account of the Lusitania incident.

2. That although not bellicose, the American people demanded vigorous treatmentof the matter ,and would not be satisfied if the Government failed to warn Germany thatthe killing of American citizens on the high seas was likely, if continued, to lead to trouble with the United States, and if the Government failed to insist on assurances that such horrors as that of the Lusitania would not be repeated in the case of any ship carrying American passengers.

3. That the United States is morally bound to live up to the declaration in its note of Feb. 10 that it "would be constrained to hold the Imperial Government of Germany to strict accountability for such acts of their naval authorities and to take any steps it might be necessary to take to safeguard American lives and property and to secure to American citizens the full enjoyment of their acknowledged rights on the high seas."

4. That ample reparation for the deaths of Americans in the Lusitania disaster should be demanded.

5. That any representations made to Germany should be couched in such terms that they would furnish no reasonable excuse for Germany to engage in war with this Government.

6. That suggestions that the United States should break off diplomatic relations with Germany or engage in measures of reprisal for the Lusitania incident, such as the seizure of German national and merchant ships now in American ports would be likely to lead to war and were therefore not to be adopted.

Perils To Passengers.

The discussion at the Cabinet meeting took a wide range. The serious problem confronting the Government was considered from many angles. It is understood that some members were in favor of a policy that would in a measure recognize the German contention that neutrals should not take passage on ships loaded with ammunition, but it is said that the argument along this line was not based on the claim that Germany's contention was sound international law. Rather, the suggestion of the adherence to the German view was founded on the opinion that at this time, when the German Government and people are at white heat over the British starving-out policy, it would be useless to attempt to persuade them to abandon the submarine warfare against merchant ships, and coupled with a warning to Americans not to take passage on belligerent vessels, it might be better to acquiesce in the present condition of affairs, with the object of obtaining an international agreement after the war for ameliorating the horrors of warfare.

Opposition To War.

It was not disclosed definitely whether the Cabinet, at the beginning of the long session, was unanimously of the opinion that the American people did not want war with Germany, but it asw gathered that such was the case. At any rate, the consideration of measures that should be adopted by the Government in meeting the situation, caused by the Lusitania's sinking, proceeded along the lines of an understanding that the country was opposed to a resort to hostilities.

From what can be learned of the trend of sentiment in the meeting, however, the President and his advisers found themselves confronted by the words "strict accountability," used in the note of Feb. 10, protesting against the implied threat of Germany that the submarine warfare declared in the war zone order might be applied to American merchant ships venturing into the war zone. It has been contended that these words should be construed as applying only to holding German to a strict accountability for sinking American merchant ships, and not for the loss of American lives through the sinking of merchant ships of Germany's enemies. But it is understood that in the Cabinet meeting the discussion of this phase of the subject proceeded on the fundamental principle that the American warning was to be interpreted as applying to the destruction of American life on the high seas through the sinking of merchant craft flying the flag of Great Britain or any of her allies.

Germany Must Show Its Hand.

The representations to be made in the American note will be of such a character, it is understood, that they will afford the foundation for exchanges conducted in a friendly spirit, and will not provide the groundwork for an excuse on the part of Germany to adopt a belligerent attitude toward the United States. The idea prevailed throughout the Cabinet discussion today that there must be no act of this Government which could be interpreted by Germany as a virtual declaration of war. The first move of a hostile nature must come from Germany, which, in the event of such a move, would be placed in the position of being bent on war with this Government.

That part of President Wilson's speech at Philadelphia last night, in which he referred to "a man being too proud to fight," and made the declaration that the example of America must be the example of peace, "because it will not fight," was interpreted here as meaning that in no circumstances would this Government permit its indignation over the Lusitania incident to lead to war with Germany. T here was considerable surprise, therefore, when President Wilson told callers today prior to the Cabinet meeting, that in his remarks at Philadelphia he was merely expressing a personal attitude, and did not really have in mind any specific thing. He did not regard the Philadelphia meeting, he said, as a proper occasion to give any intimation of policy on any special matter.

The President told his callers that he had nothing to add to what he had said in Philadelphia last night. In making his remarks about peace, he said, he was not thinking of our policy in any public matter. He was thinking wholly of the people he was addressing and of "the Cain" some people had been trying to raise. This remark of the President was interpreted to apply to Colonel Roosevelt's utterances on the Lusitania disaster.

When the President was asked if anything had been done in the way of communicating with Germany concerning recent events, he said he would have nothing to say on that subject until he spoke finally. A decision as to the Government's general policy might be expected, the President indicated, just as soon as it was possible to be sure that he had all the elements in mind.

Germany's Regrets.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, called at the State Department today and presented a copy of the German note given out in Berlin yesterday and published in American newspapers, expressing regret of the Berlin Government over the loss of American lives in the Lusitania, and declaring that the responsibility for the deaths of Americans rested with the British Government.

The State Department also received a communication from James Gerard, the American Ambassador at Berlin, containing a text of a statement of the German Government which told of instructions to German naval commanders to exercise the greatest care in acting under the war zone order so as to avoid injury to any American merchant ship. This circular statement is contained in another Washington dispatch to THE TIMES. While it is believed here that the statement was prepared by the German Government prior to the Lusitania disaster, its presentation was accepted in some Administration quarters as a sign of a desire on Germany's part to mollify indignant American public sentiment over the sinking of the Lusitania.

For the first time since he received news that the Lusitania had been sunk by a German submarine, President Wilson received callers today. Among those who saw him was Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. The Lusitania disaster was discussed, but when he left the White House Mr. Stone said he did not know what the President's plans were with reference to the incident. It was the President's problem, Senator Stone said, and it was useless for others to advise him. After talking with the President, Mr. Stone repeated what he had said since the Lusitania went down, that he had no expectation that an extra session of Congress would be called.

Lo Follette Opposes War.

Another White House caller was Senator La ollette of Wisconsin. He let it be known that he told President Wilson that he stood firm for peace. "I want the United tates to take a firm stand," said Mr. La oFllette, "but I am opposed to war."

Long telegrams concerning the Lusitania disaster continue to pour on the White House. The general tone of these, it is said, was favorable to a peaceful solution of the situation, although the President is urged by many of un his unofficial advisers to act with firmness. These telegrams are arriving in such great number that three telegraph operators at the hite House are kept busy night and day receiving them.

WOULD SILENCE DERNBURG.

Government Officials Find Danger in His Propaganda Just Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Rumors that the United States Government intended to take measures to prevent Dr. Bernard Dernburg, former German Colonial Minister, from continuing his pro-German propaganda in this country were courrent here today, but were not confirmed.

The Government would be greatly pleased if some means could be found to curtail Dr. Dernburg's talking, but it finds certain obstacles in the way of accomplishing what it desires. One of these obstacles is that Dr. Dernburg has no official status in the United States as far the Government knows, and officials have indicated that on that account the Government could take no action in connection with his utterances. Another is that at this critical period in the relations of Germany and the United States the Government is anxious to avoid taking any step that might aggravate the situation.

At the same time intense indignation pervades Government circles over the things that Dr. Dernburg has been saying. His statement justifying the sinking of the Lusitania has aroused much feeling. This feeling is of such a character that the Government, it is believed, would welcome some opportunity to suggest to the German Government that Dr. Dernburg should be told to withhold comment on matters of serious concern to the United States growing out of the European war, or be instructed to leave this country.

The fear is prevalent here that Dr. Dernburg's references to the Lusitania disaster may, if continued, arouse the American public to a high pitch of anger and hamper the Administration in its efforts to adjust its differences with Germany in a peaceable manner.

CROWDS SCAN THE FACES

Mournful Spectacle Repeated as Bodies of Women and Children Are Brought Ashore.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

QUEENSTOWN, May 11.—The bodies of sixteen victims of the Lusitania disaster were brought in today on the Dutch tug which went out yesterday afternoon to search about the spot where the Lusitania was sunk. A small group of people formed a reverent guard about the gangway over which the rough seamen tenderly carried the sad cargo they had brought. A pale, weeping Sister of Mercy was among the waiting through. There were soldiers and sailors and a few who traveed to Queenstown to ook for reatives and who momentarly ganced upon the faces of the dead as they were brought up from the ship.

Three women were borne out, fully clad—one elderly, with gray hair; another upon whose left hand was a wedding ring, and a third, who was young and wore no rings. There were two other women and nine men. One wore his wedding ring and across his waistcoat there was a heavy gold watch chain. Afterward three sailors followed quickly, each bearing a child in his arms—two little girls, with straight, sea washed hair, and a little lad, whose fair hair still clung in short curls about his face. He was wearing a cream combination suit of knitted wool, such as little boys go to bed in.

One or the children has been identified as Bessie Bretherton, whose mother was a survivor of the disaster and left for her home in England after giving up all hope of the little girl's being saved. One of the women is Miss Ella Woods Lawrence, who was travelling from Winnipeg along with Mrs. Burke of New York, both having volunteered for services under the Serbian Red Cross. The tug also picked up a wicker chair and wicker lounge, which were found floating.

As the last child was carried ashore there was issuing the gateway on the wharf a coffin, covered with a Belgian flag, borne upon a cart, behind which walked four Belgians with bared heads. They had been to claim the body of Mme. de Page, who was sailing on the Lusitania from America, where she had been on a mission for the Red cross Society of her land. I heard an American doctor who was aboard say last night that Mme. de Page, even after the ship was obviously sinking, was calmly bandaging the injured hand of a friend.

The Lusitania survivors who have sufficiently recovered to resume their journey generally carry some relic. Often it is a lifebelt to which they owe their lives. I asked an American, who was limping in his shirt and trousers to the railway station with a lifebelt slung on his back whether he meant to keep the bulky memento, "you bet," he said. "It saved me, and I'll stick to it."

Among those who left Queenstown today was Lady Allen, who is still suffering and was taken to a hospital in Dublin.

Found Twenty Miles Away.

QUEENSTOWN, May 11.—The identification of ten of the sixteen dead picked up during the night by the Dutch tug Poolzee, chartered by the Cunard Company, twenty miles west of the spot where the Lusitania was sunk, was the only incident of the day tending to relieve the depressing routine. Queenstown is silently busy preparing to remove the bodies recovered up to the present. Among the sixteen dead brought in by the tug only two were the bodies of Americans—Mrs. Edward Mason of Boston and Mrs. Delia Condon, wife of Terence Condon of New York. The American Consul claimed both and will send them to the United States.

Ten bodies from Baltimore and two from Castletownsend were expected to arrive at Queenstown this afternoon on the tug Flying Fox, but an obdurate Coroner insisted on a formal inquest before releasing them, and it was doubtful tonight when the bodies would reach here.

At this delay, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's English secretary, Webb Wade, entered a vigorous protest, saying he would motor to Baltimore, if he could expedite matters, yet he hesitated to take the trip, fearing to pass the bodies, which might be started for Queenstown at any moment.

There is considerable indignation among some of the survivors, who say that full measures to recover the floating dead have not been adopted, but the Cunard officails assert that it is almost impossible to charter tugs or other craft, as all of them have been commandeered by the British Admiralty. The tug Poolzee was found in this harbor only by chance.

There are plenty of British war craft available for the search, but it is considered that this would be inviting submarine attacks to cruise around the scene of the disaster.

The Poolzee went as far south as Cape Clear and brought back quantities of the Lusitania's lighter deck furniture. A misty rain was falling when the tug landed the dead. A small crowd stood uncovered as the bodies were carried into the Cunard offices. Three small children, only one of whom had been identified tonight, brought home the horror more than anything else. All three were found floating without life belts.

Ten Bodies at Baltimore.

The number of bodies of victims of the torpedoing of the Lusitania at Baltimore, a small seaport on the southern Irish coast, was increased this morning to ten. Two other bodies have been brought ashore at Castletownsend, near Baltimore. Of the bodies at Baltimore, six are of men and four of women.

The Cunard Line today dispatched a tug to Baltimore to bring all twelve bodies to Queenstown. Relatives of survivors who had planned to leave today are going to remain over, in the hope of the possibility of making further identifications. It is reported here that one of the bodies at Baltimore had on it papers bearing the name of Harrison, Main Street, Bridgeport, Conn., and that on another there was found the circular of a firm called Florence & Co., brush manufacturers in Connecticut. The tug dispatched yesterday evening by the Cunard Company to the scene of the disaster to look for bodies had not returned to Queenstown up to noon today.

The body of Albert Thompson of Toronto, brought in by an Admiralty trawler last night, was found drifing with wreckage near the coast not far from the scene of the Lusitania disaster, which leads to the hope that additional bodies may be found in that vicinity. Seven unidentified bodies also were landed at Baltimore, forty-seven miles southwest of Cork, but the weather conditions are such it is not considered probable many more will be found in that immediate vicinity, and all hope of finding further survivors now has been abandoned.

A current of from two and one-half to three knots races around Old Head Kinsale, and this has been augmented by a stiff east wind, which at the end of eight or nine days may carry bodies ashore around Cape Clear on the west Irish coast. The winds ordinarily prevailing would have brought bodies ashore on the Atlantic coast of Cornwall, England.

The Cunard Steamship Company, after much trouble, has sent a tug to the scene of the disaster, with instructions to run into the nearest cove and inform Cunard officials here if even a single body is found.

Bravery of American Men.

There are indications that the heavy death roll among the American men in the first cabin was due to a scarcity of life belts, many of them having given the life preservers they had obtained to helpless women. There is a preponderance of testimony that no American man got into a boat until after he had been thrown into the water.

Webb Wade, secretary of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, has not yet been able to arrange with the authorities to comply with his request that all necessary tugs be chartered at the expense of the Vanderbilt family to search for other bodies as well as that of Mr. Vanderbilt. Until he heard the story of Dr. Owen Kenan of New York, Mr. Wade believed his employer had entered one of the boats published against the side of the ship, but Dr. Kenan's story is so definite it is accepted generally as the correct version of Mr. Vanderbilt's last moments aboard the ship.

When the Lusitania was in her death throes there was no cooler group aboard than that composed of Mme. Marie Depage, Herbert S. Stone, Lindon W. Bates, Jr., and Dr. J. T. Houghton. The last named was the only survivor of the party. This little band guided women and children, supplied life belts, bound up the wounds of other passengers and then plunged hopelessly into the sea, having given up their own life preservers.

Another throng of anxious friends and relatives arrived here last night, but the chances of identifying more of the dead are remote, as the great pits in the cemetery are filled with those buried as unknown, while other bodies which come ashore soon will be beyond identification.

Probably the most unconcerned of the survivors is the eight-months-old son of Mrs. H. Booth. The mother lost her life, but the father has been located at a hotel in Ottawa. The baby was picked up from the water, but apparently is suffering no ill-effects. A number of the survivors recognized the infant, and remembered that the father had remained behind in Canada. An aunt of the infant, who is in England, will take charge of him.

A pathetic case is that of Mollie Mainman, aged 16, and the seven-year-old twins, Elizabeth and Edwin Mainman, who lost their father, A. R. Mainman; their mother, and two brothers. The family was on the way to Chester, England, to take possession of an estate there which had been bequeathed to them. The children were taken in charge by a lawyer.

LONDON, May 11.—Walter H. Page, the American Ambassador, has received a message from Wesley Frost, the American Counsul at Queenstown, urging him to make clear to the Cunard company and to the British Admiralty that "really effective measures to recover the 1,100 missing bodies from the Lusitania are imperative."

In this connection Mr. Page said today that the Embassy was doing everything possible to expedite the recovery of bodies and that he had assurance from the Admiralty and the company that they were doing and would continue to do the same.

The Embassy has taken steps to have the bodies of Americans embalmed, and upon identification it will see that they are returned to America.

CHICAGO GETS MORE NEWS.

Maid Reports "Safe and Well"—Mrs. Willey's Body Identified.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 11.—One message telling of escape came to Chicago people interested in Lusitania passengers today. It read: "Safe and well," and was from Agnes Crosbie, a maid in the home of Ainslie C. Bell of Wilmette. She was one of a party of four girls who went abroad to visit their old homes in Scotland. With the exception of Agnes Smith, employed by Mrs. Bernard Mayer of Glencoe, all of the party are now known to be safe.

A telegram was received by Robert J. Thorne, Vice President og Montgomery, Ward & Co., which said that the body of Mrs. Catherine E. Willey had been identified. The message was from the London office of Swift & Co., and said arrangements were being made to send the body on as soon as necessary formalities were completed.

Mrs. Willey was Mrs. Thorne's mother. She has made her home in Paris for the last six years, but continued to visit her daughter annually at her home in Lake Forest.

Failure to receive any word of Mrs. Charles A. Plamondon caused Chicago relatives to abandon hope that she still was alive. They cling, however, to the hope that her bodyma y be found and identified, and have cabled to Queenstown asking that Mr. Plamondon's body be held one more day before it is sent to America.

ADMITS LOSS OF PRESTIGE.

English Naval Writer Wants More Light from Admiralty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 11.—A. H. Pillen, who is among the most highly considered naval writers here, concludes an article in The Westminster Gazette today on the loss of the Lusitania, wherein he examines the criticisms of the Admiralty:

"The counter campaign of which we have heard so little and hoped so much does seem to have driven the German submarines from the Channel, but nearly thirty of our trawlers have now been sunk in the North Sea and two liners, each exceeding 5,000 tons displacement, were sunk on Friday in addition to the Lusitania.

"The case of the Lusitania makes the efficiency of the defensive campaign something more than a domestic matter. The murder of over 100 Americans, who intrusted their lives to a British ship, may be the last and final blow to Germany's claim to be a civilized country, but it is also a serious blow to British prestige, and we shall await with the utmost anxiety the explanations which the Admiralty and the Cunard Company will offer."

TO MANAGE FROHMAN ESTATE.

London Legal Representative Named to Act Temporarily.

LONDON, May 11.—Westcock Woolridge, legal representative in this country of Charles Frohman of New York, one of the victims of the Lusitania disaster, was appointed receiver and manager of Mr. Frohman's estate by the Chancery Court today on an application made by Dion Boucicault, who is a creditor to the extent of $2,500.

This appointment is made to cover only the period until a personal representative can take charge of the estate, Mr. Frohman having died intestate, according to a statement made to the court.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—Marc Klaw, who arrived today from Honolulu, made this statement concerning the death of Charles Frohman on the Lusitania:

"The loss of Charles Frohman means more to the theatrical profession than can be appreciated for the moment. He was a citizen of the world, possessing all the simplicity of greatness. He had fine ideals. My heart goes outin deep sympathy for the loss sustained by the many to whom he was not merely a manager, but a dear counselor and friend."

MOURN LUSITANIA VICTIM.

Mission Workers Plan Memorial for the Rev. Dr. James A. Beattie.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, May 11.—Six hundred members of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America were in attendance at the annual convention today at the historic First Reformed Church of this city. A touch of sadness prevailed, because Dr. James A. Beattie, one of the missionaries in the Indian field, was lost with the Lusitania. Dr. Beattie and his wife had been on a furlough to this country. The collection at the afternoon session will be given as a memorial to Dr. Beattie. Among the missionaries here today were Mrs. F. Calverly of Arabia, Mrs. Do Pree of China, and Miss Moulton of Japan.

Mrs. David James Burrell, wife of Dr. Burrell of New York, presided and made a plea for the missionary world. Legacies of $1,000 from Mrs. Anton Raven and $600 from Mrs. Abbie J. Bell, both of New York, for missions, were announced. Addresses were made by Mrs. J. Campbell White, former missionary; Mrs. George Sherwood Eddy of New York, and others.

HEARS OF BROTHER'S DEATH.

Mrs. J. F. Fenton Ill from Shock of Loss of George La Page Vernon.

Special to The New York Times.

METUCHEN, N. J., May 11.—Mrs. John F. Fenton, wife of the rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church here, received word this morning that her brother, George La Page Vernon, his arms locked with those of his sister-in-law, Miss Rita Jolivet, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, and Charles Frohman, went into the ocean with them when the Lusitania sank. According to this message received by Mrs. Fenton, her brother was drowned. It was while Vernon stood with his companions that Mr. Frohman said: "Why should one fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life."

Mr. Vernon has an aged mother living in Worcester, Mass., who is unaware of his having sailed. Another brother is the Rev. Theodore Butler of Haddon Heights, N. J. Mrs. Fenton is seriously ill from shock as a result of her brother's death.

A. L. HOPKINS GIVEN UP.

S. M. Knox, Traveling Companion, Reports Safe Arrival in London.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—In a cablegram addressed to his wife, S. M. Knox, President of the New York Shipbuilding Company, who was a passenger on the Lusitania, today informed her of his safe arrival in London.

Albert Lloyd Hopkins, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, was a traveling companion of Mr. Knox. The latter in his message adds these words: "Am convinced Hopkins is lost."

This news would appear to settle the fate of Mr. Hopkins. His name appeared on the steamship passenger list as Arthur Hopkins, but his friends say that this is an error, and that the Hopkins listed is really the Newport News shipbuilder.

R. W. CAIRNS SAVED.

Doubt as to Lusitania Passenger Is Cleared Up.

A cablegram was received at the Cunard offices yesterday announcing that Robert W. Cairns was among the surviving saloon passengers of the Lusitania. This name was received among the other survivors at the offices on Saturday, but owing to the fact that his name was not on the regular list the officials thought an error had been made in transmission and that the name was meant for "Robert W. Crooks."

Since that time many inquiries have been received about the safety of Mr. Cairns, and a message was cabled to Queenstown inquiring as to his identity. The message received yesterday stated that Mr. Cairns had boarded the Lusitania at the last minute and paid his passage to the Purser, so that his name did not appear among those of the saloon passengers.

DREAMED OF THE DISASTER.

Prof. Holborn, Who Escaped, Had Three Visions of Attack on Lusitania.

According to T. A. Shaw, a publisher of 33 Lincoln Terrace, Yonkers, one of the passengers on the Lusitania dreamed that she would be torpedoed and be lost. Mr. Shaw said yesterday that Professor P. B. Stoughton Holborn, an English are lecturer of Oxford University, who had been lecturing in this country for almost a year, had dreamed of the Lusitania's being torpedoed on at least three occasions, but nevertheless he sailed on that ship.

Mr. Shaw received a cablegram yesterday from Professor Holborn saying that he had been rescued and was safe ni England. Professor Holborn had lived at the home of Mr. Shaw up to the time he sailed.

AUSTRALIAN ANGER STIRRED.

Premiers Propose to Try German Naval Heads for Murder.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 11, (via London.) — "The deep indignation felt throughout Australia at the sinking of the Lusitania should find immediate expression in increased participation in the war," was a statement contained in a resolution adopted yesterday at the conference of Australian Premiers.

The conference also agreed to the suggestion of Premier Holman of New South Wales that a recommendation be made to the Imperial Government that Great Britain shall not agree to any peace terms which do not guarantee that officers of the German Admiralty responsible for the orders given to submarines be handed over for trial before British juries, charged with murder on the high seas.

RIOTS IN ENGLAND AGAINST GERMANS

meat traders at Smithfield. The decision applies whether the Germans are naturalized British subjects or not. Large printed cards bearing the words "No business transacted with Germans" have been displayed along avenues of stalls in the market. The question is being dealt with by a committee of traders, one of whom stated yesterday:

Ban On German Traders.

"It was felt we should follow the lead which was given by the Stock Exchange, and the result is that nearly every trader has applied a ban. The only ones who have not yet done so are a few American and Dutch salesmen."

When a few Germans attended at the market yesterday they got such a hostile reception from the porters that they hastily cleared out. The carters are stated to be determined not to deliver meat at shops of Germans.

A similar boycott against alien enemies is in force at Covent Garden Market. One of the leading dealers stated in an interview yesterday:

"We are tolerating no Germans here now. We have not a single German salesman in the market, nor have we any German buyers. They know we would not tolerate them. Every salesman, especially in the fruit market, has been dead against the Germans ever since the war broke out."

The following notice was posted in the Royal Exchange yesterday:

"In view of the terrible atrocities recently perpetrated by Germany, it is especially requested that Austrians and Germans, even if naturalized, will please abstain from being present at meetings held on 'Change Tuesdays and Thursdays."

Last night about 200 members of the Stock Exchange formed in a procession in front of the Royal Exchange and marched via King William Street, London Bridge, and the south side of the Thames to the holses of Parliament to demand the the internment of all Germans. A second procession was piloted by way of the Embankment. There were scenes of great enthusiasm when the object of the procession became known, and all the way to Westminster vast numbers joined in the march, women as well as men taking a prominent part in the ranks.

Official Action Sought.

A lobby correspondent writes that various members who had taken part in meetings went on to the House of Commons at about 8 o'clock. They first asked to see Sir Henry Dalziel, who conferred in the Central Hall with a deputation of four, two of whom were Freemen of the City. They represented that the feeling against aliens was rising fast in the city, and expressed their belief that if something further were not done there would be riot and perhaps murder in London. Very shortly after they asked that every German, Austrian, and other enemy alien, naturalized or otherwise, should be interned for the period of the war.

Some members of the deputation said that unless or until this was done, an attempt would be made to stop recruiting, and that an organization was being formed to advote this, but on this point there was a division of opinion. Sir Henry said he was strongly in favor of stricter measures being taken and believed the Government would be obliged to take this view. He promised to raise the matter on motion for adjournment of the House, according to Exchange members.

A message on the subject is to be brought prominently before the notice of the public. The Lord Mayor, it is said, has offered the use of Mansion House for a public meeting on the subject tomorrow, but protest meetings will probably be held in many parts of London and the city.

Deputation also saw Sir John Simon in his private room and made similar representations to him. It was stated that those who had taken a prominent part in the movement were representatives of the Stock Exchange and the metal, rubber, and timber industries.

Victims of Unjust Attacks.

An aftermath of anti-German rioting in Liverpool which was renewed only to a minor extent yesterday reveals a pathetic side of the outbreak. Several of the victims of the attack and suspicion are now advertising, offering rewards from five to a hundred pounds to any one who can disprove their cleams to British or friendly nationality.

One tradesman, who had three shops attacked, declares he was born in Liverpool and denies any foreign descent or extraction. Another reveals himself as a naturalized Russian, with an English-born wife, while in a third case a woman who has been subjected to annoyance pleads that she is an Irishwoman and the widow of an Italian.

Workmen Oppose Germans.

LONDON, May 11.—Never before since the war began has such a wave of anti-German feeling surged through the country as at present. It is due entirely to the sinking of the Lusitania.

Before the adjournment of the House of Commons this evening, Sir Henry J. Dalziel urged the Government to intern all alien enemies. While Lord Charles Beresford expressed the view that unless some definite policy were adopted, "There would be very serious doings in the country." Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the opposition in the House, also spoke of the seriousness of the situation. H. J. Tennant, Under-Secretary for War, said the matter would be considered by the Cabinet tomorrow and a statement made to the House of Commons Thursday.

Workmen in the industrial district are refusing to labor alongside men of German birth, whether they are naturalized or not. In many towns the premises occupied by Germans have been stoned and damaged or destroyed, and even the Exchanges in London and provincial towns, which hitherto had permitted persons with German blood in their veins to retain their memberships, are taking the drastic step of barring the doors to them, regardless of all considerations.

There have been riots in Liverpool, Manchester, Salford, and Birkenhead. In Liverpool the Germans have been interned, and those who are naturalized subjects of Great Britain have been advised to go to interior towns or seek internment. Many of them have decided upon the latter course.

A demand is being made by the newspapers that all the 25,000 Germans still at large should be treated similarly. This evening deputations from the Stock Exchange, the Baltic Exchange, Lloyd's, and the Corn Exchange, following a meeting on the steps of the Royal Exchange, marched to the House of Commons and presented a petition to the Attorney General which called attention to the "grave danger that exists by allowing alien enemies to remain at large in the country." A public meeting will be held at the Mansion House on the subject of alien enemies. It will be the forerunner of meetings of protest which are to be held all over the country.

An official list posted today on the London Stock Exchange showed that about 600 members of the Exchange would not apply for re-election for the current year. In normal times the Stock Exchange has a membership of 5,000.

MANCHESTER, England, May 11.—Buildings in Manchester and Salford occupied by German firms were attacked by crowds today, and considerable damage was done. At other places workmen refused to accept employment from alien enemies and in consequence some establishments conducted by Germans were closed.

The Directors of the Manchester Stock Exchange asked members of German, Austrian or Turkish birth, whether or not naturalized, to refrain from using the Exchange.

"My doctor, too, advised Sanatogen—"

PERHAPS it came as a surprise when you learned that your friend was a staunch believer in Sanatogen, and that his doctor has recommended it for him, too. You thought yours was an isolated case, perhaps—and instead you found yourself one of the thousands being directed to better digestion, strengthened nerves and reinvigorated energy by the upbuilding and tonic effects of Sanatogen.

But it is not a surprise to us. We know Sanatogen is most—and best—advertised by word of mouth. The use of Sanatogen is spread broadcast by the good it does. Its users are its friends—sincere, enthusiastic, grateful.

Else why should so many famous people—like John Burroughs, Gilbert Parker, Lady Somerset, Colonel Watterson, Rear Admiral Sigsbee, for instance—people whose very names instill confidence—be so willing to tell over their own signatures of the good Sanatogen did them? Why should more than 21,000 physicians write, as they have written, so sincerely, often even enthusiastically of their belief in Sanatogen?

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M.S., Ph.D., the well-known research chemist of New York, writes: "The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with the greatest ease."

But—if you know you need the help that Sanatogen gives—why should you wait for a friend to recommend it to you? Surely the overwhelming testimony in behalf of Sanatogen should convince you that it will help you.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere from $1.00 up.

CROWD AT OFFICE DWINDLES.

Few Ask at Cunard Line for News of Survivors.

Only six persons called at the Cunard office yesterday when the doors opened at 9 o'clock, as it was announced on the previous night there was little hope of any more survivors being picked up along the Irish coast.

The clerks told callers who inquired for news of relatives that no additional names had been received. Inquiries were made for Joseph Levinson, Jr., who was booked from the Hotel Knickerbocker, and who was reported from London among the saved. The Cunard officials said that his name was not on their list of survivors.

ROOSEVELT FOR PROMPT ACTION

Ex-President Says We Must Remember There Are Worse Things Than War.

WHEN PEACE IS WORTHY

Only When It Is the Handmaiden of Righteousness and National Self-Respect.

READS WILSON'S SPEECH

And Says China Is Entitled to Draw All the Comfort She Can from It.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 11.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt announced today what action, in his opinion, this country should take toward Germany because of the sinking of the Lusitania. Colonel Roosevelt earnestly said that the time for deliberation was past, and that within twenty-four hours this country could and should take effective action by declaring that all commerce with Germany forthwith be forbidden and that all commerce of every kind permitted and encouraged with France, England, and "the rest of the civilized world."

Colonel Roosevelt said that for America to take this step would not mean war, as the firm assertion of our rights could not be so construed, but he added that we would do well to remember that there were things worse than war.

The Colonel has been reading President Wilson's speech carefully, and what seemed to impress him more than anything else was this passage from it:

"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

Asked if he cared to make any comment upon the speech of the President, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I think that China is entitled to draw all the comfort she can from this statement, and it would be well for the United States to ponder seriously what the effect upon China has been of managing her foreign affairs during the last fifteen years on the theory thus enunciated.

In China's Position.

"If the United States is satisfied with occupying some time in the future the precise international position that China now occupies, then the United States can afford to act on this theory. But it cannot act on this theory if it desires to retain or regain the position won for it by the men who fought under Washington and by the men who, in the days of Abraham Lincoln, wore the blue under Grant and the gray under Lee.

"I very earnestly hope that we will act promptly. The proper time for deliberation was prior to sending the message that our Government would hold Germany to a strict accountability if it did the things it has now actually done. The 150 babies drowned on the Lusitania; the hundreds of women drowned with them, scores of these women and children being Americans, and the American ship the Gulflight, which was torpedoed, offer an eloquent commentary on the actual working of the theory that force is not necessary to assert and, that a policy of blood and iron can with efficacy be met by a policy of milk and water.

Right to Ship Arms.

"I see it stated in the press dispatches from Washington that Germany now offers to stop the practice on the high seas, committed in violation of the neutral rights that she is pledged to observe, if we will abandon further neutral rights, which by her treaty she has solemnly pledged herself to see that we exercise without molestation. Such a proposal is not even entitled to an answer. The manufacturing and shipment of arms and ammunition to any belligerent is moral or immoral according to the use to which the arms and munitions are to be put. If they are to be used to prevent the redress of the hideous wrongs inflicted on Belgium, then it is immoral to ship them. If they are to be used for the redress of those wrongs and the restoration of Belgium to her deeply wronged and unoffending people, then it is eminently moral to send them.

"Without twenty-four hours' delay this country could and should take effective action by declaring that in view of Germany's murderous offenses against the rights of neutrals, all commerce with Germany shall be forthwith forbidden, and all commerce of every kind permitted and encouraged with France, England, and the rest of the civilized world. This would not be a declaration of war. It would merely prevent munitions of war being sent to a power which, by its conduct, has shown willingness to use munitions to slaughter American men and women and children. I do not believe the assertion of our rights means war, but we will do well to remember there are things worse than war.

"Let us, as a nation, understand that peace is worthy only when it is the handmaiden of international righteousness and of national self-respect."

ROOSEVELT URGES VIGOR.

Failure to Act with Decision Failure of Duty, He Says.

Advance copies of an article entitled, "Murder on the High Seas," written by Theodore Roosevelt on May 9—two days after the sinking of the Lusitania—were given out yesterday at the office of the Metropolitan Magazine, 432 Fourth Avenue. The article, which was not to have appeared until the June number of the magazine, was made public yesterday with Colonel Roosevelt's consent. Here it is:

The German submarines have established no effective blockade of the British and French coast lines. They have endeavored to prevent the access of French, British, and neutral ships to Britain and France by attacks upon them which defy every principle of international law as laid down in innumerable existing treaties, including the Hague Conventions. Many of these attacks have represented pure piracy; and not a few of them have been accompanied by murder on an extended scale. In the case of the Lusitania the scale was so vast that the murder became wholesale.

A number of American ships had already been torpedoed in similar fashion. In one case the lives lost included those not only of the American Captain but of his wife and little daughter. When the Lusitania sank some twelve hundred non-combatants, men, women, and children, were drowned, and more than a hundred of these were Americans. Centuries have passed since any war vessel of a civilized power has shown such ruthless brutality toward non-combatants, and especially toward women and children. The pirates of the Barbary Coast behaved at times in similar fashion, until the civilized nations joined in suppressing them; and the pirates who were outcasts from among these civilized nations also at one time perpetrated similar deeds, until they were sunk or hung. But none of these old-time pirates committed murder on so vast a scale as in the case of the Lusitania.

The day after the tragedy the newspapers reported in one column that in Queenstown there lay by the score the bodies of women and children, some of the dead women still clasping the bodies of the little children they held in their arms when death overwhelmed them. In another column they reported the glee expressed by the Berlin journals at this "great victory of German naval policy." It was a victory over the defenseless and the unoffending, and its signs and trophies were the bodies of the murdered women and children.

Our treaties with Prussia in 1785, 1799, and 1828, still in force in this regard, provide that "if one of the contracting parties should be at war with any other power the free intercourse and commerce of the subjects or citizens of the party remaining neutral with the belligerent powers shall not be interrupted." Germany has treated this treaty as she has treated other "scraps of paper."

But the offense goes far deeper than this. The action of the German submarines in the cases cited can be justified only by a plea which would likewise justify the wholesale poisoning of wells in the path of a hostile army or the shipping of infected rags into the cities of a hostile country; a plea which would justify the torture of prisoners and the reduction of captured women to the slavery of concubinage. Those who advance such a plea will accept but one counter plea—strength, the strength and courage of the just man armed.

When those who guide the military policy of a State hold up to the soldiers of their army, the "Huns," and the terror once caused by the Huns, for their imitation, they thereby render themselves responsible for any Hunnish deed which may follow. The destruction of cities like Louvain and Dinant, the scientific vivisection of Belgium as a warning to other nations, the hideous wrongdoing to civilians, men, women, and children in Belgium and Northern France, in order thereby to terrorize the civilian population—all these deeds and those like them, done on the land, have now been paralleled by what has happened on the sea.

In the teeth of these things, we earn as a nation measureless scorn and contempt if we follow the lead of those who exalt peace above righteousness, if we heed the voice of those feeble folk who bleat to high Heaven that there is peace when there is no peace. For many months our Government has preserved between right and wrong a "neutrality" which would have excited the emulous admiration of Pontius Pilate—the arch-typical neutral of all time. We have urged as a justification for failing to do our duty in Mexico that to do so would benefit "American dollars." Are we now to change faces and advance the supreme interest of "American dollars" as a justification for continuance in the refusal to do the duty imposed on us in connection with the world war?

Unless we act with immediate decision and vigor we shall have failed in the duty demanded by humanity at large and demanded even more clearly by the self-respect of the American Republic.

PARIS ALSO IS WATCHING.

Temps Advises That We at Least Dismiss von Bernstorff.

PARIS, May 11.—While the press continues to display intense interest in the sinking of the Lusitania, discussion in its editorial columns is now turning toward the political side of the tragedy and the probable attitude of President Wilson.

Much curiosity is displayed regarding the decision of the Washington Government. The Matin thinks that the least the United States could do would be to expel the German Ambassador.

DICKINSON FOR ACTION, BUT NO SNAP JUDGMENT

Taft's War Secretary Warns Public Against Preconceived Policies—Trusts Wilson.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Jacob M. Dickinson, Secretary of War under President Taft, issued a statement today in which he said in part:

"I regard the possibilities of the destruction of American lives on the Lusitania as even more momentous to the nation than those involved in our civil war. * * * The outcome of the present condition may involve us in a career in comparison with which, looking to the life of our nation, the possibilities of the civil war were not comparable.

"It is not likely that Germany will disavow the purpose to destroy the Lusitania with full knowledge of the fact that this involved many American lives. In view of the result and the warning given by our Government to Germany, some proper action must be taken, or the American Government will incur the contempt of the world and the contempt of a vast number of its own people.

"What action should be taken should not be declared in advance by those who are not officially responsible to the whole people for the grave results that may follow. It would be unwise to have the public mind committed to particular lines of action before the Administration shall declare its purpose. * * * It is especially important that a period of calmness should intervene in order that our action may not be prompted by excitement and our judgment clouded by passion. In the present inflamed and ferocious state of the German mind, we could easily get into war.

"Some of those who are most forward in urging the Administration to extreme measures may be most backward if a time of great sacrifice shall come. If war comes, it should only be upon the condition that we are clearly in the right.

"I have great confidence in the President, and believe that he not only will sustain our national dignity, but will exhaust all peaceable means, consistent with our national dignity, before committing our country to war."

LONDON INTENT ON OUR DECISION

Deeply Interested in Probable Action on Lusitania, but Loth to Advise or Urge War.

COMMENT ON WILSON TALK

Misunderstood at First, but Now Appreciated—Official's View of How America Could Help.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—British interest in America's course in regard to the Lusitania outrage is universal and intense. Responsible opinion is agreed that not only is America the best judge of her own honor, but also that the United States Government can be relied upon to take the best method of vindicating it.

Discussion of the difficulties which beset President Wilson and speculation as to the action he will take are naturally keen. Equally, naturally, they are not always intelligent. One man in the street may ask why America doesn't declare war upon Germany, and another, with memories of Colonel Roosevelt's phrase, "an invertebrate policy," which he has read in his newspaper, roundly asserts that America isn't going to fight because it hasn't the spirit to fight.

Much, of course, might be made of this superficial sentiment, particularly as it finds expression occasionally in the printed word. One has only to talk with well-informed people, however, and read responsible newspapers to form the assured conclusion that the dominant feeling here is one neither of carping criticism nor scoffing nor reviling.

Not Seeking To Advise.

"It would be gratuitous folly," said The Star yesterday, "for us to presume to pass judgment upon either America's action or her inaction. Whatever she does or does not, we know that the soul of America is with the Allies in their defense of law and liberty and humanity. Her free press speaks with no uncertain sound about the Lusitania. So far as naval and military aid is concerned, we think the Allies must rely on their own strength. They value the moral support of the United States more than any help which America could give if she went to war with Germany."

Similarly, The Westminster Gazette said:

"Let us add that we are not reckoning on outside assistance to fight this battle. We know the difficulties and perplexities of the American Government. We can see strong reasons which impel them to withdraw from our affairs and limit their activities to the American Continent. We realize what they must feel when the necessity is imposed on them of keeping silence on an issue which shakes the whole world and tragically affects their own citizens.

"But this battle is, first of all, ours, and we will fight it through to the end with our own right hand, while gratefully accepting the encouragement and moral support which come to us from millions of good men on the other side of the Atlantic."

The President's speech at Philadelphia, reported in a Reuter message, which stated that President Wilson, in his passage about such a thing as a man being "too proud to fight," "spoke by implication, but his hearers interpreted his remarks as meaning that, while the United States would remain at peace, it would seek to convince Germany of the injustice to mankind of the Lusitania tragedy," was placarded throughout London by the evening paper with the greatest circulation as "Wilson's amazing speech."

Two Views of "Too Proud To Fight."

The headline appealed to the average reader, and a characteristic comment of a man in the street may be quoted.

"Too proud to fight?" said he. "A man who is too proud to fight a mad dog is a man who skulks in the doorway when he sees one about."

An altogether different construction is put upon it by more thoughtful men. The Star thus interprets President Wilson's words:

"The guilt of those who murdered American citizens engaged in their lawful pursuits on board the Lusitania is so manifest that America can rely on the rightness of her cause without drawing the sword to defend it. America, in short, applies the principles of Tolstoy to this international crime.

"It is a lofty moral attitude, and it would be wrong to ascribe it to domestic expediency or opportunism, but the world expects America to uphold the elementary rights of humanity by word, if not by deed.

"President Wilson, we believe, will find another way than the way of war to justify all that America in the past has stood for, and that way will, we think, be a great way."

Officials Deprecate Urging Us.

A prominent Englishman, whose name, because of his official relations, cannot be quoted, has given THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent an intimate idea of how the Government regards the attitude of America in the crisis arsing out of the Lusitania tragedy.

President Wilson's speech in Philadelphia is not regarded as reflecting his intentions respecting the policy which Washington will pursue in consequence of the killing of American passengers. That utterance, said this Englishman, is taken as a thing apart from the Lusitania. He went on:

"All England is naturally waiting to see what America will do. It would be extremely obnoxious for England in any way to suggest to the President at this time what he ought to do. For that reason no official of the British Government would think of expressing the slightest hint as to America's duty.

"America knows its own mind. In his own time the President will decide what is to be done.

"The officials of the Government here sincerely deprecate the editorials of some London newspapers, suggesting that America ought at once to declare war on Germany. Such editorials only work mischief, to my mind. Incalculable harm might be done by any assumption on the part of England that it could attempt to dictate or even influence America's policy. Only America itself can decide.

Says We Could Help Shorten War.

"As to a certain comment in the thoughtless press here that America can really not help in the war, let me say that that is a nonsensical assumption. Certainly America could aid in shortening the war by the influence which her actions would have on the wavering neutral nations of Europe, if in no other way.

"It is idle talk also to say that America would not be able to help in a military way, for her battleship fleet would be an immense aid.

"If America came into the war, it would be more quickly ended. There is no mistake about it. The immense financial resources of America would be a powerful factor

"The Allies can win without America. They're bound to win, but that is not the point. America in her own wisdom will say if the war is to be brought to a quicker end."

WHY NAMES ARE CONFUSED.

Passengers Fail to Fill Out Forms Clearly, Say Cunard Agents.

The agents of the Cunard Line said yesterday that the mistakes which had been made in the lists of the survivors and the missing passengers of the Lusitania were chiefly due to the failure of the passengers to give the proper information at the time of booking.

All persons booking on any foreign steamship from any port in the United States are requested to fill out a form giving their full name, age, sex, nationality, address, and occupation.

As an example of the difficulty the Cunard Company has had in identifying the passengers by the lists made up after the sailing of the liner from New York, it was pointed out that Wickes Smith wrote his name as "O. W. Smith," E. A. Stokes, who was with his wife and child, was down as "E. A. Stocks;" Miss Christina Sarah Campbell was down as "Miss T. S. Campbell," and on a second slip for the baggage man at the pier it was written "Miss F. Campbell," while on the chief steward's table list it was Miss Tina S. Campbell." The agents here got her correct name from Queenstown for the first time.

The slips, after they have been filled in by the passengers, are sent to the Department of Commerce at Washington. During the voyage the purser collects the same information from the passengers and embodies them in his manifest for the immigration authorities on the other side.

The manifest made out by James A. McCubbin, purser of the Lusitania, went down with the ship. It was suggested yesterday that in the future all passengers' manifests be kept in the Captain's cabin in a water-tight case that would float in case the ship sank, and the log and other important papers be kept with it.

Atlanta Couple Lost.

ATLANTA, May 11.—Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hunter, of Atlanta, were among the Lusitania victims, according to a cablegram received here late last night by Mrs. Nellie Inglis, a sister of Mr. Hunter. The message came from Mr. Hunter's parents at Aberdeen, Scotland, and stated that the bodies were not recovered.

MISS ADDAMS IN LONDON.

Impressed by Wilson's Speech—To Speak on Women's War Duties.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—Miss Jane Addams has arrived in London and will devote the next few days to making speeches on the subject of women's duties during the war.

President Wilson's remarkable utterance on America's "special example of peace" greatly impressed Miss Addams.

"He is a splendid man," she said in an interview with a Daily News representative yesterday. "Although, as a citizen of a neutral State, I feel myself debarred from dictating a policy one way or the other, I hold the view that nothing can be settled by force; it will have to be settled by reason." Continuing, Miss Addams said:

"I have only been in London a few hours since my previous visit in 1906, when I returned to the scenes of my early life work in the East End. I have not yet had an opportunity of comparing the new with the old London. I am a strong supporter of woman suffrage, and, although I hope to see the women of England enfranchised, I see around me endless opportunities for social work which could be usefully performed while the vote is being won."

Miss Addams thinks British women, as well as the women of other nations, have a glorious opportunity during this war of exerting their influence on the younger generation.

Beyond attending the Women's International Congress in Kingsway Hall tomorrow night and revisiting the East End, Miss Addams said she was conducting no special mission in London and would probably sail for America at the end of the week.

STOCKS GO SOARING ON WILSON SPEECH

Market Opens with Rush of Buying Orders, Which Carry Up Prices 2 to 6 Points.

U. S. STEEL UP $4 A SHARE

Traders Who Sold Securities on the Lusitania Tragedy Scramble to Buy Them Back.

The stock market community yesterday extracted much comfort from President Wilson's Philadelphia speech, and a rush of buying orders at the opening carried prices upward from 2 to 6 points. A substantial part of the demand evidently came from the covering operations of traders who sold stocks in Monday's break with the intention of buying them back cheaper in case more serious developments from the sinking of the Lusitania appeared over night. In this they were disappointed, and purchases made after business got well under way did not give them any advantage either, because practically half of the early advances were maintained until the close.

Steel opened with 5,000 shares simultaneously sold at prices extending over a point, from 53¼ to 54¼. At the top price the stock was full 4 points above the closing figure of the preceding day. The first sale of Bethlehem Steel was at 135, the second at 136, and the third at 137, the last representing an overnight gain of more than 4 points. Two thousand shares of Westinghouse were quoted on the tape at the start, selling from 88 to 89½, as compared with 83¾ at the close the night before. Reading advanced more than 9 points in fifteen minutes, and Atchison, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific quickly rose over 2 points.

The start was too impetuous, and the gains suffered some curtailment before the first hour had passed. The running of shorts to cover left a gap in the market's buying power, which was not filled by purchases for the rise. On the contrary, there was a distinct tendency in evidence among traders to lie back until official statements as to the Administration's course toward Germany came from Washington. Business slackened perceptibly toward noon, and the day's turnover of 574,000 shares was about half that of Monday. Net gains extending from 2 to 4 points were common, with the average close to the lower figure.

Talk of the chances of war dominated all other factors again in market quarters. After the first flush of the rise had passed traders were inclined to think that perhaps too much assurance had been read into President Wilson's words, and this view was supported by dispatches from Washington which stated that the Philadelphia address had not been intended to reflect the policy to be pursued in the Lusitania matter. While this caused a slackening of business, the fact that prices held up strongly showed that holders of stocks were not nervous over possibilities.

Seasoned brokers were of the opinion at the end of the day that the Monday decline had strengthened the underpinning of the market by removing many weakly margined long accounts. At the same time it was thought the short interest had been largely increased, despite the hurried covering of the morning, and on this premise was based the argument that the market was in better position to withstand disturbing news than it had been.

CONVENTION AVOIDS ACTION.

Constitutional Delegates Decide Not to Embarrass President.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 11.—A proposition looking to formal action by the Constitutional Convention on the sinking of the Lusitania was discussed today at an informal secret conference, in which a majority of the most prominent men in the convention participated.

While there was considerable sentiment in favor of putting through a resolution denouncing the wanton destruction of so many American lives and demanding drastic action, the desire not to embarrass President Wilson led to the plan being dropped.

Among the delegates to the Constitutional Convention are men who have wielded a decided influence in the foreign affairs of the United States and in the Cabinet. Elihu Root, President of the Constitutional Convention, has been both Secretary of State and Secretary of War. Henry L. Stimson was Secretary of War under President Taft, in whose cabinet George W. Wickersham, a Delegate at Large, was Attorney General. All these men today declined to comment either on President Wilson's Philadelphia speech or on the general situation.

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, a Delegate at Large, said the United States had a duty to its own people and to the world to discharge.

"We have certain rights as neutrals, and those rights we must maintain," said Mr. Schurman. "American citizens have the right under international law to sail in ships belonging to neutrals or to belligerents. Belligerent vessels may be seized and destroyed, subject, however, to the condition that noncombatants must be notified and taken off first.

"So far I have skopen only of our rights as American citizens. Another fact of equal importance enters into the situation, however. The greatest progress we have made in the direction of civilization and in the direction of humanizing war—to the extent that war can be humanized—has been in what his been done to limit the ravages of war to actual combatants.

"Centuries ago the practice was to attack, pillage, and murder the entire population of a hostile country—men, women, and children. Unless the United States can contrive to maintain international law in its present integrity there is danger that the modern world will revert to barbarism.

"From the point of view of modern civilization the most menacing feature of the destruction of the Lusitania lies in the effacement of the distinction between combatants and noncombatants which has been firmly established as a principle of international law for centuries."

Seth Low, Louis Marshall, Edgar T. Brackett, former Judge Alonzo T. Clearwater, and Herbert Parsons, all delegates at large, declined to make any comment.

STUDENTS AGAINST WAR.

Sign Resolutions Urging Wilson to Continue Neutral Policy.

Students in seven colleges have signed their names to resolutions to be sent to president Wilson, expresing gratitude for his firm stand on neutrality and hoping that nothwithstanding the Lusitania incident, he would continue on the course pursued in relation to the war. The resolutions are from New York University, Cornell Medical School, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Union Theological Seminary, Barnard College, and the College of theCit y of New York.

The movement against the show of force to settle the Lusitania horror started at Columbia, where, on Friday, several hundred students sent an antimilitaristic message to the President as soon as the news of the catastrophe became known.

Earl G. Karsten, president of the Collegiate Anti-Militarist League, said yesterday that similar resolutions were being signed in Princeton, Cornell, the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard, and Yale. The documents read in part:

"To the President of the United States:

"We, college students of Greater New York, do hereby express our confidence in the sagacity and patience of the President, and do declare that we firmly believe that the United States should continue the policy of neutrality as respects European affairs, which is has pursued in the past. We believe that occurences such as the sinking of the Lusitania, grave as they are, should have no power to emboil us in a war, and that we should pursue peaceful means of settlement rather than attempt warlike reprisals."

BLANKENBURG LAUDS WILSON.

Cheered by Knights of Columbus as He Extols Peace Message.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Mayor Blankenburg today addressed the delegates to the State Convention of the Knights of Columbus, and every time he mentioned the name of President Wilson and referred to the speech the President made here last night he was cheered.

The Mayor in welcoming the convention said:

"One of the most inspiring meetings I ever attended took place in Convention Hall last night. Thousands of Americans crowded the hall to welcome 4,000 recently naturalized citizens, and the spectacle was one never before held in this or any other country, for it came at a time when our citizens are undergoing a test. I am foreign born myself, and believe the foreign born owe a greater duty to the country than native born.

"To the new citizens of alien birth, as well as the thousands of others who thronged the hall, the President sounded a messag eof peace.

". our duty at this time to do all in our power to support the President, for he is confronted with a great task, which I am sure with the help of God he will accomplish, and the dark clouds now on the horizon will pass away, leaving the country in peace."

WHY THEY WIRED WILSON.

Young Men Felt He Wanted to Know the Public's Views.

A sense of duty prompted Elihu Root, Jr., Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., John G. Milburn, Jr., and a dozen other young men well known in New York, to telegraph President Wilson on Monday that the "national interest and honor" required adequate measures to obtain reparation for past violations by Germany of American rights, and to secure sure guarantees against future violations.

When some of those who signed the message were asked yesterday if they would explain how the idea originated and enlarge on the views expressed in the message, they said it spoke for itself. They added, however, that they believed the President wanted to know, and should know, the public mind just now. They felt it to be the duty of every man to make known his opinion. They did not doubt the ability of the President to form his own judgment and did not lack confidence in his determination to do the right thing.

When Mr. Root was asked if he would add anything about the Lusitania, he answered:

"You ask me what I think of the sinking of the Lusitania? I am satisfied, as a lawyer, that if the reports of the facts are true, it was contrary to the law of nations and was a most foul and barbarous act. What should be done to obtain redress and guarantees against a repetition of the act is a question for the President and his technical advisers. We all deeply feel that he should, and sincerely hope that he will, procure such reparation and guarantees, however grave may be the measures required."

Those who signed the message represent all political parties. Mr. Root, a son of ex-Senator Elihu Root, is a Republican, as is Cornelius Wickersham, son of George W. Wickersham, Attorney General in the Cabinet of President Taft. John G. Milburn is a Democrat, as are Devereux Milburn, George S. Hornblower, and Philip Carroll. The Progressives included Robert L. Bacon, son of Robert Bacon, ex-Ambassador to France; Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Crawford Bladgen.

ILLINOIS WITH PRESIDENT.

The Legislature Indorses Any Action He May Take in Crisis.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 11.—President Wilson was today assured by a vote of the Senate that the people of Illinois would indorse whatever action he might take "for maintaining the honor and dignity of the nation" in connection with the torpedoing of the Lusitania. The resolution follows:

Resolved, That the Senate, realizing as it does the gravity of the situation confronting President Wilson, and regretting the great loss of life of American citizens by the sinking of the Lusitania, conveys to him this message of assurance that the people of Illinois will indorse whatever action he may deem advisable to take for maintaining the honor and dignity of the nation and the preservation of the lives of its citizens.

A copy of the resolution was telegraphed to the President.

O'CONNELL PRAISES SPEECH.

Prelate Says It Should Be Read by Every American Organization.

BOSTON, May 11.—Cardinal O'Connell, in an address before the State convention of the Knights of Columbus today, warmly commended the views expressed by President Wilson in his speech at Philadelphia last night.

"That address," the prelate said, "ought to be read in ringing tones at your convention and at the meeting of every organization in America. Here is an expression of sentiment sublimely universal in tone and lofty human sentiment, which only makes our love of America greater because it founds itself on the natural love of every human heart for justice and truth, and eliminates sectional jealousy and discord.

"It is the expression of a noble heart and a truly illumined mind. It is sublimely catholic and national at the same time—the broad love for our fellow-man and the devotion to the country to which we have dedicated ourselves, while yearning for that eternal fatherland toward which our faith and hope are leading us.

"God bless our calm, noble, and high-minded President!"

WANTS 'PEACE AT ALL COST.'

German Socialist Organ Here Appeals to Workmen.

The New York Volkszeitung, the organ of the German socialists in America, yesterday issued the following peace appeal as a result of the torpedoing of the Lusitania:

"The expected results of the sinking of the Lusitania and the concomitant loss of life have come. The incitation to war has at last set in in America. * * *

"The workers can have no interest in a war. They stand to lose their all—lives, homes, jobs, families, happiness. Therefore it must be the duty of the American working men to fight the campaign of frenzy and hate.

"It is not a question of excusing the German act. That cannot be excused. But we cannot bring dead American passengers to life by sending unknown thousands of soldiers to early graves. After all, there are other methods of punishing Germany for wanton slaughter.

"'Down with war! Peace at all cost!' must be the slogan of the American workingman."

INDIA EXPRESSES HORROR.

Native Newspapers Astounded at "Such Ruthless Murder."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CALCUTTA, May 11, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The cold-blooded brutality of the Lusitania affair has sent a shiver of horror through India. For some time natives had difficulty in grasping the fact that the ship was full of helpless non-combatants, and refused to believe that human beings could be responsible for such ruthless murder. The influential native organ, The Allahabad Leader, says:

"And this is Germany, the leader of culture and civilization! Humanity can do very well without this culture and civilization which only breed on a large scale the callous murderers who have thrust themselves upon the world's attention during the last nine months. May God soon rid the world of that Prussianism, which truly staggers humanity."

The native Bengale organ, Amrita Bazar, says:

"These cold-blooded barbarities, practiced by ruthless Germans, are indeed staggering, especially to the Indian mind. Chronicles of even the most sanguinary wars in this land contain no record of such unmitigated cruelty to combatant and non-combatant."

The Pioneer, representing English opinion, says:

"However one looks at it, it is impossible to regard the sinking of the Lusitania as a legitimate act of war. It was sheer murder, and woman and child murder at that. Both by word and deed the Germans have proclaimed to the world that it is not inconsistent with German honor to wage war on women and children."

The Statesman says:

"All that can be done is to realize that we are at war with an enemy as void of conscience as the guerrilla, and must shape our measures accordingly, carefully eschewing any imitation of his practices, but applying redoubled energy to crushing this eruption of barbarism in Europe."

WOULD OUTLAW GERMANY.

Hamilton Holt Points to Punishment More Effective Than War.

A specific program for the adjustment of the difficulties with Germany without recourse to war, coupled with an appeal to peace advocates to redouble their efforts in view of the Lusitania incident, was issued yesterday through the office of the American League to Limit Armaments in a statement by Hamilton Holt, editor of The Independent and one of the council of the league. Mr. Holt says:

"This Lusitania crime is militarism at its worst. It simply means that in war all laws, even moral ones, are abrogated. To us in America, it should be the final and conclusive demonstration of what war and its possibilities are, and it should stimulate all of us who prefer law to outlawry in international relationships to work harder than ever for the utter abolition of war at the earliest possible moment.

"The thing to do in the present emergency is not to fight militarism with militarism, but with other methods, if there be such, and I think there is one other method which would inflict far greater punishment upon Germany.

"First, it would seem to be the duty of the United States to demand from Germany reparation for the wanton destruction of our citizens and pledges that such violations of international law and morality will not be repeated.

"Coincident with this demand, all neutral nations should be invited to confer with one another at Washington as to steps to be taken to maintain international law, to end this war, and to lay the foundations for international peace. This conference should make proposals to the belligerents looking toward peace, and if the proposals are not accepted, it should sit continuously, always ready to act as the peacemaker, until peace is restored.

"If Germany in the meantime accedes to our demands, that one situation is cleared up. If, however, Germany declines our demands, then it will be in order for the conference to decide whether the neutrals would treat Germany as an outlaw and cease all intercourse with her.

"This would be a far greater blow to Germany than if the neutrals were to enter actively into the war and, moreover, it prevents Germany from declaring war on the United States alone which, if she did, might be the very best possible thing for her, because if Germany and the United States were at war, we could not do her a bit of harm for at least six months, and while we were recruiting we would export no munitions, thus lessening the Allies' chance of success. So by calling the conference of neutrals we not only avoid the horrors and expense of war, but put a far greater pressure upon Germany than by the use of force—advantages in which all neutrals would share equally with us."

COMMENT ON THE LUSITANIA.

Editorial Views on the Position of the United States.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Profoundly as the people of this country are impressed by the horror of this disaster, we realize that the Lusitania is not another Maine; that the attack was not directed primarily against us, but against England, and that our Government should be depended upon to exact such reparation as we may have the right to demand. The pity of it is that no reparation will restore the lives so ruthlessly, and, it seems to us, so needlessly destroyed.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

We must not act either in haste, or passion. This catastrophe is too real—the flashlight it throws upon the methods and purposes of Germany is too appalling—to leave us in any doubt what awaits us as the bloody and brutal work goes on. Civilization should abjure its neutrality. It should rise as one mighty, God-like force, and, as far as its moral influence and physical appliance can be made to prevail, forbid the riot of hate and debauch of blood that, like a madman, is running amuck among the innocent and the unprotected.

From The Indianpolis Star.

There is little room to doubt that the Government at Washington will express in unequivocal terms the horror and disapproval that possess the universal American mind and heart at this ghastly deed. At the same time the only appeal of any promise is the appeal to the sword, and that appeal would be of doubtful avail as well as of staggering cost. It is time for serious thought rather than impassioned speech.

From The Cincinnati Enquirer.

International law is now a heap of junk, as all law becomes without a power to execute or enforce it. The time for neutral nations to have united in protest upon these maritime outrages was when the British, German, and French Admiralties began to mine the high seas and place therein the machines for destroying the lives and property of men of nations at peace with all the world.

It is most desirable that no repetition of this terrible occurrence takes place, and it is clearly within the powers of our Government to refuse clearance papers to any passenger vessel leaving our ports which carries American citizens and cargoes of arms, ammunition, and other contrabands of war at the same time.

If the cargoes of contraband of war go in belligerent vessels they go at the known risk, but our Government should forbid American citizens to go as passengers, or as members of the crew, upon vessels with such risks and dangers attending and impendnig.

From The Buffalo Enquirer.

The Enquirer has not admitted that the United States note of Feb. 10, relating to the loss of American lives on American ships, applied equally to the loss of American lives on British ships. If it was the intent of the Government to limit the application to Americans sailing under the American flag, the international importance of the sinking of the Lusitania is correspondingly diminished.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

As to any moralizing over the depth of barbarism in which such a warfare is involving humanity, that may safely be left to the unofficial presentation of the American moods and conviction. There is no question that the country is at one in this matter. We are in a position to take the most lofty stand, and even to be calm, though stirred to the very roots of our national life and deeply concerned over our prestige as a great power. But as to the unequivocal resolution with which the Government and its military and naval chiefs responsible for the disaster shall be brought to book there can be no question.

From The Boston Globe.

Let the reply of the American people in this hour of gloom and heartache be in the words of Him who might, had we let Him, have spared us all these horrors: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The loss of the Lusitania is stunning, but when it is fully considered there will, doubtless, be an almost unanimous disposition to follow the Administration's lead and to refrain from making the Administration's position more difficult. The people have been sane till now. The sinking of the Lusitania should not and probably will not alter the national frame of mind.

From The Memphis News-Scimitar.

Much as we may condemn the sinking of the Lusitania from a humanitarian standpoint, from a national point of view it behooves the United States to remain cool. The Lusitania was owned by a British company and sailed under the British flag. Despite the loss of the lives of scores of Americans in this disaster, the destruction of the Lusitania cannot be construed as an act of war against the United States.

From The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Everp patriotic American who is not passion-swayed beyond his power to think—and there is a class of mollycoddles among the jingoes that is carried off its feet in every crux with other nations—every thinking patriot, we repeat, will indorse the judicial attitude of the Administration in seeing first the full facts before demanding justice. And the highest love of country comports with the hope of a peaceful solution.

From The Boston Journal.

The wrongs that we have suffered at the hands of England can be paid for in money damages; the wrong done us by Germany cannot. We have no sympathy with the hysteria which shouts "pirates," "murderers," and "baby-killers," nor have we any sympathy with that pro-Ally-fostered sentiment which urges this country to go to war to preserve humanity and civilization, &c., from the ravages of the "mad dog of Europe." Bah! If this country goes to war it will be to preserve its national honor, the lives of its citizens or the integrity of its shores.

From The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

We fear that those German-Americans who have been resourceful in inventing excuses for Louvain and Dinant, for Senlis and Rheims, will find a public far less easily convinced when they endeavor to show that American women and children and peaceful citizens, some of them perhaps en route to Germany, have been rightfully slaughtered because they dared to travel along a road over which the Kaiser had placed the skull and crossbones.

From The Duluth Herald.

The country is blessed today with a President who will not act in passion, but who will act in cool and calm judgment. The interests of the national honor are safe in his hands.

From The Birmingham News.

There is no doubt that American lives and property will henceforth be thoroughly safeguarded. It is now clear that the German Government is in the hands of leaders who are madmen in their desperation. The German papers appear to be approving this policy, but the mass of kindly German opinion will not approve it. In any event, the United States and the rest of the world must now realize the menace of Germany in its present control, and the rule of craziness must be met firmly, boldly, effectively.

From The Charlotte Observer.

The sinking of the Lusitania will bring the stern realities of the German blockade home to the world. There had been no reason to doubt the earnestness of the German intentions in regard to enforcing the war zone warnings. The main responsibility for the loss of the steamer rests with the company that sent her out.

From The Montgomery Advertiser.

In this horrible disaster the civilized world has been outraged. We may trust the President to deal with this crisis with a grave sense of his responsibilities to the American people, and with a due sense of their honor. There will be no hysteria in the handling by our Government at this grave crisis. We will play our part in this affair with dignity and with strength. Germany, it is evident, wishes to affront all civilization. She has succeeded.

From The Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Let there be no fires built in his rear to distract his attention from the situation before him. Let us prove ourselves worthy fellow-citizens of the calm, clear-eyed statesman in the White House, whose single aim and one prayer in this moment is the welfare of his countrymen.

From The New Haven Register.

None the less, this thing must be stopped, no matter what it takes in time or life or treasure. Piracy is outlawed. War of any sort, most of all war of this sort, is outlawed. The force of civilization and real humanity must eternally and thoroughly crush the outlaw for the good of the world.

From The Hartford Courant.

Apparently this horrible disaster concerns us as sympathetic human beings and arouses our wrath against Germany and against war. Our protests against such ways of fighting may well be loud and vigorous. But that is about all that we can do, except, of course, go on getting big "war contracts."

SHAME TILL END OF TIME.

Schneider Finds Few Historic Acts as Base as Sinking Lusitania.

Samuel R. Schneider of 43 West Thirty-sixth Street, guest at a conference of the Eastern delegates of the Equal Rights League at the Hotel Belmont last evening, addressing the delegates said:

"The destruction of the Lusitania is a colossal sin against God and humanity. This most deplorable incident will tend to shame its perpetrators till the end of time. History mirrors many dastardly sins committed in the name of war, but few so base as is this.

"But the deed is done, and it behooves the people of the United States to be calm. It is our duty to stand by our President and support him in whatever course he may pursue. Upon this duty is predicated our rights of citizenship.

Guarding German Ships at Boston.

BOSTON, May 11.—Customs guards on the German steamers that sought refuge here at the outbreak of the war were doubled today by order of Edmund Billings, Collector of the Port. Mr. Billings explained that he had heard rumors that attempts to damage the steamers might be made by some persons, in retaliation for the destruction of the Lusitania, and although he feared no such action, he wished to take every precaution.

GULFLIGHT ATTACK AS OFFICIALLY TOLD

State Department Gives Out Sworn Statement of Vessel's First Officer.

SUBMARINE FLEW NO FLAG

Capt. Gunter Thought Her British, as Patrols Made No Move for Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Ambassador Page has sent to the State Department the complete sworn statement of Ralph E. Smith, formerly chief officer of the American steamship Gulflight, which was damaged by an explosion, believed to have been the result of a torpedo attack by a German submarine early last week off the Scilly Islands. Secretary Bryan tonight made public the text of Chief Officer Smith's statement without comment.

Literally interpreted, the statement fails to show whether the Gulflight was destroyed by a torpedo, a mine, or an internal explosion.

Chief Officer Smith says that the second officer of the Gulflight, while that vessel was traveling under convoy of two British patrol boats, saw a submarine ahead twenty-eight minutes before the explosion. This submarine was moving at right angles across the Gulflight's course, and was seen for about five minutes before sheh submerged right ahead of the Gulflight. Twenty-three minutes after the submarine submerged an explosion took place on the starboard bow of the Gulflight.

The Gulflight was traveling at eight knots, which means that she covered about three miles from the time the submarine sank until the explosion. The submarine was not seen a second time.

The statement says the Captain of the Gulflight remarked that the submarine must have been a British boat, "as the patrols took no notice of it," but the first officer's statement declares that he himself could see the submarine, but could not "distinguish or see any flag flying on her."

The inference generaly drawn from the statement is that the Gulflight was torpedoed. But there were some who insisted tonight that his statement did not constitute proof that the American vessel had been torpedoed. Those who took this psition argued that the great amount of water which the explosion threw into the air might have been caused by a mine rather than by a torpedo.

The Sworn Statement.

Following is the sworn statement of Ralph E. Smith, formerly chief officer, now master of the steamship Gulflight:

"I am Ralph E. Smith, now master of the steamship Gulflight. At the commencement of the voyage I was chief officer. The ship left port at Port Arthur on the 10th day of April, 1915, about 4 P. M., laden with a tank cargo of gasoline and wooden barrels of lubricating oil. The voyage was uneventful.

"When about half way across the Atlantic the wireless operator told me there was a British cruiser in our vicinity and that he had heard messages from this ship the whole time since leaving Port Arthur, but she made no direct communication with, or to our ship. From the sound of tht wireless messages given out by the British ship, she seemed to maintain the same distance from us until about three days before we reached the mouth of the English Channel.

"On the first day of May, about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, we spoke two British patrol vessels named Iago and Filey. We were then about ttwenty-two miles west of the Bishop Lighthouse. The patrol vessels asked where we were bound. Ater informing them we were bound for Rouen, they ordered us to follow them to the Bishop. The Filey took up a position of a half mile distant on our port bow. The Iago off our starboard quarter close to us. We steered as directed, and at about 12:22, the second officer being on watch, sighted a submarine on our port bow—slightly on the port bow—steaming at right angles to oupr course. The submarine was in sight for about five minutes, when she submerged about right ahead o us. I saw her but could not distinguish or see any flag flying on her.

Flag in Full View.

"The Gulflight was then steering about true east, steaming about eight miles an hour, flying a large American ensign, six six feet by ten feet. The wind was about south, about eight miles an hour in force. I personally observed our flag was standing out well to the breeze.

"Immediately after seeing the submarine I went aft and notified the crew and came back and went on the bridge and heard the Captain make the remark that that must be a British submarine, as the patrol boats took no notice of it.

"About 12:50 an explosion took place in the Gulflight on the bluff of the staboard brow, sending vast quantities of water high in the air, coming down on the bridge and shutting everything off from our view. After the water cleared away our ship had sunk by the head so that the sea was washing over the foredeck and the ship appeared to be sinking.

"Immediately after I went aft to see to the boats. On my way I saw one man overboard on the starboard side. The water at that time was black with oil. The boats were lowered and the crew got into them without delay or damage. After ascertaining there was no one left on board the ship I got in my boat and we were picked up by the patrol vessel Iago and were advised by her crew to leave the scene. We preceded toward St. Mary's, but the dense fog which then came on prevented us getting into the harbor that night.

"About 2:30 in the morning following I saw Captain Gunter, master of the Gulflight, who had been sleeping in the room of the skipper of the Iago, standing in the room with a queer look in his face. I asked him what his trouble was and he made no reply. Then he reached for the side of the berth with his hands, but did not take hold. I went in the room, but he fell before I reached him.

Death of Captain Gunter.

"He was taken on deck as the cabin was small and hot. After reaching the deck he seemed to revive and said: 'I am cold.' After that he had apparently two fainting attacks and then expired in a third one—this being about 3:40.

"We arrived at St. Mary's, Scilly, about 10 o'clock on the morning of May 2. The Gulflight was towed to Crow Sound, Scilly, on the second of May by British patrol vessels, and Commander Oliver, senior naval officer of the Port of Scilly, sent for some one to come on board the Gulflight, and I went, and the ship was anchored about 6 P. M.

"I again left the ship that evening—she being then in the charge of the Admiralty. I visited the ship on Monday. I went out again on Tuesday, but it was too rough to get on board. To the best of my knowledge there was no examination of the vessel made by divers until Wednesday about 3 P. M., when members from the American Embassy were present. The divers at this time, made an external examination only of the ship's bottom and left the ship with me at 5:40 P. M."

PAGE SILENT ON REPORT.

Gulflight Matter Said to be in Abeyance, but Inquiry May Be Closed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 11.—With reference to reports cabled from America to the effect that Ambassador Page had sent to the State Department an official report that the Gulflight was torpedoed by a German submarine, no definite information is available, as the Embassy says it can make no statement infringing upon the State Department's province.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent understands from other sources that the Gulflight matter is in abeyance. This does not necessarily mean that the investigation into the Gulflight attack has not been concluded.

WOULD REPUDIATE DERNBURG.

Dr. Young Tells German-Americans How to Prove Americanism.

Dr. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, speaking last night in the Central Presbyterian Church at Newark, of which he was formerly pastor, in a community containing an unusually large number of Germans and persons of German origin, said:

"There is one way for German-Americans to show the sincerity of their Americanism, a way that belongs distinctively to the German-American, and I believe they will do it—repudiate Dr. Dernburg and all his work. Let no German society hereafter offer him its platform.

"Let Americans meet no more evidences of the invisible German army which has been building up in this country. Let Germans in unmistakable tones demand his exit from America. In defiance of the attitude of President Wilson, Dr. Dernburg has shown by his public statement that he was accessory to, and chief defender after, the Lusitania crime. Right in our faces he, a foreigner, has violated our neutrality and sought to thwart the action of our Government.

"His conduct, if not rebuked by them, will put all German-born people here under suspicion. Could our fellow-citizens of Teutonic origin render a timelier service to themselves and the nation than by prompt and vigorous repression of this undesirable intruder? Such an act will be regarded by the entire country as a sufficient answer to any charge of disloyalty that may be brought against German-Americans in these crucial hours."

DERNBURG LEAVES TOWN.

Secretary Will Not Tell Where He Is or When He Will Return.

Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the unofficial agent of the German Emperor, and who has been presumed to be the interpreter in this country of the acts and purposes of the German Government, was reported at the Ritz-Carlton last night as having gone out of town. That was the information given in the office of the hotel, and confirmed by Dr. Dernburg's secretary.

Just where Dr. Dernburg had gone, the secretary said she did not know, nor did she know exactly when he would be back, except that she thought this would be today.

"I presume Dr. Dernburg has seen the Washington dispatches reporting his recent utterances to have been discussed by at least one Cabinet member at the Cabinet meeting this afternoon," said Dr. Dernburg's secretary. "I think he will not discuss this report because it is his habit to refrain from discussing internal matters."

FOR AND WITH

There are two kinds of building contractors, just as there are two kinds of employees—those who work for you, and those who work with you.

A contractor who merely works for you is a time server, but the contractor who works with you is an investment, and will yield more than the cost of his hire.

And it is this distinction—working with a client rather than for him—which is largely responsible for the prosperity of our business.

NATION-WIDE APPEAL TO AID SURVIVORS

Two Committees Working in the Interest of Destitute Lusitania Passengers.

The Committee of Mercy has issued a country-wide appeal in behalf of the survivors of the Lusitania disaster. Recalling the generous response to the call for funds to meet the needs of the survivors of the Titanic, the committee is confident that it can get together sufficient funds to care for the destitute among those who were saved from the Lusitania, and to relieve the want of those who have been bereft of support.

Contributions should be sent to the care of August Belmont, Treasurer of the Committee of Mercy at 200 Fifth Avenue, and it was requested yesterday that these contributions should be made as soon as possible. It is desired to have funds in hand at once, so that it may be possible to cable money to take care of the need as it develops. The Lord Mayor of Liverpool, in his cable to Acting Mayor McAneny, said that although the Cunard Company was looking after the dependents of those of the Lusitania crew who had been drowned, there were some second and third-class passengers in urgent need of help.

The Citizen's Committee, which was appointed by Mayor McAneny, is working with the Committee of Mercy, and has also issued an appeal.

Letters were sent out yesterday to those who in the past have contributed to such funds, and the committee will follow them up by a systematic canvass of all who might be expected to subscribe. Some checks have been received, but it is not intended to give out the names of the contributors until the regular appeal had been distributed.

The last of the City Free Concerts, which of late have been maintained by private subscription, will be given on Sunday afternoon at Hunter College, Sixty-eighth Street and Park Avenue, at 3:30 o'clock. It has been decided that on this occasion the performance will be given for the benefit of the Lusitania sufferers, and so an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged.

Several soloists have volunteered their services, among whom are Miss Marie Stoddart, James Stanley, and Maurice Kaufman. The concert is in charge of Robert L. Harrison, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Hunter College; Dr. George F. Davis, the President, and Dr. Henry T. Fleck, who has organized this series of concerts.

VOYAGERS' INSURANCE HEAVY.

Life and Accident Losses on Lusitania Already Exceed a Million.

The life and accident insurance which the companies will have to pay as a result of the torpedoing of the Lusitania has been estimated by The Insurance Press as amounting to $1,051,800, and these figures may be doubled when the returns are all in. Canadaian and European companies are still to be heard from.

Reports to The Insurance Press already show these losses

Accident—Aetna of Hartford, losses under accident policies so far determined, $200,000; Fidelity and Casualty, New York, no definite figure beyond $10,900; Pacific Mutual Life, Los Angeles, $45,000; Royal Indemnity, New York, $15,000; Travelers' Insurance Company, Hartford, nearly $400,000.

Life—Berkshire Life, Pittsfield, two policy holders missing, $11,000 and $10,000; Equitable, New York, twenty-one claims amounting to $211,000, (20 per cent. of the first cabin dead were insured in this company;) Massachusetts Mutual, Springfield, $21,000; Metropolitan, New York, one claim so far, $500; Mutual Benefit, Newark, N. J., $3,000; National Life, United States of America, $5,000; New York Life, New York, $73,000; Pacific Mutual Life, Los Angeles, $10,000; Penn Mutual Life, Philadelphia, $2,000; Provident Life and Trust Company, Philadelphia, $5,000; Prudential, Newark, (estimated,) between $40,000 and $50,000.

Identification of Mrs. Willey Verified

CHICAGO, May 11.—The recovery and identification of the body of Mrs. Catharine E. Willey, a Lusitania victim, mother-in-law of Robert J. Thorne, Vice President of Montgomery Ward & Co., reported yesterday, is confirmed in a cablegram received today by Mr. Thorne from agents of Swift & Co., at Quenstown.

After the resolution had been passed it was said that plans were made for active campaigns on the part of the Navy League to awaken the public and public officials to "the dangerous position in which this country is placed through lack of means of defense in case of foreign aggression." Plans were also outlined, it was added, to increase the membership of the league and "to knit the members together in concerted action in behalf of a naval force so powerful that attacks against the integrity and safety of America will be placed out of the question."

The campaign will begin here in New York, and Ralph N. Strassburger, a former officer of the navy and an Annapolic graduate who is now connected with the Babcock & Wilcox Company, was appointed Chairman of the Membership Committee for this city.

"I know," said Mr. Strassburger yesterday, "that we are attempting a very difficult task in endeavoring to organize a campaign at such short notice. But the Navy League means business, and we are in this to stick. The unanimous approval of all the members approached, to the resolution petitioning the President to call a special session of Congress to authorize a bond issue of unprecedented size for national defense is sufficient guarantee that the organization is aroused and united.

"With the proposed $500,000,000 appropriation the United States could in a short time place itself easily second in the list of naval powers. At present England has 29 ships of the dreadnought type, Germany 17, and the United States 8. In 1916 England will have 46 dreadnoughts, Germany 28, and the United States 12, if the present building schedule is adhered to.

"Using the $500,000,000 appropriation, the United States could build a fleet of twenty-five dreadnoughts and battle cruisers and still have half of the appropriation to spend on scout cruisers, destroyers, submarines, and aeroplanes, and other necessary auxiliary ships without which dreadnoughts are useless.

"Twenty-five extra dreadnoughts added to our 1916 fighting strength would give us a first-line seagoing fleet of thirty-seven dreadnoughts, far more strength than Germany could muster and only a little weaker than the navy of England. The moral force of such a fleet would render out of the question unpleasant mishaps such as have happened to us at the hands of both groups of belligerents within the last few months and would make the American flag respected in the uttermost ends of the earth.

"With the $250,000,000 we would have left after paying for our dreadnought fleet we could build up such a system of seagoing colliers, surface and aerial scouts, submarines, and supply ships that our fleets could operate in any ocean at any distance from their bases of supply, and would not be subject to the humiliating experiences of Admiral Evans's globe-girdling fleet, which was forced to buy coal of every other nation in the world and have it transported in the ships of a dozen nationalities, because we had only one or two colliers, and there were not enough ships in our entire merchant marine to carry the coal the fleet required."

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON WILSON'S SPEECH

Herald Says President's Statement That He Did Not Refer to Lusitania Brings Relief.

POSSIBLE EFFECT IN BERLIN

World and Tribune Fear Germans Were Inclined to Believe We Would Not Resent Insult.

Editorial comment in today's New York morning newspapers regarding President Wilson's Philadelphia speech follows:

Truth That Makes for Peace

From The World.

Not because we are for war but because we are for peace, we rejoice in the fact that early yesterday morning the President announced that at Philadelphia the evening before he was not thinking of the Lusitania when he said:

There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right.

Whatever these words may mean as abstraction, if applied to conditions now existing in a world cursed by lawless war they are bound to be misinterpreted. They have been misinterpreted. No doubt they will be misinterpreted again and again, in spite of the qualification that now accompanies them, by those in Berlin who mistakenly assume that the rights and privileges of a nation of one hundred millions may be assailed with impunity.

There is no surer way to thrust the great Republic into the arena of strife than to encourage the idea, already too firmly held in some quarters, that we are inclined to meet insult and outrage with nothing more terrible than superior airs and fine phrases.

We are dealing with Germany today as Great Britain was less than a year ago. We have had due warning of its purposes. We know its methods. If we flinch, Germany advances. If we hold fast, Germany reflects. The essence of Prussianism is contempt of a coward. The substance of Prussianism is force.

Those who interpret the ideas of the American people assume a great responsibility. They must speak truly, and they must speak comprehensively. We value peace, but we do not fear war. It is of vital importance that the line shall always be sharply drawn between America the hope of the world and America the valiant defender of that hope when it is ruthlessly assailed.

Mr. Wilson has spoken of pride and fight and of force and right. These words have a wide application in a country that never takes arms without extreme provocation. We have a pride that will make us fight. We have force enough to punish wrong and vindicate right. Let there be no illusions on this score in Berlin or elsewhere. In this instance, as in many another, truth makes for peace.

President Wilson's Philadelphia Address.

From The Tribune.

Since President Wilson has declared that his Philadelphia speech was not a statement of national policy and his reference to pride without bearing upon the existing crisis, there can be no justice or wisdom in criticising this address.

There is only one regret which the Philadelphia utterance must provoke and mention of it does not mean captious criticism or a lack of sympathetic recognition of the strain which the President is under. We shall not misunderstand Mr. Wilson's words. However much men may disagree with his views and his beliefs, they will recognize them to be sincere and honorable. What is to be feared is that they may be less well understood in Berlin and Vienna than in Washington and New York.

Like every other American newspaper, The Tribune hopes to see war avoided. It looks with frank horror on the growing prospect that the United States will be dragged into the whirlpool of strife. But with this horror is the very plain recognition that the only possible escape must come with the accurate appraisal in Berlin of American sentiment.

To just this extent manyof Mr. Wilson's fellow-countrymen will regret his words at Philadelphia and rejoice at his later statement. Since Lincoln, no President has had to make so grave a decision as Woodrow Wilson must now make. His responsibility and his tragic duty should alike command the respect and the sympathy of Americans. No party lines could survive the present crisis, no imaginary partisan advantage could prompt cavilling which would approximate treason. It is precisely because The Tribune feels the gravity of the situation, the burden of Mr. Wilson's responsibility, that it calls attention to the peril which seems to it most serious today.

The President's America.

Herman Ridder, in The Staats-Zeitung.

The speech which President Wilson delivered at Philadelphia on Monday night should work more effectually than any one other factor or combination of factors to bring the press of the United States to a clear appreciation of our national duties at the present time and to a saner point of view from which to regard them.

It is comparatively an easy matter for the press of the country to inflame public opinion. The crisis through which we are passing holds all of the comoustibles necessary to a great and hideous conflagration. The newspapers of New York and, to a lesser degree, of the country in general stood ready to plunge the nation into the European conflict.

The example of America must be a special example. The example of America must be the example not merely of peace because it will not fight, but of peace because peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world and strife is not.

With a world in arms about us, with our eyes full of its horrors and our ears drummed by the shrieks of the dying and the sobs of those who live to weep, these words come like a cooling breeze to a fever wracked brow. We know what war is. We have escaped its ravages thus far, and, with God's help, may we escape them through all time. We touch elbows with all the world and all war for us means, in a degree, civil war. The President spoke for the nation when he elevated peace, in the American ideal, above strife.

True Americans In Only One Group, the American Group.

From The Herald.

The President is the central figure, in fact the only figure, in this affair for Americans until his intentions are disclosed. All eyes are fixed upon him. Every word he utters is bound to have significance affixed to it by the public. A brief paragraph in his speech printed yesterday morning was interpreted as indicating that he was strongly disposed to avoid the very appearance of war with Germany no matter what turn the events of the next few days or weeks might take. This appears to have been a false impression, because the President at the very earliest opportunity yesterday took care to disavow these words as they applied to matters before him at this time. He was only speaking generally.

Well for the country that he did disavow! It was unfortunate that he used an expression so susceptible of misconstruction.

This explanation caused great relief among the great mass of American citizens, who with grim set faces are straining their ears for news. But it was to have been expected from one who a few years ago in speaking of the world peace movement uttered these strong, virile words:

No man can sit down and withhold his hands from the warfare against wrong and get peace out of his acquiescence. The most solid and satisfying peace is that which comes from this constant spiritual warfare; and there are times in the history of nations when they must take up the crude instruments of bloodshed to vindicate spiritual conceptions. For liberty is a spiritual conception, and when men take up arms to set other men free there is something holy in the warfare. I will not cry peace so long as there is sin and wrong in the world.

Ringing through the years this could readily be made to fit the very cases of the outrages on the Falaba, the Cushing, the Gulflight, and the Lusitania and attuned into a bugle call for the freedom of the seas.

Berlin Coming to Its Senses.

From The Press.

Official announcement is made that the von Tirpitz submarine savages have been specifically instructed to be more circumspect in their piracy.

What do they mean when they say that from now on they will cease their ravages against neutral ships not committing hostile acts? Their interpretation of a hostile act has been the sheltering of an infant on the breast of its mother.

What do they intend to do when they declare that henceforth even neutral ships carrying contraband will be treated in accordance with the rules of naval warfare? Their reading of the rules of naval warfare has been that an unarmed civilian may be carved on the deck of a merchant vessel like a roast of beef on the mess table of a Von Tirpitz warship.

"If," the Berlin penitents add, "in spite of our reformed intentions, we happen to do it all over again by accident, we'll pay."

Indeed they will—pay a score not to be extinguished in money. Teh civilized world, of which Berlin has made itself the unpardoned and unpardonable enemy, will see to that.

HER $600,000 ESTATE IN GUARDIAN'S HANDS

Wealthy Spanish Spinster at St. George Hotel Incompetent to Handle Her Property.

A Sheriff's jury has found that Nicolasa de Escoriana, a Spanish spinster, whose wealth is estimated at more than $600,000, is incompetent to manage her own affairs. She has been taken to a sanitarium at Flushing, L. I., where she may spend the rest of her days, because she is suffering from paresis, which is deemed incurable. Miss de Escoriana is about 50 years old. She has no relatives except some cousins and an uncle 80 years old, who lives in Spain.

She came to this country about seven years ago and registered at the Prince George Hotel, where she has lived ever since with the exception of visits to Cuba for the purpose of visiting her plantation at Santiago. This is a sugar plantation consisting of about 11,000 acres. It is estimated to be worth nearly a million dollars. Miss De Escoriasa has a half interest in it. Her other property consists of $150,000 in bonds and cash and the evidence during the inquiry disclostd the fact that these bonds are in a safe deposit vault along with many valuable jewels.

Miss de Escorias led a lonely life. She made no friends and was regarded as very shy. There was no suspicion that her mind was not sound until she was observed on one of the staircases of the hotel one day with her hair in a very dishevelled condition and her dress disarranged. She appeared to be afraid of something. She was taken back to her room and her relatives were communicated with. She was put under surveillance, and it soon became apparent that her mind was affected. Application was made to the Supreme Court and a commission was appointed to conduct the inquiry. This commission was composed of Henry Smith, a lawyer; Dr. Albert G. Weed, and Lemuel C. Benedict. Clifford Boese was named as her guardian.

PETITIONS FOR FRANK SIGNED BY 15,000

Cincinnati Newspaper Writer Brings Them to Georgia—Big Mass in Chigago Sunday.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, May 11.—With the death date for Leo M. Frank definitely fixed for June 22, attorneys for the condemned man are preparing for the final plea to be made before the State Prison Commission and the Governor for a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment. Fifteen thousand petitions for clemency for Frank were brought to the Capitol today to be delivered to Governor Staton by Miss Eleanor Post, a writer on a Cincinnati paper. The petitions were collected by the Cincinnati paper from all over Ohio, and make a package weighing seventy-five pounds.

The bale of letters was placed in an enormous goods box in the Governor's reception room, in which were already about 25,000 letters asking clemency for Frank. These letters came from all sections of the country.

The Rev. C. B. Ragsdale and R. L. Barber failed to appear in court today to stand trial on charges of perjury in swearing to alleged false affidavits in connection with the Frank case, and Judge Hill forfeited their bonds. Solicitor Dorsey said Barber htd informed him he was ill and, therefore, could not appear. No excuse was given for Ragsdale's absence.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 11.—A big mass meeting will be held in this city next Sunday, which is being planned as a Leo M. Frank day, at which it is expected 100,000 signatures to petitions will be obtained. An appeal will be made to Governor J. M. Slaton and the Prison Board of Georgia for a commutation of Frank's death sentence.

Governor Edward F. Dunne has been asked to head the list of speakers at the meeting. Others who will speak are Bishop Samuel Fallows, ex-Judge McKenzie Cleland, Father F. J. O'Callaghan, Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell, Grace Wilbur Trout, Leonore Z. Meder, Father S. J. Siedenberg, Harriet Taylor Treadwell, and Clarence Darrow.

The following day will see nearly two hundred women in the loop and outlying districts with petitions. It is planned to have eight women on each intersection, and it is thought that at least 100,000 signatures will be secured in this way.

Four Judges of the Appellate Court in Chicago have signed petitions. They are Judges Kickham Scanlan, H. Baum, Edward O. Brown, and Charles McSurely.

BILLY SUNDAY FOR FRANK.

Evangelist Would Free Him at Once if Governor of Georgia.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 11.—In his sermon at the Tabernacle tonight, the Rev. Billy Sunday expressed himself strongly in favor of Leo M. Frank, declaring:

"If I were Governor of Georgia Frank would go free tomorrow."

He also said he would give Harry Thaw a square deal if he were in authority. Loud applause greeted both these remarks.

Today's collections amounted to $781.41, making a total of $29,710.94. Today's receipts, it was said, will be the last applied to the expenses of the meetings. It was also announced that from now on contributions would be received for the "thank offering" to be given to the evangelist when the campaign closes.

Through Finley J. Shepard arrangements have been made to reserve seats at the Tabernacle for 1,000 sailors and marines tomorrow night.

Sunday's next campaign will begin at Omaha on Sept. 5. Then will follow Syracuse, Trenton, Baltimore, Louisville, and Grand Rapids or Duluth. Sunday is booked for about two years ahead, and announced today that while he would not reject a call from Chicago, that city would have to wait its turn.

Sunday refused today to comment on the story from Philadelphia that he was accused by Colonel Charles Keegan of damaging property in the Keegan home and taking various articles from it. "Ma" Sunday tried to get away from reporters who questioned her about it, but when her automobile became stalled she said the report was "a lot of lies." When one man asked her about the report that liquor as well as glasses was missing from the Keegan home "Ma" said she would like to punch him on the nose, but later apologized.

to reassure those who might have been misled by printed statements, just after the Lusitania sunk, to the effect that the Philadelphia, which sailed on Saturday from here on a course which will take her through the war zone, had on board a quantity of lubricating oil, which is conditional contraband of war."

George W. Perkins, who is a Director of the International Mercantile Marine Company, said last night that the matter had not come before the Directors. As to the action being construed as an acknowledgment of the effectiveness of the German submarine blockade, Mr. Perkins declined to make any comment. He was also unwilling to discuss its significance as a possible means of avoiding further complications between this country and Germany.

The American Liner St. Louis will sail for Liverpool on Saturday. Already more than 300 persons have booked passage on her and her agents expect she will leave port with 500 in her cabins. Eighteen years ago, in her early days, when rated as an ocean greyhound, she once took that number of cabin passengers to Southampton.

The International Mercantile Marine officials say that the passenger bookings on the British steamer Cymric, sailing Friday, for Liverpool, are satisfactory, notwithstanding the fate of the Lusitania. She is expected to take out 75 cabin and at least 300 steerage. Her cargo will be of a general character.

MEETS GERMANY'S DEMANDS.

Neutral Ships, with No Contraband Safe from Submarine Attack.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—According to statements of high officials tonight, no order or suggestion from Washington was responsible for the announcement that American Line ships will not carry contraband of war. Counselor Robert Lansing of the State Department said he knew of no such suggestion, and officials of the Treasury Department said the same.

Nevertheless the American Line announcement was regarded as extremely interesting and significant. It is the belief here that the action was taken to make doubly aure that no ship of that lin emay be atacked by German submarines.

The announcement of the policy of the German Government, communicated to Secretary Bryan today by Ambassador Gerard, regarding "Mistaken attacks by German submarines on commerce vessels of neutral nations," asserts that even when such ships have contraband of war on board, they are dealt with by submarines solely according to the rules of international law applying to prize warfare.

This statement is accepted as meaning that the low of visit and search will be observed, which means that the passengers and crew would be allowed to leave such ships.

If American Line ships carry no contraband and commit no hostile acts, they must not be attacked by German submarines, according to the German Government's statement made through Ambassador Gerard.

The German argument has been that non-combatants and neutrals should sail on neutral ships, not carrying contraband, and it is recognized that the action of the American line meets fully the position announced by Germany.

It was pointed out tonight that a neutral Government, according to the American position, is not compelled by international law by treaty or by statue to prevent sales of contraband to a belligerent, that such sales do not in the least affect neutrality, and that while contraband is, when outside the jurisdiction of the United States, subject to seizure, it is the duty of the enemy to prevent such contraband reaching its destination and not the duty of the Government whose citizens have sold them.

The President and his advisers in the State Department have taken the position that there is no legal authority to interfere with trade in contraband, and under this policy the Government would have no legal right to order or ask the American Line not to carry contraband.

BRITAIN'S REPLY TO GERMAN NOTE

many abandons here submarine blockade or not.

"It should be noted that since the employment of submarines, contrary to international law, the Germans also have been guilty of the use of asphyxiating gas. They have even proceeded to the poisoning of water in South Africa.

"The Germans represent British merchant vessels generally as armed with guns and say that they repeatedly ram submarines. The answer to this is as follows:

"It is not to be wondered at that merchant vessels, knowing they are liable to be sunk without warning and without any chance being given those on board to save their lives, should take measures for self-defense.

"With regard to the Lusitania: The vessel was not armed on her last voyage, and had not been armed during the whole war.

Contraband No Reason for Sinking.

"The Germans attempt to justify the sinking of the Lusitania by the fact that she had arms and ammunition on board. The presence of contraband on board a neutral vessel does render her liable to capture, but certainly not to destruction, with the loss of a large portion of her crew and passengers. Every enemy vessel is a fair prize, but there is no legal provision, not to speak of the principles of humanity, which would justify what can only be described as murder because a vessel carries contraband.

"The Germans maintain that after repeated official and unofficial warnings his Majesty's Government was responsible for the loss of life, as they considererd themselves able to declarer that the boat ran no risk, and thus 'light-heartedly assume the responsibility for the human lives on board a steamer which, owing to its armament and cargo, is liable to destruction.' The reply thereto is:

"First—His Majesty's Government never declared the boat ran no risk.

Warning Doesn't Excuse Murder.

"Second—The fact that the Germans issued their warning shows that the crime was premeditated. They had no more right to murder passengers after warning them than before.

"Third—In spite of their attempts to put the blame on Great Britain, it will tax the ingenuity even of the Germans to explain away the fact that it was a German torpedo, fired by a German seaman from a German submarine, that sank the vessel and caused over 1,00 deaths."

WHAT GERMAN NOTE SAID.

Bernstorff Stated She Would Keep Up Submarine Warfare Till England Yielded.

The German reply to the American note concerning the danger to neutral shipping by the proposed warfare by submarines was received in Washington on Feb. 14. It was officially stated there that it informed the United States Government that Germany would abandon the submarine war on British merchantmen if England would permit foodstuffs to enter Germany for use of the civilian population.

A paraphrase of the note stating the German plans was issued that evening in Washington by Count von Bernstorff. In part he said:

"Germany has been compelled to resort to this kind of warfare by the murderous ways of British naval warfare, which aims at the destruction of legitimate neutral trade and at the starvation of the German people. Germany will be obliged to adhere to these announced principles till England submits to the recognized rules of warfare established by the Declarations of Paris and London, or till she is compelled to do so by the neutral powers."

The note, as made public four days later, contained this paragraph:

"If the United States, in view of the weight which it is justified in throwing and able to throw into the scales of the fate of peoples, should succeed at the last moment in removing the grounds which make that procedure (of submarine warfare) an obligatory duty for Germany, and if the American Government, in particular, should find a way to make the Declaration of London respected—on behalf, also, of those powers which are fighting on Germany's side—and thereby make possible for Germany legitimate imuortation of the necessaries of life and industrial raw material; then the German Government could not too highly appreciate such a service, rendered in the interests of humane methods of warfare, and would gladly draw conclusions from the new situation.

PRO-GERMAN PETITION OUT.

Urges Extra Session to Forbid Exporting of Munitions.

C. R. Meissner, of the importing firm of G. E. Meissner & Bros., 31 Union Square, who is frankly pro-German and justifies the sinking of the Lusitania, is conducting a personal endless chain campaign by petition to have President Wilson call an extra session of Congress so that an embargo can be placed upon the shipping abroad of arms and ammunition.

Through the circularization of business houses, public bodies, the churches and citizens in general, Mr. Meissner has obtained about 15,000 signatures. These he intends to have presented by a committee to President Wilson. He said yesterday that the committee has not been appointed nor had the date been set for the presentation.

Mr. Meissner asserts that because of the war thousands are out of employment, and asks the recipient to copy the petition three times and send each copy to another "fellow-citizen." To save rewriting he offers the printed petition at the cost price of 33 cents a hundred copies.

Your Kidneys Need Toning Up— That's what makes you feel so like a down-and-outer. If there's anything under the sun that will make a person feel like a has-been it is sluggish kidneys and its accompanying symptoms, faulty digestion, bladder trouble, etc. You can restore yourself to good health by taking a course of drinking

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS WATER

One or two bottles will help you, but it is the cumulative effect of drinking it regularly—six or eight glasses a day—for five or six weeks that produces best results.

One of the most eminent physicians in the country, the late HUNTER McGUIRE, M.D., LL.D., of Richmond, Va., Ex-President American Medical Association, said of Buffalo Lithia Water: "I know from constant use of it personally and in practice that the results obtained from its use are far beyond those which would be warranted by the analysis given. I am of the opinion that it either contains some wonderful remedial agent as yet undiscovered by medical science or its elements are so delicately combined in Nature's laboratory that they defy the utmost skill of the chemist to solve the secret of their power."

UNION MEN INDICTED IN GANG ROUND-UP

Grand Jury Finds Labor Leaders Hired Thugs to Terrorize Employers and Workmen.

WOMEN AMONG 34 INDICTED

Police Assert Revelations of 'Dopey' Benny Will Enable Them to Drive Out Gangs Here.

Ten policemen under the command of Deputy Police Commissioner Frank Lord, went out last night to arrest east side gangsters, who, it is alleged, have been hired to do "strong arm work," and even commit murder. The police sought also the men alleged to have employed the thugs.

When he left Police Headquarters with his special squad, Mr. Lord carried with him twelve indictments which had just been returned by the Grand Jury. The indictments were found against thirty-four defendants, eleven of whom were gangsters, and twenty-three labor union officials in the textile trades. A bench warrant was issued for each defendant.

It was said that one of the highest officials of the United Hebrew Trades was among those sought, and that others indicted included a majority of the members of the Joint Board of the cloak and skirtmakers' unions. The violence which the union leaders are alleged to have instigated occured in the big strike in the textile trades in 1910, and in smaller strikes in 1913 and 1914.

Among the charges made in the indictments were first degree murder, assault, attempted extortion, and rioting. The evidence on which the Grand Jury acted gave the inside history of garment workers' strikes on the east side for the last five years, many of those who participated in the strikes having told their stories to the Grand Jury.

Other indictments, involving a still larger number of east side labor leaders, will follow in a few weeks it is expected. The present batch of indictments was found as the result of an investigation which the Grand Jury began in February, following the receipt by the Grand Jurors of a confession from Benjamin Fein, feared for years among east side gangsters as "Dopey Benny."

"Strong Arm" Women Indicted.

In their search for the gangsters the police found that Dopey Benny, in addition to bossing a gang of men thugs, had under his control a force of "strong-arm" women. The women he kept to make raids in factories employing only girls, where men would have difficulty in gaining access. The business of the women was to wreck the shops where the employers had not complied with all demands of the unions. It was found that Dopey Benny had sent his women thugs to Boston to fight for the unions, and that he complained because the union leaders here were so backward in calling upon him for the services of this squad. Three of the alleged "strong-arm" women were among those against whom indictments were returned.

Instead of acting on each case as the evidence was gathered, members of gangs were arrested on trivial charges, and were charged by the grand jurors with serious crimes they had committed. They were told that "Dopey" Benny had betrayed them and almost invariably they retaliated by giving more information as to gang activities.

This process of bringing in the minor gangsters who kept up until the grand jurors were convinced that they had the full story of all the principal gang fights and shootings of the last five years. The evidence collected was then turned over to Assistant District Attorneys Du Vivier, Delehanty and Breckenridge, who called in to assist them Detectives Henry Jessop and Clinton Wood. Wood and Jessop worked for three months in places frequented by east side gansters, in order to obtain a list of witnesses who would be willing to corroborate the sories of crimes as detailed in the confessions before the Grand Jury.

District Attorney Perkins, in discussing the indictment of gangsters and the twenty-three labor leaders last night said that he wanted it understood that the work of the Grand Jury "did not constitute any raid upon labor leaders."

"The fact is," he said, "that we found that some labor leaders, to intimidate their own followers and to keep themselves in power within their unions were just as willing to hire gangsters to attack members of the unions as they were to hire gangsters to wreck the factories of employers who would not meet their terms.

Labor Men Had Members Beaten.

"Often we found that workmen who were perfectly satisfied with the terms of their employment were harried by the union leaders for not joining the union, and were then made to suffer through raids by the hired gunmen. In one case a union leader had a rival for the Presidency of the union taken in hand by the hired thugs."

As District Attorney Perkins was telling twenty or more reporters about the indictments, Philip Gussin, representing the Jewish Daily News, became suddenly alarmed. He asked some questions and then started to leave the room. He was caught by two detectives waiting at the door of the District Attorney's office, and was told he was under arrest on a charge of extortion and assault. Gussin, it was alleged, was formerly an officer of an east side union which hired a famous gangster to deal with a union member who had refused to attend a union meeting. He was the first of the thirty-four defendants to be arrested.

The District Attorney was reminded by reporters, for east side newspapers that "Dopey Benny" had a reputation on the east side of working for employers of labor quite as much as for the unions. Mr. Perkins was asked if anywhere in his confession Dopey Benny had named employers who had hired him, and if he had told of the work he did while employed by them.

Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge volunteered the answer, as he said he had investigated that phase of the case. Mr. Breckenridge said that he found that the employers had never hired guards except when driven to desperation by the unions, and that they hired to protect their plants, licensed private detectives. He said that he and his associates had been able to obtain proof of only one case of the use of gunmen by employers in the east side textile trades at the time the union leaders were using them freely both against their fellow union men and the employers, and this proof had been insufficient to warrant an indictment.

Deputy Commissioner Lord said that the round-up was the most important the Police Department had ever undertaken in the course of handling the gunman problem.

"Detectives Jessop and Wood did splendid work on this case," he said, "and the most splendid part of it was just plain patience. When we have made all of the arrests called for by the indictments we will have in the toils the leader or a member of every important gang in the city. Not only will we have the gangster, but we will have with them a full inside history of the way each gang did its work. The raid means that we have abandoned the retail plan of making isolated, individual raids, and have inaugurated instead a wholesale plan of action which is calculated to lift the gang problem out of New York life in one single raid upon the gangs.

Will Free the City of Gangs.

"Before we moved we knew who financed the gangs and why, and who cut off their earnings. We learned why they shot down men in the street—which often was just to create a spirit of terrorism, and we cut off this way of capitalizing terrorism. We starved them by shutting off the 'rackets' by which they raised their big money. You know they enough tickets they shot one through the leg, and then told the others what would happen to them if they didn't buy.

"We had to promise the witnesses, before we could get them to talk, that we would lock up all the gangsters so there would be no more "fixing" of a man who confessed by the gangsters left still at large."

Police Commissioner Woods realised, it was said yesterday, that he had a chance he had long been looking for when "Dopey" Benny, according to underground rumors that reached Headquarters, was threatening to "squeal" in the Tombs unless he was taken out by his friends. He was then under arrest for trying to extort $500 from Benjamin Solomonowitz, a union organizer, under threats of assassination.

Kept Benny From Getting Bail.

Dope Benny's bail had been fixed by Judge Wadhams of General Sessions at $7,500, it was ascertained. Commissioner Woods learned that the gangsters had collected $7,500 and were about to apply for the release of the gang leader.

Deputy Commissioner Lord asked Judge Wadhams to double the amount of the bail. The gangsters came with the $7,500 and found that $15,000 would be needed. The time set by Dopey Benny for his "squeal" found him still in the Tombs. He began to talk while Commissioner Woods set detectives at the task of finding out who gave money for the $7,500 fund and why. Dopey Benny often dictated twenty sheets of typewriting in a day, in giving the narrative of his service to labor union officials in strikes.

From this narrative is was learned that the murder of "Big Jack" Selig, who was killed during the investigation of the Rosenthal murder, gave Dopen Benny his chance to become the east side's chief gangster. His only competitor for the place was "Joe the Greaser," who is now awaiting trial on a charge of homicide. Dopen Benny and "Joe the Greaser" became rival bidders for the strong-arm privileges among the union leaders. Dopey Benny confessed with pride that his "rake-off" was $12 a day for himself, in addition to the sum at which he would furnish minor gangsters, while the best "rake-off" his rival could get was $8 a day. Benny said he often made as much as $10,000 a year. His work included anything from murder to raiding an employer's shop and wrecking it for not meeting all union demands.

Killed a Union Man.

The most important of the indictments found, charged eight men with murder in the first degree, as a result of the death of Herman Lieberwitz, who died in Bellevue Hospital on Aug. 10, 1910, after his skull had been fractured in a fight at Casino Hall, 85 East Fourth Street. Lieberwitz was a union man who was on strike in New York, but worked as a "scab" in Hunter, New York. He was called to New York by th eunion officials here, and after being found guilty of being a "scab," was set upon by Dopey Benny's gangsters.

Among those indicted in connection with Lieberwitz's death were Morris Siegman, General Secretary of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Solomon Metz, a member of the joint board of the cloak and suit makers' unions, and Morris Stupnicker, an employe in the Grand Street office of the Cloakmakers' Union.

Metz has been elected President of the United Hebrew Trades since the assault on the backsliding union man in connection with which he was indicted. The five others indicted for the murder of Lieberwitz were all members of the cloak and suit makers' joint board. One of them, Julius Woolf of 5,368 Thirteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested at his home last night.

Benjamin Polar, a union leader who was "in the way" of other union men and was gaining in popularity was assaulted by the "Dopey" Benny gang, and for this two union men were indicted.

Max Fleischer, an organizer of a bakers' union, offended other union organizers, and he was set upon by gangsters in a restaurant at 106 Delancey Street, on Feb. 14, 1914. The gangsters broke a beer bottle over his head and left him unconscious on the floor with a warning to retire from union activities.

Arrested for Raiding a Shop.

Jacob Halpern, a tailor of 1,477 Longfellow Avenue, was brought to Police Headquarters last night, charged with extortion and riot. With three other members of the Cloak and Shirt Makers' Union he is alleged to have hired "Dopey" Benny to raid a shop at 58 East Broadway, where the foreman was charged by the union with unfair practises. The riot that resulted extended all the way from the shop to the Chatham square station of the Third Avenue elevated line. The shop was wrecked.

Halpern, it is alleged, also helped in wrecking the shop of Max and Joseph Lampert at 77 Greene Street, because the firm had refused to pay a fine of $100 for the alleged violation of union requirements. William Thomofsky, the man who, it was alleged, led the raid, was arrested at the time, but the Grand Jury did not indict him. He was indicted yesterday and was arrested last night. He wept in Police Headquarters, because, he said, he was a heavyweight favorite under the name of "Battling Bill Ketchel," and would have to break several boxing engagements if he went to jail.

Sam Shore of 257 East 143d Street, it was alleged, visited the Lampert establishment also on behalf of the white goods workers' union. Shore and his associates were alleged to have wrecked the place, and they were indicted for attempted extortion, injury to property, and felonious assault. Shore was arrested last night, and so was Henry Kleinman of 55 Second Avenue, who was alleged to have oiled Shore in the raid.

Max Roth, a shirtwaist manufacturer with a place of business at 1115 Broadway and R. Kushin, a manufacturer with a shop at 41 East Twenty-first Street, both suffered raids by gangsters at the instigation of union leaders, it is alleged. Their places were "shot up," and workmen intimidated because they would not pay union dues.

In one instance gunmen visited a manufacturer because he refused to pay the initiation fees and dues of his workmen in a union.

District Attorney Perkins said that if all the cases should be prosecuted that had been mentioned in the confessions of "Dopey" Benny and the other gangsters the courts would be kept busy for six months in trying the defendants.

ACCUSES THE SUNDAYS.

Philadelphian Who Rented Home to Evangelist Says They Wrecked It.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Colonel Charles Keegan, who rented his home here to "Billy" Sunday and his party during their stay in this city, today entered a claim against the Sunday Campaign Committee for $1,754 for damages to the house and furnishings.

Furniture was smashed, walls gouged, china broken and more than one hundred beer, whiskey, cordial and champagne glasses disappeared, according to Keegan's claim. Six doors were off their hinges, a giant jardinière broken and patched together again, the piano stool smashed, a marble dog is gone and the big toe of the statue of a young lady was broken off, says Keegan.

Missing—Two sets Haviland china, 6 oil painting, 9 bath towls, 3 table covers, 10 napkins, 13 pillow cases, 7 sheets, 38 beer glasses, 40 engraved water glasses, 26 whiskey glasses, 10 hock glasses, 5 cordial glasses, 6 crème de menthe glasses, 4 champagne glasses, 9 fancy steins, a wicker arm chair, 5 embroidered scarfs, 3 silk curtains, a Turkish rug, 5 books, a silver-plated syrup jug, a marble dog, a shade on front door.

The broken things include—A jardinière, 5 arm chairs, a mahogany chair, a large leather chair, a French plush chair, a corner lounge, a piano stool, a marble top table.

"Ma" Sunday was approached today by two reporters who climbed on the running board of the automobile in which she was seated, and asked her about the Keegan claims.

"It's false from beginning to end," Mrs. Sunday said. "It's a good thing the two dozen whiskey and thirty-eight beer glasses are gone, if they are gone, for nobody will get liquid

SUGGESTS REFORMS IN JURY SYSTEM

Excessive Exemptions Evil, Clearwater Tells Constitutional Convention.

LISTS FRAMED BY "PULL"

Many of Them Made Up in Saloons, He Says—Worst in Country Districts.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 11.—Radical reforms are likely to result from a very vehement presentation of the evils of the jury system made by Judge Alonzo J. Clearwater before the Judiciary Committee of the Constitutional Convention this afternoon. The Judge is a Republican delegate at large from Kingston.

Three years ago Judge Clearwater, who has been President of the State Bar Association, made an investigation at the instance of that body of the causes leading to the deterioration of trial jurors, and read a paper on the subject. He told the Judiciary Committee today, in an address that bristled with startling emphasis and denunciation, that political "pull" predominated in the framing of the lists of talesmen, and that in many instances jury lists were made up in the back rooms of saloons, at least in the country districts.

In his general denunciation of the present system Judge Clearwater made exception only of a very few counties in the State. He mentioned as exceptions the Counties of New York, Kings, Queens, Albany, Rensselaer, Oneida, Erie, Onondaga, and Broome; but admitted that perhaps some other counties ought to have been included in the list.

Judge Clearwater is a member of the Judiciary Committee, of which Former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham is Chairman. Louis Marshall, Henry L. Stimson, ex-Judge Adolph J. Rodenbeck, and other men prominent in the legal profession listened with apparent interest to what Judge Clearwater had to say and seemed to agree with him as to the essential need of thoroughgoing reforms.

The arraignment of the jury system was made in connection with a hearing on a proposal introduced by Jacob L. Brenner, formerly County Judge of Kings, under which the revised Constitution would vest in the Legislature the power to prescribe by what authority the Commissioner of Jurors in the counties throughout the State should be appointed.

"A great reason for the general deterioration," said Judge Clearwater, "I found lay in the excessive number of exemptions from jury duty which had been created. These exemptions include, for instance, horse doctors, embalmers, and all sorts of petty officials. Unless some restriction is placed on the Legislature with regard to its present powers, the process of exemption will go on and the list be increased until practically all persons, except those altogether destitute of political influence, will be exempted.

"I advocate a change in the Constitution under which persons engaged in business in the City of New York habitually, though residing in other counties, or even in other neighboring States, should be subject to jury duty in this State. I also believe that all present exemptions should be done away with and new exemptions be created to include only a few State and county officials, physicians, lawyers, and one or two other classes, such as firemen and policemen. I maintain that the court before which a person is summoned to do jury duty should have the sole power of determining whether a would-be juror should be excused for the time being on condition that he presents himself for jury duty when the immediate cause leading to his excuse on any particular occasion has been removed."

Mr. Brenner, who has been a Commissioner of Jurors himself, said that whenever the control of the Legislature changed from one party to another, steps to legislate the Commissioned of Jurors in this county or that out of office would follow invariably. The favorite methor was to change the appointing power.

He thought the Legislature should have power to fix once for all the method of appointing Commissioners of Jurors. He also thought lawyers alone should be eligible.

TO REMOVE SUFFRAGE DOUBT.

Referendum Amendment Introduced by Marshall—Other Proposals.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 11.—The woman suffrage question came to the front in the Constitutional Convention again today, when Louis Marshall, Republican delegate-at-large, introduced a proposal to amend the Constitution in such a manner that no doubt or confusion would remain as to the validity of the proposed amendment to give women the ballot which will be submitted to a referendum this Fall as a result of favorable action by the Legislature at two recent sessions.

Unlike a recent resolution introduced by Herbert Parsons, another Republican delegate-at-large with the same object in view, the Marshall proposal provides for the welding into the Constitution itself of a validating clause. The Parsons resolution was merely intended to place the convention on record.

"There is grave doubt whether the Constitutional Convention has the power to provide the manner in which future Constitutions shall be amended by a resolution, such as the Parsons resolution, which it was not intended to write into the Constitution itself," said Mr. Marshall. "This amendment, welded into the body of the Constitution, will remove all doubt and accomplish the end we are seeking to attain."

The proposal presented by Mr. Marshall provided also that Constitutional amendments must be submitted only at general elections, and that in order to stand approved they must have received the vote of a majority of all the electors voting for members of the Assembly. Under the present system the vot of a majority of those voting on the amendment itself is all that is required.

Another proposed amendment presented by Mr. Marshall provides that the question of whether a Constitutional Convention shall be held must be submitted at a general election, where the proposition can be ratified only oy a similar proportion of the vote.

Another amendment proposed by Mr. Marshall would give any voter the right to question the validity of a referendum by bringing a contest before the Supreme Court. The amendment provides that any judgment rendered by the lower court shall be reviewable by the Court of Appeals. In a contest last year the Court of Appeals practically decided that it had no right to go behind the election returns.

Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University and a Republican delegate at large, introduced a proposed amendment which would have the effect of making the Public Service Commissioners constitutional officers.

Meier Steinbrink, Republican delegate from Kings, presented a proposal which would prevent the shifting from the competitive to the non-competitive class in the civil service, or vice versa, a position at present in the classified service.

Edgar M. Doughty, Republican of Kings, proposed an amendment that stockholders of every corporation or joint stock company for indemnity, guarantee, liability, or casualty purposes shall be individually responsible to the extent of their holdings for any debt or liability of such a concern, just as stockholders in banking concerns are.

There were many proposals for amendment of the judiciary article. One such amendment offered by Andrew J. Ship-

after shall be adjudged unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals except with the concurrence of all but one member of the court or with the concurrence of all but two if in affirmance of a judgment of unconstitutionality by the Appellate Court.

Raymond D. Cobb, Republican, of Onondaga, proposed an amendment that appeals to the Court of Appeals may be taken only where a provision of the State or Federal Constitution is in question, or where there shall have been dissent by one or more Appellate Justices in each of the departments.

Nathan Burkan, Democrat, of New York, presented a proposed amendment prohibiting any person holding a salaried position under the State or any of its political sub-divisions from being engaged in any business or the practice of any profession.

A proposed amendment by Edward N. Smith, Republican delegate from Jefferson County, which is regarded as embodying the views of Senate Leader Elon R. Brown, prohibits the Governor from calling an extra session of the Legislature except in emergencies calling for legislative action regarding the public health, public credit, or public defenses. The proposal also provides for the submission by the Governor to the Legislature forty-five days after it has convened of an "annual budget" embodying a statement of appropriations recommended and an estimat of probable revenues. The amendment provides for an increase in the Governor's salary from $10,000 to $20,000.

An amendment proposed by Hubert C. Mindeville, Republican, of Chemung, prohibits the Legislature from enacting any laws fixing rates on the products of public service corporations while there exists a body on which that power has been conferred by law.

By an overwhelming majority the convention decided to make June 11 the date when the general introduction of proposals must cease.

MAY DISBAND 'ALIMONY CLUB.'

Arrests in Civil Cases Considered by Convention Judiciary Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—Whether the "Alimony Club," as exemplified in the case of the Ludlow Street Jail in New York, shall be continued is likely to come before the Constitutional Convention. The question was brought up today at the meeting of the Judiciary Committee in connection with two proposals to amend the Constitution looking to the abolition of arrest in civil cases.

One of these proposals, introduced by Isidor Buxbaum, a Republican delegate from Kings, provides that, except for contempt, no person shall be arrested or imprisoned in any civil action or proceeding, except upon an order of a court of competent jurisdiction in an action to recover damages for a wilful injury to person, character, or property. The other, introduced by Almet F. Latson, another Brooklyn Republican, would make contempt of court the only cause of arrest in a civil case.

Ex-Judge Alonzo T. Clearwater, Republican delegate-at-large, came strongly to the front as an advocate of the complete abolition of arrest in civil cases, except for contempt, after several members of the committee had urged that in matrimonial cases the right of arresting divorced husbands remiss in the payment of alimony imposed by the court ought to remain.

"I consider arrest in civil cases as a relic of barbarism," said Judge Clearwater. "I am inclined to regard all such arrests as imposing unjustified hardships on the poor, while the rich escape. Arrest in matrimonial cases, as often as not, is due to a vindictive feeling on the part of the former wife."

John B. Stanchfield, one of the Democratic delegates from New York City, seemed to agree with Judge Clearwater. Louis Marshall, Republican delegate at large, said: "We must think of the women who are not stirred by vindictiveness, but who are moved by consideration for the children who must be supported, though the matrimonial ties have been disrupted, and who resort to the right of arrest as the means of compelling proper support. Our first thought should be for the innocent and injured, not for the person who does the injury. In my opinion matrimonial cases should be excepted."

BRIEFS ON WIRE CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Briefs were filed today with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Postal Telegraph Company and the Grain Receiver's Association, of Chicago in relation to the commission's investigation of private wire contracts, particularly those with brokers and others than newspapers and press associations.

The brief of the postal company charges that the root of evil in the present situation is the operation by the American company of telephones over a leased telegraph circuit. It says this practice is irregular and discriminatory and amounts to free telephone service and should be abolished. Leasing telegraph circuits to brokers, the postal contends, should be prohibited, and the use of telegraph circuits should be restricted to the business of one concern at rates fixed by the commission.

The American company's brief says that it is just as impossible for a telephone or telegraph company to render service without classification, as it would be for a modern railroad to do so, and adds that leased wire contracts were made in response to public demand and that no one questions the right to make such contracts. The brief cites statements of witnesses before the commissions who said their business might be injured or wrecked, if the private wire leasing system is abolished.

The brief for the grain receivers' association asserts that private wires are available only to a few that the service is highly preferential, and that large industries, availing themselves of such wires, get a telephone service that is cheaper, quicker and better

CARRANZA WANTS A NAVY.

Gen. Pesqueira Here to Buy Two Gunboats and Transports.

General Ignacio L. Pesqueira, Secretary of War to General Carranza, announced yesterday in this city that he was in the market for warships. He has the job of getting together a navy for his chief and the nucleus of a transport service. He wants two vessels to convert into gunboats, and he requires one transport.

General Pesqueira, who is accompanied by two aids, came up from Vera Cruz with Duval West, President Wilson's special investigator in Mexico. He said he believed Mr. West had brought a highly favorable report as to conditions in Mexico under Carranza.

In Vera Cruz, according to the General, the Carranza Government has facilities for turning out shells and cartridges, besides which the Carrancistas have bought and paid for a considerable quantity in the United States for future delivery. He says that if the United States should become involved with Germany, causing a stoppage of shipments of arms to all factions in Mexico, Carranza would get rid of Villa inside of three months.

Celebration Bows to Measles.

An outbreak of measles among six children in the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless at 936 Woody Crest Avenue, the Bronx, caused a change in the plan to hold the celebration of the eighty-first anniversary of the society's foundation there today. Instead the meeting will be held in the parlors of the Madison Avenue Church at 11 o'clock. The Rev. John R. Mackay, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church, will address the meeting, and there will be reports of the work for the year.

Sues Sime Silverman for $50,000.

Charles Ahearn, whose wife, Vesta Powell Ahearn, a vaudeville performer, got a separation from him some time ago, sued Sime Silverman, publisher of Variety, a theatrical paper, in the Supreme Court yesterday for $50,000 for the alienation of Mrs. Ahearn's affections. The plaintiff says Mr. Silverman enticed Mrs. Ahearn to live with him at 26 West 63d Street and other places since May 15, 1913. The Ahearns

WHITMAN ACTS ON BILLS.

Governor Signs Measure Abolishing the Recreation Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 11.—Governor Whitman approved several measures relating to New York City's Government today, including these:

Four bills introduced by Senator Mills, giving New York City the right to acquire more land than is needed for actual construction in widening, extending or relocating parks, public places and streets; permitting condemnation of property in the Supreme Court without a jury; requiring the approval of the Board of Estimate in proceedings for the acquisition of wharf property and amending the Rapid Transit act regulating the acquisition of property for rapid transit purposes.

Assemblyman Stoddard's bill authorizing changes in uncompleted sections of a rapid transit road, after contracts have been made, with the consent of the Board of Estimate, and providing that the Sinking Fund Commissioners of New York City may assign space in the Hall of Records.

Senator Carswell's, abolishing the New York City Public Recreation Commission, and providing that the Commissioner of Parks for each borough shall have within his borough the powers of the Recreation Commission.

Assemblyman Hoff's, authorizing the Board of Estimate to create a Parole Commission of three members to be appointed by the Mayor.

Assemblyman Brennan's, providing for a clerk and a deputy clerk in each Municipal Court district, and providing that the total clerical force in each district shall be equal numerically to at least twice the number of Justices.

Four personal measures were vetoed by the Governor, including the bill amending the labor law relative to the powers of the Industrial Board, the bill exempting certain persons from the provisions of the statute relating to disorderly persons, and the bill authorizing the Board of Estimate to pay the claim of Edward A. McEvoy for services rendered to the county.

The Governor says the proposed Industrial Board amendment is of doubtful constitutionality. In the case of the McEvoy bill, he says that McEvoy's appointment in the Kings County Commission of Records office was in violation of the civil service law.

BIG OIL LAND DEAL.

New York Syndicate Buys 35,000 Acres in Louisiana.

Special to The New York Times.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 11.—The largest oil deal in point of area ever effected in Louisiana was consummated today when New York capitalists took over 35,000 acres constituting the holdings of the Commerce Oil and Gas Company, the Rogers Oil and Gas Company, and E. K. Smith and Associates. Henry L. Satterlee and G. L. Canfield are at the head of the syndicate that purchased the lands.

The price paid for the land is believed to be over a million dollars. The deal marks the assembling of the largest area of holdings by a single company in any proven field in the United States.

SURRENDERS BART DUNN.

New Jersey Will Honor Governor Whitman's Requisition.

TRENTON, N. J., May 11.—Acting Governor Edge has announced that on Friday he would honor the requisition papers issued by Governor Whitman of New York for the return to that State of Bart Dunn, a Tammany politician, now in a sanitarium in Butler, N. J., and who is wanted in Rockland County, N. Y., where he was convicted of road-building frauds.

The decision followed a hearing given this afternoon on application of Dunn's counsel for a stay in the proceedings. Dunn is said to be in a dangerous condition, and his lawyer, Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, argued that removal from the sanitarium might unbalance his mind. Counsel may make other moves to prevent Dunn's extradition.

Light and air in the Equitable Building

Obviously, the Equitable Building, by reason of its superiority in size, has more window space than any other building—but Equitable window space is better than that.

As an actual fact, the Equitable Building has more window space than any building in New York City, considered on the basis of a proportionate square foot comparison.

This means more light, more air, and more of the benefits which accrue from both.

COURT RULES OUT PRINTING RING

Decides Roosevelt Cannot Rely on That Testimony for His Justification.

LETS BOSS ALLIANCE STAY

SHEEHAN HAD NO MASTER

Belmont Reads Letter to "Dear Augie" from Roosevelt—Why Stetson Consulted Barnes.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 11.—Rapid progress was made in the Supreme Court today toward ending the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial, but only after Justice William S. Andrews had demolished much of the structure laboriously reared in the last three and a half weeks by Colonel Roosevelt and his counsel, to prove that William Barnes was in a corrupt alliance between corupt business and corrupt politics.

Justice Andrews ruled out of the record all the testimony relating to the printing situation in Albany, except that set forth in the Bayne Investigating Committee's report, and none of it will be allowed to go to the jury as showing justification of the alleged libel. It was the hardest blow the Colonel has received during the trial, and his counsel had to fall back upon the Justice's ruling that he would allow the jury to determine whether there was an improper combination between Mr. Barnes and Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, for the election of a United States Senator by the Legislature in 1911.

With the printing testimony out of the way for good, William M. Ivins, counsel for Mr. Barnes, started right in to prove that no such combination existed, and before court adjourned for the day three of his leading witnesses were examined, cross-examined and allowed to go. They were Francis Lynde Stetson, William F. Sheehan, and August Belmont. Only the testimony of Mr. Stetson and Mr. Sheehan bore upon the Senatorial election, as Mr. Belmont was called to tell about conversations he had had with Mr. Roosevelt, while the latter was President, regarding the Agnew-Hart anti-race track legislation.

Mr. Belmont's testimony was not important for the plaintiff, for he admitted that what Colonel Roosevelt had testified regarding the conversation was substantially true. He succeeded, however, in getting into the record a letter he had written to the President regarding labor and other legislation which he wanted Governor Hughes to consider, and the President's reply thereto.

Mr. Ivins sought to show by Mr. Belmont that Mr. Roosevelt was working against the anti-race track legislation, but the best he could do was to bring out that the Colonel had advised Mr. Belmont to see Mr. Barnes, and that, after the conversation at the White House, Mr. Belmont withdrew his opposition to the legislation, ceased his activities, and went to Europe, all of which Colonel Roosevelt has admitted.

The important part of Mr. Stetson's testimony showed that although he had discussed the Senatorial situation with Mr. Barnes and had gone to him with a list of compromise candidates from the independen Democratic insurgents, who were opposing the clectio nof William F. Sheehan, Mr. Barnes did not promise to use his influence in any way. The compromise candidates were Thomas Mott Osborne, Martin W. Littleton, Martin H. Glynn, Isidor Straus and John D. Kernan. The witness said that Mr. Barnes would sonsideronly Mr. Osborne and Mr. Kernan, as he objected to Mr. Glynn personally and thought that Mr. Littleton and Mr. Straus would be too closely identified with Tammany Hall.

Mr. Sheehan denied that he ever had asked any of the igislators to vote for hi mor that he had ever represented to them that he was Mr. Murphy's candidate, although he said Mr. murphy supported his candidacy at first. Mr. Sheehan also went on record as saying that ih his opinion Mr. Murphy did not dominate the Democratic Party in the State, although he admitted that Mr. Murphy had great influence, and, with the Kings County organization, was able to control the State conventions.

Sifting Out Testimony.

It was not altogether a barren day for the Colonel, for on the motions of the Barnes counsel to have portions of the testimony stricken out he won several points. The entire morning and most of the afternoon were taken up by arguments on these motions. The first one, that concerning direct nominations, was overruled by Justice Andrews, who allowed all testimony relating to it to stay in the record, but only as showing the alleged domination of Mr. Barnes in the party and not as an indication of corruption. This included the testimony of Royal W. France of the Brooklyn Young Men's Republican Club, who testified to conversations he had had with Mr. Barnes.

All the admissions contained in the stipiation regarding so-called "rottenness" in the State departments during Democratic administrations to which A. Hennessy would have testified, if the stipulation had not been accepted, were thrown out by Justice Andrews, as was the testimony of H. H. Vreeland concerning a $20,000 campaign contribution to the Republican organization. The testimony of William H. Hotchkiss regarding the waste in the printing of State insurance reports was allowed to stand, but it will be nullified under the ruling excluding all printing matters.

Colonel Roosevelt's testimony concerning conversations with L. F. Payn and Mr. Barnes on franchise tax and direct primary legislation was allowed to stand, as was the testimony of Roscoe Irwin tending to show the domination of Charles F. Murphy in the Democratic organization.

The Colonel's chief victory, however, was the ruling of Justice Andrews that testimony was competent relating to an alleged deal between Barnes and Murphy, or the heads of the Democratic and Republican organizations, to bring about the election of William F. Sheehan to the United States Senate. The Roosevelt attorneys pleaded this combination in justification, and not mitigation merely, and therefore it will go to the jury on a question of fact. The Barnes lawyers will bend every effort to show, beyond a reasonable doubt, that no such combination existed. If this cannot be done, a verdict for the plaintiff cannot be directed, and the issue will b put squarely up to the jury to determine.

Printing Testimony Threshed Out.

The argument on the printing matter took on the phase of a summing up. William H. Van Benschoten went through the testimony step by step, and recalled how anxious Mr. Barnes was to obtain printing contracts and printing business for the J. B. Lyon Company and The Albany Journal.

Once Justice Andrews interrupted the lawyer to advise that he must show these three things:

"First, that there must be evidence wherein we would justify the jury in finding that there is waste and corruption in public printing in Albany; second, that the plaintiff must have known of these conditions and profited by them, and, third, that he used his political influence to obtain these contracts."

At one point Mr. Ivins interrupted with this remark:

"We are entirely willing to admit that the plaintiff is a public printer, and being a public printer he was naturally not anxious that this State should take up the business of public printing as a monopoly. Mr. Barnes was in the printing business for the natural, normal and human purpose of getting as much as he could out of it."

At the beginning of the afternoon session, John M. Bowers, chie fof the Colonel's counsel, too ka hand in the argument, and made a vigorous plea that the printing matter be allowed to stand.

Justice Andrews insisted that although it might be shown that Mr. Barnes was connected with The Journal Company and that some of the contracts were fraudulent there was nothing to show that Mr. Barnes used his influence to get the contracts.

"You will find," replied Mr. Bowers, "that the plaintiff was getting these contracts and orders in tremendous volume at the time he was writing letters about them and I submit that the question should go to the jury for them to determine if he was getting them legitimately."

Justice Andrews finally made this ruling:

"I do not grant your motion in the form made, for it is too general, but I shall not submit to the jury as a justification of the alleged libel any evidence in regard to the printing situation in Albany."

The Colonel and his counsel plainly showed their disappointment. Mr. Bowers seemed crushed, and listened listlessly to a long argument. The Colonel was whispering in his ear. Mr. Barnes smiled broadly at his opponent's discomfiture, while Mr. Ivins swept the audience with a broad grin. It was then 3 o'clock, and Francis Lynde Stetson was called to the stand.

Tells of Senate Contest.

Mr. Stetson was asked if he recalled the Senatorial election in the Spring of 1911, and he replied in the affirmative, and said that the part he took was anti-Murphy.

"What was your attitude toward Mr. Sheehan's candidacy?"

"I was very friendly to Mr. Sheehan," replied Mr. Stetson, with a smile, "but I was opposed to his candidacy."

Mr. Stetson was asked to tell of a conversation he had with Mr. Barnes on March 28, 1911. Mr. Bowers objected, but finally Mr. Stetson was permitted to tell what happened. He said:

"Upon March 28, 1911, I called upon Mr. Barnes at his home, pursuant to an appointment I had made through Frank H. Platt, who was present. I told Mr. Barnes that I had come from a meeting of the so-called insurgents at the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt and that I was authorized to present as substitute candidates for Mr. Sheehan the names of Thomas Mott Osborne, Martin W. Littleton, Martin H. Glynn, and later Isidor Straus and John D. Kernan.

"I couldn't say that I suggested that he support any of them, but that I wanted to know what his attitude toward them would be.

"Mr. Barnes objected to Mr. Glynn for personal reasons, and said that Mr. Littleton might identify himself too closely with Tammany Hall. The same objection, he said, might lie against Mr. Straus. He said he would consider the names of Mr. Osborne and Mr. Kernan. I asked him, in case the roll was not called in alphabetical order, what Republican member would be called first. He said he couldn't recall any Republican Senator whose name began with A, and I suggested Senator Argetsinger of Rochester. Mr. Barnes then said that it was strange he had not thought of Mr. Argetsinger, as he was the one man he had any doubt about. I then went away, and I never again saw Mr. Barnes."

Mr. Ivins said he was through with the witness and Mr. Bowers on cross-examination asked him who had suggested the conference. The witness replied that he could not tell. He said he was in his New York office when some one called on the telephone and said Mr. Barnes wanted to talk with him, and he thought it was Mr. Barnes.

"Which candidate did you favor?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"I favored Mr. Shepard very strongly," was the reply.

"You testified that Mr. Barnes said that he was willing to consider Mr. Osborne and Mr. Kernan?"

"I think he expressed strong preference for Mr. Osborne," replied Mr. Stetson. "The important point was that I was to take back his rejections, not his acceptances."

Mr. Bowers asked the witness if he knew Senator O'Gorman, and that he was connected with Tammany Hall, and the witness said he did. Then Mr. Bowers asked: "Did you go to him because you believed he controlled the Republican vote?"

"Not at all. It was because Senator Brackett—"

Mr. Bowers's objection was sustained, and he then asked the witness if he had gone to see Mr. Barnes to find out what the Republicans would do in the event of his approval.

"I did not," replied the witness. "I went there to fulfill my promise to Senator Brackett, who had asked me to do so, and find out what was Mr. Barnes's attitude toward the insurgents."

Sheehan's Version of the Fight.

The witness was then excused and William F. Sheehan was called to the stand. As Mr. Stetson left the stand he went close to where Colonel Roosevelt was sitting, and the Colonel grasped him by the hand and two two held a whispered conversation. Mr. Sheehan said he was a member of the Legislature in 1884, and Mr. Ivins asked if he was Democratic leader of Buffalo in 1888.

"I was so recognized by some," he replied.

The witness said he was reasonably familiar with Democratic politics in the State since that time, and that he was Lieutenant Governor during hree years of Governor Flower's administration.

Q.—Were you a candidate for United States Senator in 1911? A.—I was.

Q.—Whose candidate were you?

Mr. Bowers strongly objected to this and the witness was not allowed to answer.

Q.—When did you announce your candidacy? A.—Some weeks after the election of 1910.

Q.—Did you personally solicit any votes from the legislators? A.—I never asked any of them to vote for me that I recollect, although I talked with them. My recollection is that I did not ask any of them to vote for me.

Q.—Did you ever ask Mr. Murphy for his assistance? A.—I talked with Mr. Murphy on the subject, but I never asked his assistance.

Q.—Did Mr. Murphy object to your candidacy on the ground that you were not a Tammany Hall man?

The Court sustained Mr. Bowers' objection and Mr. Ivins asked the witness what position Mr. Murphy had taken regarding his candidacy.

"I should say that up to the time he changed his mind he was in favor of it, said Mr. Sheehan.

Q.—As one familiar with the political history of the State, was Mr. Murphy to your knowledge dominant in Democratic politics? A.—Personally, I never recognized him as a leader in the Democratic Party in the State.

Q.—Was Mr. Stanchfield who ran for Governor in 1909 a member of Tammany Hall?

Before he could answer Mr. Bowers was on his feet with an objection. With some display of heat Mr. Ivins turned to the Court and said:

Denies Murphy's Dominance.

"I am trying to prove that Mr. Murphy was not dominant at that time of in 1911. I am trying to prove that Mr. Sheehan was an independent candidate running on his own merits and that he had i his support only the Democratic leader in New York county."

The witness was allowed to say that he did not think Mr. Stanchfield was a member of Tammany Hall.

Q.—Do you know of any record that proves or demonstrates that Mr. Murphy was dominant in the Democratic Party in the State from 1908 to 1912?

The witness said he did not consider Mr. Murphy to be dominant in the Democratic Party in the State, but this was struck out and he was allowed to answer simply, no, but he immediately added:

"In order to have no misconception here I will say that I believe Mr. Murphy had great influence in the party during that time."

Q.—Did you ever offer yourself to the members of the Legislature, or represent to them, directly or indirectly, that you were Mr. Murphy's candidate? A.—No.

Q.—Then did you ever orally or in writing, directly or indirectly, personally or by agent, discuss your candidacy with Mr. Barnes. A.—I did not.

Mr. Bowen was unable to shake Mr. Sheehan's testimony in cross-examination. Mr. Irvin then asked one more question. It was this:

Q.—Did you ever hear of any arrangement that was made by any one, directly or indirectly written or orally, with regard to any agreement or arrangement between Mr. Murphy and Mr. Barnes to further your candidacy? A.—No, Sir.

August Belmont's Testimony.

August Belmont then was called. He admitted that he had had a conversation with Mr. Roosevelt at the White House in 1908 regarding the Hart-Agnew race track legislation, but he couldn't remember the exact date. Mr. Bower s made some objections, but the witness was allowed to state the substance of the conversations.

"As well as I recall it," said Mr. Belmont. "I remember that I called to the President's attention that I had supported him in his campaign for Governor and for that reason, as well as for another one not so important, I wished that he would intercede and help if possible to give me a hearing in regard to the legislation about to be enacted that would interfere with racing. I also told him that I had been his Commissioner and had served under Governor Morton, and that he knew my views on the racing question as represented in reports to the commission. I told him that racing was an important element in improving the condition of horses, as racing was an elimination test in regard to breeders, that for military purposes racing was necessary, as ordinary horses did not answer the purpose.

Mr. Belmont as indicating his interest in the Hughes administration and in the preliminary canvass then read letters which had passed between the President and himself. Mr. Belmont's letter to the President was as follows:

(Personal and Confidential.)
New York, Sept. 29, 1908.

Dear Mr. President:

You will recall that when I saw you in Washington the conversation led to the question of radicalism, and it was agreed that that represented by Mr. Hearst was a common enemy to both of our respective parties. I therefore feel that I can properly write to you with reference to what appears to me is an important matter concerning the campaign of Mr. Hughes, for no one knows better than you where to put the finger on the correct spot.

Hearst appeals to the labor vote, and has a record with them which will insure to him the support of a substantial portion of that element. Mr. Hughes has no record of this kind at all, and I am satisfied—and all to whom I have spoken on the subject agree with me—that it is of great importance that Mr. Hughes place himself in a favorable attitude toward labor. The Republican platform refers to nothing that directly touches the labor interests locally. With reference to the eight-hour law, its indorsement of your attitude is in its way excellent, but not sufficient. The tenement house, the child labor, and the "sweatshop" laws of the State, it seems to me, are questions on which Mr. Hughes could make an excellent point at the outset of his campaign.

You will know how important these are to the welfare of the laborer, and they appeal to his wife and children. The appropriations have never been in the eyes of laboring men sufficient for the State Commission, and these laws have not been administered in a wholly satisfactory manner. It would be essentially good policy for Mr. Hughes to make some same and convincing statement on those questions, endorsing and approving the laws, and pledging his best efforts to the proper enforcement of them, and possibly, if you think wise, a demand for larger appropriations for the work. As you know, there is complaint that a sufficient number of inspectors cannot be employed for lack of funds to properly keep a watchful eye on the administration of the laws under the three headings I have mentioned.

If this subject has not already been brought to your attention, I feel that I should contribute this important point to the category of hose he demand yur serose thought.

Believe me, very sincerely yours,
[Signed] AUGUST BELMONT.

His Excellency.

As read in court the President's reply was as follows:

The White House,
Washington, D. C., Oct. 1, 1908.

Dear Augie: I thank you heartily for that letter and I shall take the liberty of showing it to Hughes himself. I shall advocate his doing just as you suggest—that is, dwell upon the tenement house, child labor, and sweat shop laws of New York State, and his intention to enforce them to the letter and assure for their enforcement sufficient appropriation of money. I do not think a more important suggestion has been made to me than this you have made.

With hearty thanks and all good wishes, believe me, faithfully yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

P. S.—I have just given Hughes the letter; he was delighted with it.
August Belmont, 23 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y.

The examination was resumed after Mr. Belmont had read the letters and Mr. Ivins asked Mr. Belmont what the President said to him at the time of the racing bill discussion.

"He told me that I should see Mr. Barnes, and I did meet him in April," said Mr. Belmont.

Colonel Roosevelt, who had been following the testimony intently, leaned over to his counsel and in a loud whisper, said:

"That's right, that's exactly what I wanted him to do."

Mr. Belmont said he also told Mr. Roosevelt that so far as he knew everything regarding the opposition to the racing legislation had been straight and proper, and that if it should prove to be otherwise he would have nothing more to do with it. As the witness left the witness stand he also went over to Colonel Roosevelt and the two shook hands and chatted. An adjournment of the court was then taken until tomorrow morning.

Colonel Roosevelt patched up his long-standing differences with Chancellor Day of Syracuse niversity tonight. The two have not been on friendly relations since the time, when the Colonel was President, the Chancellor attacked his policies in a book entitled "The Rain Coat Roosevelt."

The Chancellor lives near the home of Horace S. Wilkinson, the Bull Moose leader here, where Mr. Roosevelt has been staying since he has been in Syracuse. Tonight Chancellor Day was the guest of Mr. Wilkinson at dinner, and the Colonel and his erstwhile critic called off their feud.

TWO SCHOOLGIRLS CAUSE RIPPER SCARE

Confess to Police They Wrote Threatening Notes in Fun to Alarm Harlem Neighbors.

JERSEY MOTHERS ALARMED

While there were fewer "ripper" scares in this city because Monday, the day set in a "ripper" letter for another crime had passed without any attacks of children, the ecitement over the two murders continued to spread over neighboring communities. Reports that similar crimes had occurred caused yesterday in Hoboken, Newark, and Montclair.

Two little girls were arrested in Harlem yesterday on the charge of sending threatening letters. On Sunday Mrs. Annie Noonan of 1,417 Amsterdam Avenue, near 130th Street, found this under her door in an unstamped envelope:

Dear Madam: I am the murderer of children. I have heard where you live and that you have many children at your home. I will kill your son, Dennis Noonan, at 2:30 o'clock Monday at 130th Street, New York City. The police are a lot of boobs.

BY THE RIPPER JACK.

P. S.—If he is not down by 3:30 on Monday afternoon I will rob your house that night and take him.

On the same day Mrs. Delia McMahon of 493 West 130th Street found a letter of the same sort under her door. The two women went to the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau, where the case was placed in the hands of Acting Captain Cooper and Detectives McCarton and Butts.

Because the two notes were written in pencil in a childish hand on paper form from copybooks used in penmanship classes, the detectives went to all the schools in the neighborhood and by comparison of the handwriting decided that the letters were the work of Helen Shea, 10 years old, of 1,425 Amsterdam Avenue, and Maria Blackwell, 12 years old, of 506 West 136th Street. They were arrested and taken to the Fourth Branch, where they confessed and said that they had written the letters for fun, to scare neighbors.

Mrs. Marie Maurillo of 3,328 Webster Avenue, the Bronx, ran out with a broom handle yesterday when she heard her 13-year-old daughter, Marie, shout, "He's Jack the Ripper," and beat a man at the door into unconsciousness. He was taken to the Bronx Detective Bureau, where a crowd of several hundred gathered after the reported capture of the "ripper." The prisoner said that he was Carmine Kitty, 29 years old, a chemist. He was held to be examined by Inspector Faurot today.

Captain Duggan, of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, yesterday arrested Virgilio Jacko, 45 years old, at Broadway and Sixty-eighth Street, on the charge of annoying children. A loaded revolver and a large knife were found on him and he was locked up in the West Sixty-eighth Street Station.

Frank Fizi, who was arrested on the charge of attacking Helen Manning, 12 years old of 257 Avenue C, was placed in the line-up with several detectives at the Second Branch yesterday morning. The line-up was looked over by 8-year-old Mary Murray, of 270 First Avenue, but she was unable to pick out the man who had killed her brother Charles Murray, who was murdered in the hallway of his home a week ago Monday night. Fizi was held without bail by Magistrate Levy later.

The "ripper" scare in Montclair started in the vicinity of the Baldwin Street School. A crowd of mothers gathered in front of the school knocking at the doors which had been locked against them and demanding their children, until Principal Jackson finally dismissed the class. The women had been told that a man had annoyed school children.

A scare of the same kind was started at Public School 8, at Seventh and Adams Stret, Hoboken. Many children ran home, and in a few minutes mothers came flocking to the school. They were all reassured and the classes went on.

In Newark yesterday many parents kept their children at home and the attendance at the schools was materially lessened. Peter Labur of 77 Hayes Street was arrested because a crowd of children followed him when he asked the way to a candy store, but he was released. Joseph Blaney of 37 Clifton Avenue was arrested for annoying children. Thomas Geary, who was arrested on Monday after a scare among school children, was committed to Essex County Jail yesterday, pending a mental examination.

At the Hillside School at White Plains, N. Y., a number of Italian mothers rushed to the school, picked their children from their seats and took them home, after a "ripper" report had been circulated.

NO DELAY IN SAILINGS.

Coast Steamer Managers Say Strikers Have Been Replaced.

Following a meeting of the managers of the coastwise steamship lines yesterday afternoon at the Maritime Exchange an announcement was made that there had been no delays in steamship sailings from this port by reason of the strike among the deck officers, who ask for an increase of 25 per cent. in their pay. The managers denied the statement issued by the Neptune Association, which represents the strikers, that steamships had been sent out since May 1 in charge of incapacitated and incompetent officers.

About 100 steamships are affected by this strike, so far as the first, second and third officers are concerned. They belong to the Mallory, Clyde, Old Dominion, Southern Pacific, Ward, New York and Porto Rico, Red D, and Savannah Lines. The managers were unanimous in saying that they had never been approached by their officers, nor had the Neptune Association asked for a hearing in regard to higher wages.

Robert H. Cowan, Secretary of the Neptune Association, said last night that cargoes of onions had been held up at New Orleans and Galveston through the strike, and that twenty-five steamships, including the El Sol and Antilles of the Southern Pacific, Esperanza and Morro Castle of the Ward Line, and the Brazos of the New York and Porto Rico Line, had been delayed in sailing.

MANY PARK VANDALS FINED.

Two Hundred and Ten Offenders Appear Before Magistrates.

As a result of the crusade against persons who leave rubbish, pluck flowers and mutilate shrubs in the parks, 190 persons, including many women, appeared in answer to summonses in the Morrisania Court yesterday, and twenty appeared in the Harlem Court. In the Mirrisania Court some of the men and women charged with park ordinance violations were compelled to remain many hours, because each case was taken up separately.

William T. Hornady, Director of the Bronx Zoological Gardens, sat with Magistrate House in the Morrisania Cour. Offenders were fined from $1 to $5, and Magistrate House, commenting on their fines, said the nuisance of littering parks ought to be stopped, even if the Board of Aldermen had to amend the laws so that offenders could be imprisoned. Similar fines were imposed by Magistrate Marsh in the Harlem Court.

Paper Manufacturer a Suicide.

MANCHESTER, Conn., May 11.—Robert G. Campbell, well known in New England as a paper manufacturer and manager of the American Writing Paper mill here, committed suicide at his home in Manchester today. He had been despondent for some time because of ill-health. He was 57 years old.

BARS SUNDAY MOVIES.

Court Holds Mount Vernon Mayor Can Revoke Theatrical License.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 11.—Although the Court of Appeals handed down a decision last week sustaining the contention of the moving picture proprietors of Yonkers that they had a legal right to have shows on Sunday, and restraining the authorities from interfering with them, Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, in the Supreme Court, today filed a decision in which he denies the application of the F. F. Proctor Mount Vernon Realty Company for an injunction restraining Mayor Edwin W. Fiske from closing his Sunday shows.

Mr. Proctor owns a vaudeville and moving picture house in Mount Vernon, and he threatened to open it next Sunday. Mayor Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon, who is backed up by Church members, said that if he did he would revoke the license.

Justice Tompkins in his decision says: "The only license the plaintiff has, permitting it to give shows in the City of Mount Vernon, was issued to it by the Mayor, and not by the Common Council, and was issued with the understanding that no show was to be given on Sunday. It seems to me that in these circumstances the Mayor has power to revoke this license, if the condition respecting Sunday shows is violated."

Sued for Dishonoring Pass.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 11.—The complaint of M. L. Hoagland, a member of the Water Supply Commission, against the Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad Company was presented to the Attorney General today by Secretary of State Martin. Mr. Hoagland contends that the company refused to honor his railroad pass, for a law enacted by the last Legislature the company is liable to a fine of $1,000 for such an offense. The law also provides that the Attorney General is to proceed against the company when complaint is made.

Daffy Dills Must Change Name.

Ten young men of the Bronx who asked Supreme Court Justice John J. Brady yesterday to sanction their incorporation as the Daffy Dill Club must think of another name. Justice Brady explained that he had no objection to naming clubs after flowers, but he did think it was only fair to the flowers to have their names spelled correctly. Joseph Miksovky of 1637 Garfield Street and Thomas Lee of 403 Amsterdam Avenue were among those who wished to be incorporators.

We mean by "verified price elsewhere" that expert shoppers visiting every first-class store in New York have not found suits to compare with these at less than $18.50 and $20. You ought to look into this. Every man who wants more for his dollar gets more when he knows more about Macy methods.

For instance, these smart foreign sack suit models, right up to the minute in every respect, at $16.75.

Men's Trousers at $4.75

If you want a pair of extra trousers good enough to go with any suit you've got, see these at $4.75. Too many fine patterns and weaves to talk about. Better see them.

BOOKSELLERS TALK OF PUBLICITY VALUE

Notoriety Effective When It Sets People to Buying, Publisher Says.

REVIEWS CAN'T BE BOUGHT

The fifteenth annual convention of the American Booksellers' association drew about 140 members to New York yesterday and representatives of many publishers met with them at the Astor, and seemed interested in the suggestions made as to how the man who makes the books and the man who sells them can get together to their mutual advantage. The question of publicity, occupied a good share of attention at the afternoon session.

Mr. Metcalf of Rochester, spoke of co-operative advertising from the bookseller's point of view, and H. F. Jenkins, of Little, Brown & Co., discussed it from the view point of the publisher. Mr. Metcalf was of the opinion that the publisher ought to back up the local merchant by standing half the local advertising expense of a book, and Mr. Jenkins said the publishers were willing to back up the faith of the bookseller, if expressed in increased orders, by sharing equally the cost of advertising.

In the afternoon session, Fred Melcher, who sells books in Indianapolis, where Booth Tarkington, Meredith Nicholson and other local celebrities, give the first impetus to many best-sellers, told at some length how the booksellers out there had got the idea of making the bookshops a sort of public institution—something like the university and the public library, which everybody brags about.

The Indianapolis Spirit.

"The booksellers in Indianapolis have the highest ideals," said Mr. Melcher, "and they get their clerks together and discuss literature and the business end of it and the plots of books. The bookstore, more than any other line of business, can become a part of the community spirit. Out our way we are community-conscious, and we swear by the university and the library."

Henry P. Dowst, general manager for Small, Maynard & Co. of Boston, started the discussion on "Publicity," by telling of it as "an effective agency in book-selling." He said:

"In my humble opinion publicity is just notoriety of some kind—notoriety that causes somebody to talk about something. Publicity as an effective agency in book-selling—mark the 'effective'—is, then the kind of notoriety which makes people talk a lot about your book to the end that a certain proportion of the talkers will go and buy it. The volume of publicity that is given a book which becomes the subject of widespread discussion is something which cannot invariably be determined or controlled. You remember The Simple Life,' by Charles Wagner, which Colonel Roosevelt, during his Presidency, indorsed so heartily. The wave of demand which swept the country was not determined or controlled by the publisher of the book. He could foster it a little, but not much.

"Now suppose I were to publish a book tomorrow and get Colonel Roosevelt or President Wilson to indorse it? Would it sell as a result of such indorsement? I don't know, and you don't know: but my guess is that the value of the indorsement would depend upon its spontaneity. And my guess is that the value of President Roosevelt's indorsement of 'The Simple Life' was determined by an extraordinary combination of circumstances which does not obtain today: for you must remember that in those days Colonel Roosevelt came nearer to being the idol of the people of this country than any man of our generation ever has come or ever will come.

"Books are apparently thought by magazine and newspaper editors to occupy a higher plane than other merchandise. Attempts to commercialize book reviews have not been successful. Happily, you can't buy a favorable book review in any reputable newspaper, either for cash or as an advertising perquisite.

Book Reviews Unpurchasable

"The published who says to the newspaper advertising man, 'You roasted my book, so I shall not buy space with you,' accomplishes nothing. The advertising man laughs and goes his way. The publisher's next book will be roasted or praised according to the sweet will of the reviewer, without reference to the advertising columns.

"This is as it should be, because the newspaper whose book reviews were governed by the advertising of the publishers would mighty soon lose the confidence of its readers, and such a newspaper would be of no value either as an advertising or a literary medium.

"The newspaper which conducts a highly specialized literary department and caters to a distinctly cultured or literary clientele will necessarily number among its readers a fair proportion of really literary-minded people; and such a newspaper is worth of consideration. But the paper in which the literary department is a mere incident, a space-filler, a device to catch publishers' advertising, has little to justify its use by publishers."

L. A. Keating, the Secretary of the Association, was directed to telegraph to Charles E. Lauriat of Boston, a member of the association, resolutions expressing gratitude for the escape of his son, Charles E. Lauriat, Jr., in the Lusitania disaster, and congratulations because, according to the boston newspapers, young Mr. Lauriat had saved the lives of thirty persons.

LAW FOR SMALL CRIMINALS.

Parole Commission to Fix Length of Indeterminate Sentence.

Acting Commissioner of Correction Burdette G. Lewis issued yesterday a statement concerning the Indeterminate Sentence bill, which has been signed by Governor Whitman. He foresees that the days of the young criminal in this city are numbered. Up to the present, Mr. Lewis states, "beating the law" has been reduced to a science by this particular class of criminals. They have known exactly what loopholes exist in the law, and have been confident that, if they could not escape through one of these, there were plenty of crime capitalists who would pay them $15 a week as long as they were behind the bars.

Now, however, the case of each one of them will come before a Parole Commission, which has the experience and the machinery to secure all information about them. It will inquire into their home conditions, health, environment, training, and conduct behind the prison walls, as well as to their chance of rehabilitation. This will give the board a far better chance to deal equitably than if it was compelled to confine itself to an investigation along strict legal lines. In particular the drug traffickers will find that the State is now fully armed against them.

Mr. Lewis said Mayor Mitchel is in thorough sympathy with the law, and has discussed the crime situation with Governor Whitman. The Governor, moreover, intends to advocate the extension of this new system to hardened offenders if its operation during the first six months shows that it has been a success.

ROFRANO MAN ON TRIAL.

Political Feud Behind Giamari's Murder to be Told in Court.

The story of the Second Assembly District political feud between the adherents of ex-Sheriff Thomas F. Foley and Michael Rofrano, Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, will be told today before Justice Vernon M. Davis in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court, where Gaetano Montimagno is on trial for the murder on March 8 of Michael Giamari, a Tammany District Captain. Two other murders and many assaults have been traced directly to the political fight as a result of an investigation by the District Attorney.

Montimagno is charged with being the hired gunman who killed Giamari at Chestnut and Madison Streets. Rocco Carmivale and Frank Fennimore, members of the Rofrano faction, are charged with plotting the murder at conferences in Brooklyn. They will be tried later.

The prosecution expects to prove that men of influence were behind Montimagno, but failed to pay him after the crime. Among the witnesses will be Joseph and Antonio La Salle, convicted of the killing of James Minoti, another Tammany man. They have made confessions to District Attorney Perkins. Five jurors were selected in an hour yesterday afternoon, and the jury should be complete before noon today.

HELP POLAND—PADEREWSKI

Pianist Declares 18,000,000 of His Countrymen Are Suffering.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, who is in this city trying to organize the work of relief for Polish victims of the war, issued a formal appeal yesterday in which he said that 18,000,000 inhabitants of Poland were enduring the horrors of a struggle which had swept away every sign of civilization and laid waste an area equal in size to New York and Pennsylvania, by the destruction of 200 towns, 1,400 churches, 7,500 villages, and innumerable dwellings, with a loss to property and industry of $2,500,000,000.

"In the name of Christian charity, in the name of common humanity, I therefore, appeal to the great American people," Paderewski went on. "They have already given much to other stricken nations; they may be tired of giving; yet I am certain that there is no soul in this noble country who will condemn me for asking, even before our thirst for liberty is relieved. Some bread for the Polish women and children! Some seed for the Polish farmers!"

Frank A. Vanderlip is Honorary Treasurer of the fund and contributions to the Polish Victims' Relief Fund may be sent, care of the National City Bank.

JAMES AGAIN EXONERATED.

Grand Jury Refuses to Indict Him for Karl Bitter's Death.

Edgar K. James, driver of the automobile which fatally injured Karl Bitter, the sculptor, in front of the Metropolitan Opera House on April 9, was exonerated from blame yesterday by the General Sessions Grand Jury, to whom District Attorney Perkins presented the evidence in the case. The Grand Jury reported no indictment.

James had been exonerated by a jury before Coroner Hellenstein. The District Attorney then decided to make an independent investigation. The witnesses who appeared before the Coroner and others, including Mrs. Marie Bitter, the widow, were examined. The District Attorney also presented the results of a test of James's car to show how quickly it could be stopped while going at different speeds.

SAYS MOST JUDGES ARE AGAINST LABOR

S. S. Gregory Tells Industrial Commission That Members of Bench Become Prejudiced.

HATTERS' DECISION UNSOUND

Trial by Jury, Free Press, and Free Speech He Holds Vital—Favors the Clayton Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Stephen S. Gregory, President of the American Bar Association, before the Industrial Commission today, declared that the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Danbury Hatters' case was unsound from the standpoint of sociology. Mr. Gregory was asked to testify on labor in its relations to the law. A list of questions was furnished him by the commission in advance as an outline for his discussion of the subjects embraced in the scope of the hearing.

Mr. Gregory sketched rapidly the rights that belong to the laboring man in common with all citizens of the Republic, and cited the West Virginia and the Moyer cases, which he regarded as subject to criticism because they were in violation of constitutional rights.

All the rights that safeguard the life of the individual, including that of trial by jury, free speech, and free press, he held to be vital. He quoted the famous saying of Jere Black before the Supreme Court in the Golden Circle cases, that King Alfred was the greatest of all Kings because he secured for his subjects the right of trial by jury and of habeas corpus, and maintained those rights, although he had to hang forty-four Judges in one year in order to accomplish this result.

Reference was made to the declaration by Judge Daniel Thew Wright of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, that a man could be enjoined against committing libel, and Mr. Gregory came to the conclusion that it was bad law, and that the individual could not be deprived of the right of free speech, although he must always be answerable for what he said if an injury was done another. The right to a free press, he thought, was on more secure ground because of the power of the press which at times he admitted, was prone to go to lengths that seem to be an abuse, rather than a sane enjoyment of a right. But after all, the witness said, he was inclined to agree with Jefferson that it was better to have newspapers without government than to have Government without newspapers because of the great good they do in the protection of popular intelligence and liberty.

"Wrongs practiced at the expense of the humble," said Mr. Gregory, "are not so much noticed as those which the rich and powerful may suffer. One of the injuries often is excessive bail.

"In all these matters of right there is not much, in my judgment, that can be done by legislation. The Clayton act has afforded a remedy in many respects. As a rule, the attitude of the courts in labor questions is largely a matter of the temperament of the Judge, which is always an uncertain factor. It is to be admitted that Judges become prejudiced against labor. This is due to the excesses that are sometimes committed in strikes. Such excesses imputed to all labor men who go on strike prejudice all men, including Judges. And Judges, more than average men, are impressed by violence, and so become prejudiced against labor leaders.

"The social and legal aspect of the consequences of a denial of these rights is a serious one. When men and women feel that they have been dealt with unjustly their complaint must be looked into. If there is any denial of right that must be investigated, no matter how small or trivial the right. Governors and State officials, Sheriffs and others, are much burdened, and their task is a very heavy one at times; but the poor and the humble must be protected in their rights. State officials often have very limited appropriations and are unable to do justice in their efforts to protect the rights of all concerned in a labor controversy."

Mr. Gregory declared that if the Clayton act should be followed in the States and made effective it would be as good as anything that could be devised for the labor interests. He denounced the idea of dealing with criminal matters under equity proceedings, which should always deal with property rights. The reason why such a use of the law was objectionable was that the individual was deprived of the right of trial by jury and dealt with under contempt proceedings.

Mr. Gregory followed Joseph Kobylak, a miner of Ohio, who told of being prosecuted on numerous charges, culminating in an arrest for high treason, for which he was never tried, growing out of his participation in strikes in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

COURT HOUSE PLAN FILED.

New $10,000,000 Building Is to Have Many Special Features.

Guy Lowell filed yesterday with the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings his plan for the new County Court House, which is to be erected at an estimated cost of $10,000,000. It will be a circular building about 450 feet in diameter with four porticos projecting from it.

In the sub-basement are to be fireproof vaults for the storage of records, and the entire east section of the first floor or basement will be occupied by the County Clerk. In the west section of this floor with a separate entrance will be the naturalization office, a room where jurors can wait until they have been assigned to a particular court, an emergency hospital, a police station, a reporters' room, a barber shop, and other offices.

A large auditorium for the hearing of important cases or for meetings of the bar has been designed for the second floor with its ceiling stretching up to the third floor, and a large room has been provided where counsel may wait until their cases are called in court. The Justices will have their chambers at the top of the building, and they will have a dining room and library distinct from the large library for the use of counsel. There will be forty-two sets of chambers for the judges and fifty-four courtrooms.

YOUNG ARTISTS TO COMPETE

Contestants for Prizes Will Draw or Paint on Subject of Labor.

One hundred and forty-five young artists gathered at 630 Fifth Avenue yesterday morning and listened to C. S. Pietre announce the theme selected by John W. Alexander for the competition in painting which has been instituted by the Friends of the Young Artists. The subject is "Labor."

Conditions of the contest are that canvases will be kept within 18 by 18 inches in size; that tempera, water color, or il may be used; that the time is to be limited to twenty days, and the work to be completed and delivered at Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's gallery, 8 West Eighth Street. It is expected that more than 300 pictures will be hung. The first prize will be $200, given by E. M. Gattle; the second, $150, given by the society, and the third, $100, offered by Commodore Stuart Blackton. Besides these, there will be ten prizes of $25 each, offered by Mrs. Whitney.

$1,000,000 Y. M. C. A. HOTEL.

Nineteen-Story Chicago Structure Will Have 1,870 Rooms.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Construction of a nineteen-story $1,000,000 Y. M. C. A. hotel in this city will begin next month, it was announced today. Collection of funds began four years ago, and $635,000 is now available. The remainder, it is assumed, will be forthcoming as needed.

The hotel will have 1,870 rooms, and the lobby will seat 1,000 persons. The hotel is not meant as a permanent home, but to surround with helpful influences young men struggling to obtain their first foothold in the city.

CITY PAYS TOO MUCH FOR LAND, HE SAYS

Alderman Squiers Asserts Values Are Put Up When Town Seeks to Buy.

POINTS TO NEW COURT SITE

Application for $10,000 for Investigating Committee Is Rejected by the Board.

Asking the Aldermen yesterday to appropriate $10,000 for the work of the committee to investigate the prevailing system of condemnation proceedings, Alderman Arnon L. Squiers asserted that either the city was paying far too much for the condemnation of the land which it acquired, or real estate in the city generally was underassessed and so the city was losing in the amount of taxes it was receiving.

Mr. Squiers asserted that as soon as it was known that the city had its eye on a definite piece of property the owners immediately put up their valuation. To illustrate his point, he quoted the figures in connection with the original Court House site, for which the city paid $6,243,660. In 1910, he said, its assessed valuation was only $3,606,000; in 1911, $4,112,000; in 1912, $4,196,500, and in 1913, $5,472,000. So he argued the final award of the condemnation Commissioners for the property was 65.41 per cent. in advance of the valuation of the property in 1910.

As an example of how valuations were sometimes reduced Mr. Squiers quoted some property at Broadway and Canal Street which in 1909 had been assessed for $390,000, but in 1913 had been taxed as worth only $313,000, a decrease in four years of 22 per cent. But the worst case he cited was the property which was condemned near the ferry landing at St. George, S. I., for the site of the new Richmond County Court House. The condemnation proceedings had resulted in a valuation of $227,705. Yet the same property in 1910 had been assessed at only $86,000, in 1911 at $10,500, in 1912 at $104,500, and in 1913 at $177,500.

The Alderman contended that these figures showed that in all condemnation proceedings, the City was paying too high a price. At present, he said, there were sixteen condemnation proceedings pending, in which the property concerned had been assessed at about $9,000,000, but as experience had shown that the City was generally compelled to pay 64 per cent. above that value, it was more than likely that the amount of the sixteen awards would be $14,500,000.

Alderman Frank Dowling was not prepared to consent to grant any more money for the work of Alderman Squiers's committee. He sail it already could call on the services of Corporation Counsels costing $850,000 and $260,000 worth of Commissioners of Accounts, and he could not see if it could not accomplish its object with the aid of these two officers that $10,000 would do much to help it. Moreover, he pointed out, the Aldermen had ten stalwart sergeant-at-arms, on whom the Committee could call for the service of such papers as it wished to issue.

The request of Alderman Squires was voted down, and a further resolution requesting the Corporation Counsel and the Commissioners of Accounts to aid in the investigations of the special committee was put over until next week.

Booker T. Washington to Speak.

Dr. Booker T. Washington will address the members of the Board of Education, the members of the supervisory and teaching forces of the public schools, and the public on industrial education from the standpoint of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute at 8:30 P. M. on Friday in the Washington Irving High School. William G. Wilcox of the Board of Education, who is a Trustee of the Tuskegee Institute, will preside.

WIRELESS TEST IN MIX-UP.

Trial Message Sent from Courtroom Caused Confusion.

Greenleaf Whittier Pickard, an engineer, who is testifying as an expert for the defendant company in the trial of the suit of the Marconi Telegraph Company of America against the Atlantic Communication Company in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, was again on the stand all day yesterday. His testimony was highly technical and he illustrated it with drawings on a board set up in the courtroom. Professor Pupin of Columbia University may be called as a witness today.

The Marconi Company seeks to enjoin the Atlantic Company from the use of certain instruments at the Sayville wireless station, alleging an infringement of patent rights. A wireless outfit had been set up in the court in connection with the trial and on Monday a message was sent to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to test the workability of the apparatus. Yesterday it was reported in the courtroom that this message had caused complications at the yard. It was a paragraph taken at random from a newspaper telling of a safe robbery at Red Bank, N. J.

The message, it was said, so mystified the officials at the yard that they wired to Washington for a solution of the puzzle. At the office of the Commandant, Rear Admiral Usher, yesterday afternoon, however, it was said that the officials had not been perplexed by the message, as they had been told that a test was to be made of the apparatus in court and to expect to receive a radiogram from the Federal Building.

$64 FOR 'LEAVES OF GRASS.'

Autograph First Edition of Walt Whitman Auctioned.

A first edition of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," Brooklyn, 1855, was knocked down for $64 to Henry Malkan at the Anderson Galleries yesterday. It was Charles Warren Stoddard's copy with the insription on fly-leaf: "Chas. Warren Stoddard fr. his friend, De Witt Miller, The Orchard, New Rochelle, Sept., 1901," and a penciled note below: "Dear Charley, I congratulate you and also De Witt Miller-Francis Wilson."

Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verse," one of a limited edition of 150 copies on Japan paper, brought $8.75. A first edition of John Addington Symonds's "Wine, Woman and Song" went for $8.50. "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," signed by Oscar Wilde, went for $6.

The total was $1,533.

FLAGLER SUES EMPLOYE.

Demands Accounting from C. A. Kittle, Who Ran Cotton Mill.

Failing to get an accounting from Charles A. Kittle, an old employe, of money given to him to buy and operate a cotton mill at Versailles, Conn., and for other purposes, John H. Flagler began suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to compel him to say what he had done with the money. Henry Wollman, counsel for Mr. Flagler, said last night:

"The suit is of small consequence. Mr. Kittle was a trusted employe of Mr. Flagler, and for some years performed much important work. There is no accusation of dishonesty. Mr. Flagler asked Mr. Kittle to render an accounting, and when he failed to do so he determined to let the courts decide whether he should have an accounting or not. The amount of money involved runs into the tens of thousands, but that is a small matter to Mr. Flagler."

Mr. Wollman explained that the Mr. Kittle named in the suit was not the Mr. Kittle connected with Pell & Co., the brokers.

At Last—Doctors Have Learned How to Fight Constipation

CONSTIPATION—the indirect source of so much sickness and unhappiness—is the latest conquest of medical science.

Doctors have found a common-sense remedy in Nujol, a pure refined mineral oil.

Cathartics and laxatives give only temporary relief. Besides, they weaken the system and are dangerously habit-forming. In many cases they end by aggravating the very condition which they are meant to cure.

Mineral oil has none of these objections. Mineral oil is not a drug, but a mechanical lubricant. By facilitating the evacuation of the intestinal contents, it restores the normal activity of the bowels and gives you permanent relief from a condition which is a constant danger to your health. The longer it is used, the less it is necessary.

Nujol is a pure refined white mineral oil, equal in every respect to the Russian oil now cut off by the war, and adapted for the treatment of practically all phases of chronic constipation. Nujol is absolutely odorless and tasteless. It may be taken in any quantity without harm.

Write for "The Rational Treatment of Constipation"—an informative treatise on constipation and the mineral oil treatment. Ask for Nujol at your druggist's, or send 75c. for trial pint bottle. Address Dept. I.

GERMANS SWEEP ON IN WEST GALICIA

Russians Battling to Hold Them Till Reinforcements Arrive—Win Fight in East Region.

DRIVEN BACK IN POLAND

Forced to Give Up Strong Positions on the Nida as Result of Defeat in the South.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—The Russians are making desperate efforts to stop the Austro-German onrush in Western Galicia, and are fighting stubborn rear-guard actions in an endeavor to hold the Germanic allies until reinforcements can come up.

Despite the serious reverse they have suffered in the western part of the province, the Russian continue their attacks in Eastern Galicia and along the eastern section of the Carpathians.

At the other end of the line, in the Baltic provinces, the Russians apparently have brought up a force sufficiently strong to drive back the German raiders who were threatening Mitau. Seemingly, they are leaving the Germans in undisputed possession, for the present, of Libau.

Russian Victory Near Uzsok Pass.

PETROGRAD, May 11.—An official statement issued tonight by General Headquarters said:

In the region of Uzsok Pass the enemy made a fruitless attack on Saturday. Serried enemy columns attoacked impetuously a position held by two of our companies in a sector of the Javorina mountain chain on the slopes above Lomnitza. The enemy's losses were so heavy that heaps of bodies interfered with the fire from our trenches. Our troops, in spite of the enemy's machine-gun fire, left their trenches and swept the enemy from the whole region.

The same day, after a desperate fight, the enemy forced a Russian detachment near the Village of Zaleveki to retire to the left bank of the Dniester.

Sunday night, our vanguards having crossed the Dniester, attacked the enemy on the Chaboruki front to the mouth of the Stryi. We took 1,300 prisoners, one gun, and many machine guns.

GENEVA, via Paris, May 11.—A despatch to the Tribune says the Russians have begun a strong offensive movement at Tarnow as well as in Courland and on the Stryi, driving back the Austrian and German forces with heavy losses.

VIENNA, May 11, via London.—The following official communication was issued tonight:

In the last two days our troops have broken the Russian line near Debica, compelling strong Russian forces which had fought south of the Vistula to retreat quickly behind the lower Wisloka.

This morning the retreat of the hostile south wing in Russian Poland was announced. The enemy evacuated the strongly fortified Nida front, which had become untenable. The successes of the Austrians at Tarnow and Debica exerted influence on the Russian Poland fighting.

In Middle Galicia our forces and the German troops repelled the remainder of the Russian corps toward the San sector and Dynow and Sanok. Russian counter attacks with three divisions from Sanok westward, were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy, whom we pursued. The number of prisoners and the quantity of booty taken by us increases daily.

Strong enemy columns advancing from the wooded mountains have been repulsed near Baligrod. Our advance troops have crossed the San near Dvornk. Considerable parts of the Russian Eighth Army, fighting between the Lupkow and Uzsok passes, also are suffering defeat.

In Southeast Galicia the Russians in several sectors have begun an attack. An advance of strong forces north of the Pruth toward Czernowitz was repulsed to the frontier. We captured 620 prisoners.

North of Horodinka hostile divisions have succeeded in gatting a footing on the southern bank of the Dniester. Here the fighting continues.

BERLIN, May 11 (via London).—The following statement was issued today by the German general staff:

In the Eastern thearte yesterday the situation was unchanged. The Russians attempted to arrest the pursuit of our army under General von Mackensen on the Brzesko-Brzozowa line, on the branch of the Strodnika-Brzeznaka and at Ropozya, Northeast of Ebeca and Szernzyn on the Vistula.

Their object failed completely. By night the Russian lines were pierced in many places, especially at Brzesko and between Brzesko and Lutcka, after a desperate attack by several Russian divisions from Sanok in the direction of Besko had failed in the morning with very heavy losses for the enemy. The pursuit continues.

SEA FIGHT IN THE BALTIC.

LONDON, May 11.—A Reuter's Petrograd dispatch says a squadron of cruisers of the Russian Baltic fleet, while cruising in the Southern Baltic in the region of Windau, (a seaport in Courland,) exchanged long-distance fire with a hostile cruiser and torpedo boats.

RIDDLES GERMANY'S REPLY.

Explanation of Submarine's Onslaught Displeases Dutch Journal.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 11, (via London.)—Commenting on the German reply concerning the sinking by a German submarine on April 14 of the Netherlands steamship Katwyk, the Handelsblad says:

"This reply is only partly satisfactory. It is not sufficient that Germany should express regret and declare the torpedoing of this steamer to have been unintentional. The seriousness of the case is that this ship was sunk with great danger to the crew and without proper examination, when even a perfunctory examination would have made certain the steamer's nationality.

"In the German reply we do not find a single word saying that the commander of the German submarine had not the right to act as he did, nor that measures will be taken to render impossible the random destruction of Dutch property and the endangering of Dutch sailors."

TELLS OF CONNAUGHT PLOT.

Gagged Stranger Says Dynamiters Menaced Governor General.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 11.—A man who gave the name of Horace Dube, found bound and gagged in Rockliffe Park today, told the police that he had frustrated an attempt in the night to dynamite the Government House, residence of the Duke of Connaught.

He said he entered the park at 3 o'clock this morning and was overpowered by three men, who demanded that he show them the way to the Government House, at the same time exhibiting several sticks of dynamite, a battery and a roll of wire. When he refused, they bound and gagged him, he said.

The police do not credit his story but are investigating.

FRENCH PUSH ON IN ARRAS DRIVE

Ablain-St. Nazaire, delivered a counter-attack, which was immediately crushed.

We have also taken the offensive and gained ground in the direction of the sugar refinery at Souchez. At Carency the investment of the German position has been drawn tighter by us. We have occupied several blocks of houses in the eastern part of the village and made fifty prisoners, of whom one was an officer, and we have made progress toward the wood to the east of the village. The communications of Carency and Ablain-sur-Souchez are becoming more and more difficult for the enemy.

After a violent engagement we took possession of the cemetery at Neuville-St. Vaast, which had been very strongly organized by the Germans, and followed this with an advance to the southeast of the village, beyond which we extended our lines west and east.

In the sector of Loos-Arras, where we previously carried three lines of German trenches, fighting is now going on along the fourth lines.

Importance of the Lorette Victory.

Prisoners, whose numbers continue to increase, declare that the order was given to hold at any price the chapel and blockhouse of Notre Dame de Lorette.

On the rest of the front there is nothing of importance to report, there being merely artillery actions.

(Afternoon Report.)—In Belgium, near St. Georges, the enemy endeavored by a night attack to recapture the positions taken by us the day before yesterday. They were, however, repulsed.

To the north of Arras our progress has continued. Monday evening we took possession first of the cemetery and then of the eastern part of the village of Carency, and also of the road from Carency to Sauchez. Carency, where we took 230 more prisoners, including three officers, and captured several machine guns, is now invested by our troops on three sides and is reduced to precarious communication with the German lines.

The forces brought by the enemy from Lens and from Douai in automobiles were not successful any place in getting the advantage. Four strong counter-attacks broke down under our fire during the afternoon of Monday, at the same time suffering very heavy losses.

These attacks took place in front of Loos, at Notre Dame de Lorette, at Souchez, and at Neuville St. Vaast. At this last mentioned place we gained territory, at the same time making about 10 oprisoners. The number of officers taken by us up to yesterday evening is more than fifty.

Monday night the enemy suffered a further check. The counter-attacks to the north of Neuville St. Vaast, preceded b ya violent bombardment, were completely repulsed, and we retained all the ground gained by us, at the same time inflicting very heavy losses on our assailants. In the remainder of the front from Loos to Arras there was no counter-attack yesterday.

Town Near Dunkirk Shelled.

ollowing the bombardment of Dunkirk, reported yesterday morning, during which three shells fell, but without hurting anybody or inflicting any damage, the Germans threw eleven shells on the town of Bergues, five miles south-southeast of Dunkirk. Twelve persons were killed and eleven were wounded. Our batteries at once opened fire, and they put a stop to the shelling of the enemy, which was not resumed during the day.

On the rest of the front there has been nothing to report.

One of our aviators yesterday bombarded a hangan for dirigible balloons at Maubeuge and started a fire. An aviator of the enemy threw bombs on the railroad station at Doullens, twenty miles north of Amiens, but without doing any damage. Another aviator of the enemy, pursued between the Argonne and the Meuse by a rench airman, was compelled to come down within the German lines, where his machine took fire.

On the other hand, the Germans brought down yesterday a British aviator, and British soldiers were successful in bringing down two German airmen.

Yesterday afternoon the Germans made another attack east of Ypres, in the neighborhood of the Menin road. Although they subjected our trenches to a very heavy bombardment and made their infantry advance under cover of poisonous gas, their attack failed.

During this attack our shrapnel inflicted very heavy casualties on the enemy when they were in mass formation, literally mowing them down.

Today there have been artillery actions on the greater part of the front.

The following report, under date of May 10, was issued today at the Belgian War Office in Havre:

Several fractions of our troops succeeded in crossing the right bank of the Yser, north of Dixmude.

The enemy continued an intermittent cannonade near Ramscapelle and on our front stretching before Dixmude, and also on the outskirts of Nordichmon and Pyregael, our batteries have each time suppressed the German artillery.

Yesterday morning an English ship was driven away from Westende by our fire.

We made further progress east of Ypres and captured fire machine guns. The French continued their attack southwest of the Lorette Hills and at the villages of Ablain and Carency. All their attacks were repulsed. The number of prisoners made by us here was increased to 800.

Between Garency and Neuville the French still remain in possession of the trenches taken by them. The battle continues.

German's Success at Beny-au-Bas.

Southwest of Berry-au-Bac and in the wood south of Longville-au-Bois our troops yesterday took by storm a position of two lines of trenches situated behind each other and stretching over a width of 400 meters. We also took a number of unwounded prisoners and captured two mine-throwers, with much ammunition.

Enemy infantry attacks north of Flirey and in the forst of Le Prêtre failed with considerable losses to our opponents.

SAYS BRITISH MUST USE GAS

London Chronicle Opposes a Discussion in Parliament.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 12.—The Daily Chronicle in an editorial says:

"The Prime Minister declined the suggestion yesterday that efore our troops use gases in return for the German gases there should be a Parliamentary debate on the subject. Objections to thus using them have been voiced in several quarters within the past few days; but, while we are in entire sympathy with the objectors' motives, we venture to think that they imperfectly appreciate the facts.

"The facts, upon which private as well as published reports from the front leave no doubt, are that the use of gases has proved an extremely formidable military weapon, that if one side uses them and the other does not the latter will labor under a great—perhaps in the long run decisive—military disadvantage, and that the moral effect even upon the bravest troops of knowing that their enemy has this weapon, and they themselves are debarred from it would be such as probable no commander is prepared to answer for. There is nothing left for it but to make our own preparations for this class of warfare, and to make them as efficiently as possible with the least possible delay.

"The regret and reprobation which we must all feel for this addition to the horrors and sufferings of war is perfectly consistent with the determination that, since it has been forced on us against our will, we are not going to leave our own brave men to be the only sufferers by it.

"Nothing would be gained by a Parliamentary discussion, which would involve delay and which could not throw additional light without the disclosure of more facts than it is desirable to disclose."

GAS CASUALTY LIST.

That of May 7 Includes 12 British Officers and 3 Men.

LONDON, May 11.—For the first time since the war began the phrase "gas poisoned" appears in a casualty list. The phrase appears opposite the names of ten officers and three men.

The list is dated May 7, and was issued tonight.

AUSTRIA OFFERS MORE TO ITALY

Latest Concessions to Avoid War Still Judged Inadequate, It Is Said in Rome.

ROME, May 11.—New offers are understood to have come today from the central empires which the Rome Cabinet still finds inadequate.

The Milan Secolo asserts that Italy demanded the integrity of Serbia and Belgium as a condition of its neutrality and that this was one of the chief causes of delay in the conversations.

PARIS, May 11.—Another version of the territorial concessions Austria is said to have proposed to Italy has been printed by the Mattino of Naples and telegraphed to the Havas Agency by its Rome correspondent. According to this report, Austria is willing to cede part of the Province of Trent to Italy, together with a strip of territory in the region of the Isonzo River, which empties into the Gulf of Trieste. Trieste itself is absolutely excluded, as well as Istria and Pola.

The Italian Cabinet is said to have considered these concessions insufficient and to have made a counter proposition demanding all of Trent up to Brenner, (a mountain pass of Tyrol on the railroad line connecting Innsbruck with Bozen, and offering the shortest route between central Germany and Italy,) together with Trieste and Istria, including Pola. Italy, the Mattino asserts, will insist upon obtainng Trieste, but is ready to give Austria commercial guarantees.

Neutralist Point of View.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, May 11, (via Paris).—The opinion prevails in Rome that Italy's participation in the war is only a question of days. Along the Austrian frontier, where the correspondent of The Associated Press has been from one end of the line to the other, it is universally felt that war is a question only of hours.

Nevertheless there is still in Italy a party which hopes in the possibility of the country remaining neutral. With the idea of presenting correctly the views of this party its leader said:

"Italy so far as possible, must remain faithful to her treaty with the central empires. They allowed her to remain neutral; but not to pass to the opposite camp. In the present situation Italy would not have a sufficient motive to cast off her ancient allies if Austria would consent to cede to her territory inhabited by Italians, especially as such cession could be considered a tardy compensation for the irregular annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. These annexations by Austria-Hungary should have brought Italy corresponding territorial aggrandizement.

"The greatest obstacle is Trieste, as an accord on the remainder of the questions easily could be reached. In order to view this matter fairly, it must be borne in mind that Trieste is the only outlet of the central empires, Austria-Hungary and Germany, to the Adriatic. If Italy took Trieste by force she would be obliged constantly to defend this port against the pressure of the entire Austro-German world whose aim would be to find an opening to the Southern sea.

"How irresistible this tendency is is proved by the actions of Serbia, who is now making her third war with that object in view. Therefore if Trieste were really organized into a free city administered by her Italian citizens and protected against any possible attempt on her nationality, Italy might be satisfied to receive the remainder of Italian territory now under Austrian administration, leaving at the same time Trieste to the central empires as an Italian commercial port."

GIOLITTI MAY JOIN CABINET.

Situation Fully Explained to ex-Premier by His Successor.

ROME, May 11.—The Messaggero publishes a report that former Premier Giolitti, leader of the Neutralist party, will enter the Cabinet without portfolio.

The interview between ex-Premier Giolitti and King Victor Emmanuel yesterday was followed by a longer one between the ex-Premier and Premier Salandra.

Signor Giolitti was informed of all the negotiations that had been entered into both with the central empires and with the allied countries. This was done so as to enable him to judge the situation in its entirety and with the hope that the whole of Parliament would be unanimous in the decision which Italy is expected to make within the next few days.

Discussions among the Opposition parties have virtually ceased. Only the irreconcilable Socialists whose deputies met in the Chamber yesterday still oppose Italy's participation in the war and their attitude is believed to be guided more by a desire for consistency than because of opposition.

PARIS, May 11.—The opinion is general in Italian Parliamentary circles, says a Milan dispatch to the Petit Journal, that the Government must make known its decision in regard to entering the war not later than the last week in May, but could easily assume a decisive attitude before this extreme date.

It is being persistently rumored in Paris that Germany and Austria-Hungary are about to declare war on Italy in anticipation of such action on her part directed against themselves. This report, however, has received no confirmation of any kind.

Another rumor which made its appearance on the Bourse today was that the Italian Government had signed an agreement with the Allies—Great Britain, Rrance, and Russia—to take part in the war not later than May 26. This rumor also is without confirmation.
